AAA offers some tips on how to keep kids safe this school year:

- Slow down. Speed limits in school zones are reduced for a reason. A pedestrian struck by a vehicle traveling 25 mph is nearly two-thirds less likely to be killed compared to a pedestrian struck by a vehicle traveling just 10 mph faster.
- Eliminate distractions. Children often cross the road unexpectedly and may emerge suddenly between two parked cars. Research shows that taking your eyes off the road for just two seconds doubles your chances of crashing.
- Reverse responsibly. Every vehicle has blind spots. Check for children on the sidewalk, driveway and around your vehicle before slowly backing up. Teach your children never to play in, under or around vehicles – even those that are parked.
- Talk to your teen. Car crashes are the leading cause of death for teens in the United States, and more than one-quarter of fatal crashes involving teen drivers occur during the after school hours of 3 to 7 p.m. Parents can get information and tips to pass on to their children at www.TeenDriving.AAA.com.
- Come to a complete stop. Research shows that more than one-third of drivers roll through stop signs in school zones or neighborhoods. Always come to a complete stop, checking carefully for children on sidewalks and in crosswalks before proceeding.
- Watch for bicycles. Children on bikes are often inexperienced, unsteady and unpredictable. Slow down and allow at least three feet of passing distance between your vehicle and the bicycle. If your child rides a bicycle to school, require that they wear a properly fitted bicycle helmet on every ride.

The Importance Of PTOs

By KATHRYN HUBLEY

KATHRYN HUBLEY

As we approach the beginning of another school year, I am taking some time to review the school improvement plans. Many plans include measures to strengthen parental involvement and communication. Strong parental involvement for many schools begins with their parent teacher organization (PTO).

I remember my first PTO meeting at the Wollaston Elementary School, after enrolling my daughter Victoria in Kindergarten. Raw with the emotions of my first child's first day of school, I walked into the gymnasium where the meeting was being held. Sitting amidst all the parents, many of which I did not know but seemed to already know each other. I knew very little about what a PTO was, and I was unsure about how the organization worked. One way or another, I knew I wanted to be involved in my child's school.

The meeting began with the first order of business; one of the board positions was open, and the board was seeking volunteers to be nominated. Without much thought, and no idea what I was signing up for, I quickly raised my hand to seek the nomination. I remember stating at the meeting that I had no idea what the position entailed, but I would be happy to do it if someone explained it to me.

My first position on the PTO was recording secretary, taking minutes for the meetings. This position was a great way to start because it helped me learn a lot about the PTO, and I have never been someone who was comfortable with public speaking. I later advanced to corresponding secretary and then onto becoming President. I was still uncomfortable with public speaking, and truth be told, I struggled through the meetings. Fortunately, I had such a supportive committee, we all worked together wonderfully, it eased my nervousness. My love for what I was doing helped me through the public speaking situations – in the end it was worth it to help the kids.

In the process of contributing to the PTO, I really got to know the teachers and staff, gaining a new level of appreciation for the work they do. Through the PTO, I also got to know more of my fellow parents. I can not imagine any better way of doing so than volunteering for the parents' organization. Your child's school needs you, even if it is a small amount of time. There are so many ways to get involved, whether it is helping out at a field day, organizing the volunteers for an event, labeling the raffle table bags at a fundraiser, or counting box tops – all of it is important and makes a real difference.

Author James A. Baldwin once said, "Children have never been very good at listening to their elders, but they have never failed to imitate them." While it is important to talk with our kids about the importance of their education, when you get directly involved with their schools it sends an unmistakable message about the importance of a good education. When our kids see us actively involved in their schools, it sets an expectation of their involvement that transcends what we put into words.

My involvement in my child's school PTO eventually lead me to contribute to the Quincy Citywide Parent's Council and then to School Committee. It has been a lot of work, and I have loved every minute of it.

If you are unsure about how to contribute, I encourage you to attend the PTO meetings at your child's school and just raise your hand and get involved. Please know your child's school needs you.

Kathy Hubley is the vice chairwoman of the Quincy School Committee.

- Reusable water bottle
- Freezer ice packs
- Reusable storage containers
- Sandwich and snack bags such as Stop & Shop's Portion Control recloseable bags.

Extra Credit Packing Tips:

- Pack lunches the night before to minimize the morning rush. Getting breakfast set out helps too!
- We eat with our eyes so make sure food looks as good as it tastes by including a mix of colors, shapes, textures and flavors.
- Involve kids in the packing process. By being actively involved they can learn more about healthy eating, be more likely to eat the foods they chose and develop a sense of ownership.
- Look for sectioned or bento-style lunch boxes to help with portion control and offering a variety of foods.
- Include portion-controlled sweet stuff like chocolate kisses, chips or squares as an occasional surprise.

Nora Canavan Cycles Cross-Country For Cancer Fund

FAMILY PLAYED A strong supportive role in Nora Canavan's cross-country cycling trip to raise money for adult cancer victims. 10 "rest." The rest days were anything but: they drove in the support van and offered help to that day's group of riders. They were responsible for food, water and arranging for that night's overnight stay at a host. Most were churches but some were families. One night in Knoxville, TN they were "spoiled" – they stayed in a hotel. The rest of the nights they bunked in sleeping bags on a floor.

"We rode 85 miles most days – only was one 50 miles – and the longest was 113 miles. We'd wake up between 4:30 and 5 a.m. and it would take us about two hours to get dressed, pack our duffels and check on our bikes. We'd be out of there within two hours and we'd write a thank you note to our hosts before we left."

Then it was time to hit the road.

And overcome any challenges along the way. Many were weather related.

Like the 110-degree heat in Nevada. Typically the cyclists would stop every 20 miles for water and a snack but in the desert under a searing sun, those intervals were every 10 miles.

In Missouri, the riders ran into Tropical Storm Billy. Downpours resembling sheets of rain forced the cyclists off the road because of poor visibility.

And there were other storms.

"In Nevada, there were freak hail storms that suddenly struck without warning. Some of the hail was the size of tennis balls. It would fall pelting our helmets," Nora says.

She almost came down with hypothermia, too, while waiting more than an hour for the support van to help one of her teammates whose bike was disabled in the Rockies. The air was misty and temperatures were in the low 40's. The wait took a temporary toll on her but didn't sideline her.

There was also the wind. Strong and unrelenting.

Some summits took hours to climb.

"I really battled the wind," Nora says. "I got blown off the road a few times. The wind just took me from one side of the road to the other. My nickname was 'tumbleweed' because I got blown by the wind so hard," she says with a smile.

Fortunately for Nora, she also had some luck of the Irish on her ride.

"Our first day in Kansas, we were cycling at 25 miles per hour and there was a little divot in the road and my wheel caught it. Somehow I flung backwards through the air and landed on my back."

Just before the accident, Nora had filled up her camel-back water reservoir. That cushioned the blow, preventing a serious injury and potentially ending her ride.

"My camel-back saved me from having a severe back injury because it acted like a water bed," she said.

There were other physical challenges and barriers to overcome, too.

Like day 8 when they ascended the Appalachians on mostly a gravel road.

"I was with two girls and we spent the whole day climbing. It was all up hill. I was so scared to climb up a mountain. I called my mother I was so emotional. I didn't think I could do this.

"She told me to go as long as a I could then to stop when I couldn't go anymore. I ended up going all the way to the top. We were crying because we were so happy we had made it."

Completing her first century – 100 miles in one day – was another psychological breakthrough for Nora.

"On my training rides in Quincy I did 20 miles. We ended up on this particular day riding 108 miles."

At one point one of the cyclists had to stop and the team waited an hour for the support van to pick her up. The team soon realized time was not on their side and they really had to move it if they were to finish their ride before sundown.

"For three hours – 35 miles – we cycled as fast as we could," Nora recalls. "Everyone was crying because it hurt so bad and you want it so much. I never in my entire life – at any point in the trip – wanted something as bad as I wanted to finish that day.

"We ended up making it. I was so tired but we made it. It was the best moment on the trip for me."

There was also physical challenges of the four-legged variety. Dogs.

"If you got chased by a dog you had to ride really fast and if you were tired you wouldn't want to ride 20 miles an hour but you had to get away from the dog. That happened to us all the time," she says, adding spraying the dogs with water from their bottles was one way to stop their pursuit.

Cycling is a solitary sport. Just the rider and the bike. But Nora was never alone when she clipped her shoes and grabbed those handlebars.

Before she set out each day, Nora dedicated her ride to a loved one or in honor of a special person back home. Names of those dedications were written on the back of her legs and her thighs as constant reminders that she was riding for others.

She brought a spread list of names with her but there were times that she'd meet people along the way and was so inspired by their stories that she rode for them, too.

"They would come up to us in a parking lot and tell us 'thank you for doing this. Some told us they were finishing their chemotherapy treatments. We'd stop and listen to their stories of what they were going through and we'd explain why we were riding and it was nice to have that sharing."

Along the way the list of names grew so much that most days she dedicated her ride to more than one person. She also wrote names on her arms.

"Every time I did a dedication it was my way of giving back for those who deserved recognition. My mom told me stories about these people, too, if I didn't know them. It was beautiful to hear these stories."

There were more than 100 names dedicated but only one name showed up

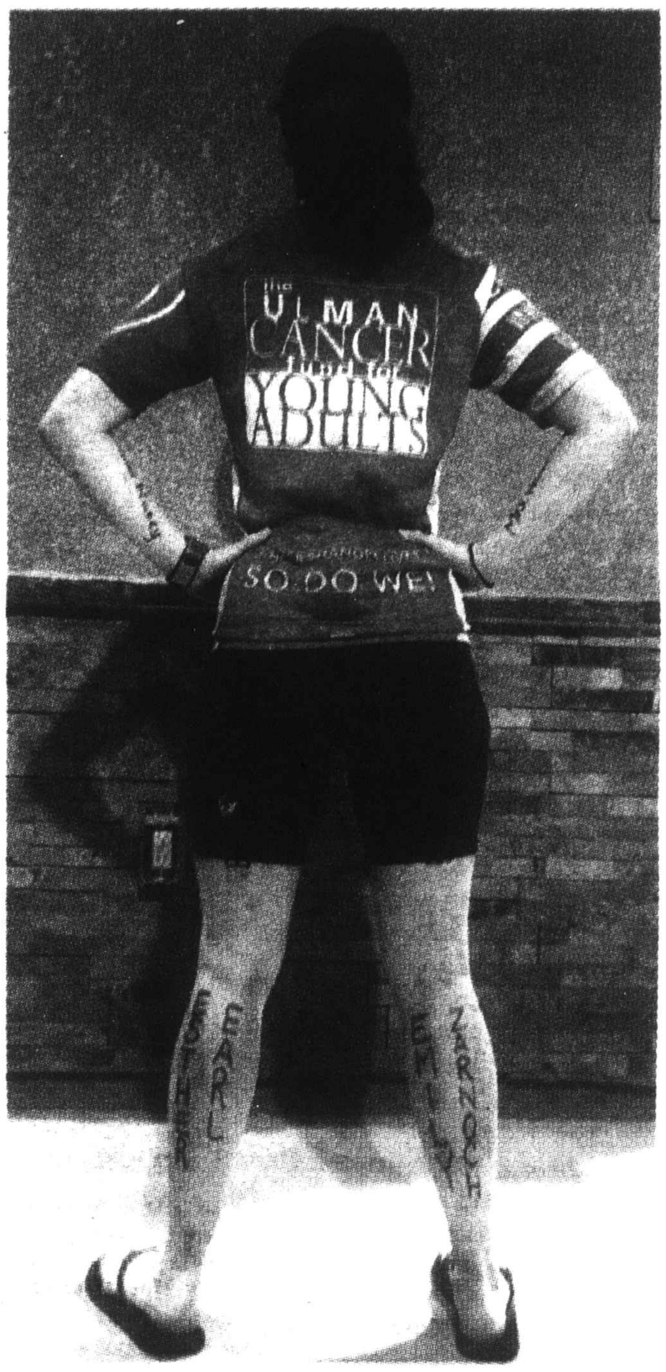
4K FOR CANCER
FAM DEIGO

NORA CANAVAN dedicated her daily ride to a loved one or special person back home in Quincy. Her first and final ride days were dedicated to the same individual: her late uncle Barry who passed away from a brain tumor when she was only 8. "He was a huge inspiration for me doing 4K for Cancer and it brought it full circle for me to end my trip with a dedication to him," Nora said. This photo was taken in Encinitas, CA. She also dedicated her last day to her other family - her team of riders. The words "Fam Deigo" are written on the back of her right leg. When they received their original jerseys, the printer misspelled Diego as "Deigo."

Photos Courtesy Nora Canavan



NORA DEDICATED other ride days in memory of other loved ones and special people including Esther Earl and Emily Zarnoch. Esther was a 16-year-old North Quincy resident who lost her battle with cancer five years ago. Nora attended high school with Esther's older sister, Angie. Nora also knew Emily Zarnoch through Raise the Curtain when she was 10 and attended North Quincy High School together. Several members of Nora's team also dedicated a riding day to Emily after the beloved Central Middle School teacher was killed in a hit-and-run accident Aug. 4. "I wanted to recognize two people who were lost far too young but managed to make a huge impact in the short time that they did have," Nora said. This photo was taken in Huntington Beach, CA.

That special honor belonged to Nora's late uncle Barry who died of cancer. The first and last day of her rides were dedicated to him.

"He was so funny when I was young. He played a huge role in my childhood. He was awesome. He was so inspirational to me I wanted to make sure I dedicated the first and last days to him.

"Overall, my ride was dedicated to him and I thought about him every day."

Nora marked her 24th birthday July 13 while riding in Utah. It was a tough ride and the highway they took had many potholes. But the state's red earth scenery and beautiful vistas of colorful canyons more than made up for the trying road conditions.

"I'll never forget Utah. It was almost everyone's favorite state. After our rides we went hiking in Arches National Park, Bryce Canyon, Zion. We did Angles Landing in Zion. The scenery was among the most beautiful I've ever seen. The people were so nice, too.

"It was some of our hardest rides but it was the most beautiful and rewarding rides because we always saw awesome things."

Despite the daily grind of churning out mile after mile, Nora says there was never a point where she thought about stopping for good.

"There were times when your bike wasn't working efficiently with all the gears as you were used to but mentally you're sitting on a bike for up to 13 hours a day – at least eight hours – and it's not comfortable to be sitting like that for that long.

"For me, when I wrote someone's name on the back of my leg, I wrote it on my thigh, too, so I always knew who I was riding for. You just had to remember that you are fighting for them. It's not just you.

"You don't want to get off your bike and let them down. There's not a single day I didn't ride. I did every mile that I possibly could have."

On the group's final day, they met at the Mission Beach sign in San Diego near the finish line. They took photos and then cycled the to the end where a hero's welcome awaited them.

"We rode only 19 miles that day because they wanted us to pull in at a reasonable hour so day 70 was our shortest day. We went to the Mission Beach sign where no one was so we could regroup as a "super group" so all 25 of us could ride.

"We rode as one giant group. We were hollering and being so excited. Cars were beeping and people shouting 'great job.'"

When they got to the beach, they dipped their front wheels in the Pacific Ocean. They did the same with their back wheels in the Atlantic leaving Baltimore Harbor.

Among the greeters was Nora's boyfriend, Cody Daniels, who held a sign made by family members reading, "Congratulations, Nora."

There was sheer joy but also profound relief. "You didn't want anyone to get hurt riding cross-country. And we had some close calls," Nora says. "We were the only team that had every member make it."

Nora says she could not have accomplished this challenge without the support of her family and friends.

"My mom posted my ride dedications everyday on Facebook. I'd log on in the afternoon or at night just to see what people had said. Some of the comments thanked me for remember-

Pros And Cons Of Probiotics

A Message From The Quincy Health Department

By RUTH JONES
BSN, RN, BC, CP-FS

RUTH JONES

Probiotics are live bacteria and yeasts that are good for your health, especially your digestive system. The root of the word probiotic comes from the Greek word pro, meaning promoting and biotic, meaning life. We usually think of bacteria as something that causes diseases. But your body is full of bacteria, both good and bad; in fact your gastrointestinal system contains over 400 bacterial species. Small amounts of these are found in your stomach and small intestine, but the majority is found in your colon. Maintaining the correct balance between the "good" bacteria and the "bad" bacteria is necessary for optimal health. Probiotics are often called "good" or "helpful" bacteria because they help keep your gut healthy. The idea is not to kill off all the bad bacteria. Our body does have a need for both the good ones and the bad ones. Problems can happen when the balance is shifted to have more bad than good.

Probiotics are naturally found in your body. You can also find them in some foods and supplements. Probiotics may seem new to the food and supplement industry, but they have been with us from our first breath. During a delivery through the birth canal, a newborn picks up bacteria from their mother. It's only been since about the mid-1990s that people have showed an interest in knowing more about probiotics and their health benefits. Health care providers often suggest them to help with digestive issues, and because of their newfound recognition, you can find them in everything from yogurt to chocolate.

Probiotics are thought to help us in two ways. The first is the role they play in our digestive tract. When you lose "good" bacteria in your body, from poor food choices, emotional stress, antibiotic overuse and other drug and environmental influences, the balance can shift in favor of the bad bacteria. Probiotics can help balance bacteria to keep your body working like it should. They can lower the amount of "bad" bacteria in your system that can cause infections or other conditions.

The second way that probiotics can help is the impact that they have on our immune system. Our immune system is our protection against germs. When it does not function properly, we can suffer from allergic reactions, autoimmune disorders and infections. By maintaining the correct balance we hope to prevent these ailments. Our immune system benefits anytime that balance is restored.

Many types of bacteria are classified as probiotics. They all have different benefits, but most come from two groups:

Lactobacillus- This may be the most common probiotic. It's the one you'll find in yogurt and other fermented foods. Lactobacillus has been used for treating and preventing a wide variety of diseases and conditions including yeast infections, urinary tract infections, irritable bowel and diarrhea, skin conditions like eczema and preventing allergies and colds.

Bifidobacterium- You can also find it in some dairy products. It is thought to help ease the symptoms of irritable bowel syndrome, help in preventing dental cavities, and improving blood lipids and glucose tolerance.

In general, probiotic foods and supplements are thought to be safe however, supplements are not monitored in the U.S. the way food or medicine is. They fall under the Dietary Supplement Health and Education Act of 1994. This requires that the manufacturer be responsible for ensuring that a dietary supplement or ingredient is safe before it is marketed. This means we can't be certain of the safety or content of these supplements that are available to us.

Mild side effects might include upset stomach, diarrhea, gas, and bloating for the first couple of days after you start them. They may also trigger allergic reactions. Ask your doctor or pharmacist for more information about probiotics, including the correct product and dosage for your specific needs.

Koch Defends Reassigning City Planning Director

appointing a planning director and that director "may be removed by the mayor with the approval of the City Council."

"Your notice to me…is clearly not within your right as mayor as it controverts Massachusetts (state) law and the terms of my 2004 appointment. I will not accept any such unlawful reassignment," Harrington wrote. "I intend to remain director of planning and community development until I vacate my position or I am removed with the approval of the Quincy City Council."

Harrington added that he would continue to work with Fatseas in his position as Koch's chief of staff and that he has "not missed one email, phone call or scheduled meeting" since his FMLA request was approved two months ago.

In a separate letter to City Clerk Joseph Shea and the City Council dated Aug. 20, Harrington requested the council hold a formal hearing relative to the reassignment on Sept. 8, the first scheduled meeting after the council's summer recess.

Harrington was not available for comment.

Councillor Doug Gutro, the chairman of the council's downtown committee and one of three candidates challenging Koch in the Sept. 24 mayoral preliminary, referred to Koch's move as an "audacious power grab" in a phone interview Aug. 20 and said it appeared retaliatory for comments Harrington made at a June council meeting that were critical of new plans for Quincy Center.

On Monday, Gutro said the city needs Harrington's voice as downtown redevelopment proceeds.

"The mayor essentially demoted the planning director, who has been an architect of the downtown from the very beginning," Gutro said at the Merrymount forum. "Dennis Harrington has stood up to me and members of the City Council, as he has the mayor. He is a truth teller in terms of what is happening downtown. We as a city need his voice in the mix."

Phelan, who is also running in this year's mayoral race, submitted a public records request on Aug. 21 for any and all communications between Koch, Harrington, City Solicitor Jim Timmins, Assistant City Solicitor Paul Hines, members of the City Council and other mayoral and City Council appointees relative to the downtown from June 1, 2012, to the present day.

"This really speaks to a bigger issue, which is a lack of transparency, accessibility, and accountability in our city government. Massive amounts of taxpayer dollars are at stake here, and as 'investors' in this project, we have a right to know what's going on," Phelan said in an Aug. 21 statement.

In a phone interview Aug. 20, City Council President Joseph Finn said he was concerned about protecting Harrington's rights and making sure the council's authority is protected.

"What I'm mostly concerned about is that Dennis Harrington's rights are protected and the authority of the City Council is protected," Finn said. "You can be sure that as the council president I will be giving it my utmost attention."

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee said the council needs to ensure the correct procedure was followed.

"We're missing some process here. The City Council has to ensure the process is being observed," he said.

McNamee suggested the matter should be placed on the agenda for the City Council once the body returns from its summer recess next month. The council should also hear from Harrington on the issue, McNamee added.

Citywide Wiffleball Champions Crowned

The Quincy Recreation Department recently held its annual Citywide Wiffleball Tournament at Bishops' tennis courts.

The wiffleball tournament is co-ed, with teams consisting of 3-5 players.

Games are three innings, with teams playing with one pitcher and two fielders, and games are umpired by park leaders.

Each district held a district tournament and the top three teams from each age group, midgets (8-10), juniors (11-12) and seniors (13-16), qualified to compete in the citywide event.

Sports Specialists Edward Grennon, Colin Ryan, and Paul Carson directed the event.

The Midget division championship saw two District 2 parks, Labreque and Heron Road, matched up for the title. It was a close game that came down to a walk off home run by Dean Schaaf that lifted Labreque to the championship.

Also playing well for Labreque was Ryan Gomez, Brandon Toomer, Mason McDonough, and Cameron Jacobs.

The runner-up Heron Road team, although they suffered a tough loss, showed great sportsmanship by congratulating their district mates on their victory. Heron Road was represented by Joseph Frye, Teddy Lynch, Jack Dunn, Owen Desmond, and TJ Manton.

The Junior Division was claimed by Perkins, who steamrolled through the competition. Matty Kelly and Devin Desmond played well throughout the tournament, and Charlie Codner hit a grand slam in the championship to secure the victory.

Campbell Tierney played great in the field and made impressive catches to retain the lead. Faxon playground was the runner-up, led by the pitching of Paul Martin and the hot bat of Luke Bertrand. Quentin Van Dam and Will Martin also played well for Faxon.

The Senior championship featured the defending champion Forbes Hill team against Labreque. They needed extra innings to decide a champion, and in the end, Forbes Hill claimed the title. Devlin St. Marie led Forbes with a dominant pitching performance, while Stephen Cobble and Declan Murphy's bats came alive in extra innings to lift Forbes to the championship. Labreque's Doug Concannon and Joe Smiddy were impressive pitching throughout the tournament, while Nick Buonopane and Jon Bousque played great in the field on the way to the title match.

Before the event, Beacon Sports donated baseball bats to the Quincy Recreation Department which were distributed to the winners of the tournament. Each player on the winning teams received a bat and a gold wiffleball trophy, with the runners-up receiving a silver wiffleball trophy. The event was a great success, as it was well attended and the youngsters displayed great sportsmanship. The Quincy Recreation Department extends its congratulations to all who participated.

VOICE FOR HEALTH
by Dr. Gabrielle Freedman
Chiropractor

WE'VE GOT MORE THAN YOUR BACK!

While chiropractic treatment is often associated with treating back problems, its benefits are hardly limited to relieving low back pain. Chiropractic care poses health advantages for virtually every part of the body because it focuses its efforts on the nervous system. When unimpeded by restrictions that limit and/or block the free flow of nerve energy, the brain sends messages through the spinal cord and every nerve in the body to regulate body tissue, organ, and system function. As a result, compromised organ function or pain felt in a remote part of the body may be caused by limited performance of the nerve that serves that particular area. It is the chiropractor's job to free nerve energy that restores proper function.

Often times, the true miracles in chiropractic are evidenced through subtle improvements in our patients - increased immune system function, reduced irritability, improved sleep, and increased mobility. At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy, we start by listening. For exceptional chiropractic care, call us at 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort.

P.S. Anyone who has experienced the pain and muscle weakness of sciatica knows that the problem rests with restriction of the sciatic nerve (which exits the spine and runs down to the buttock and leg), not with the leg itself.

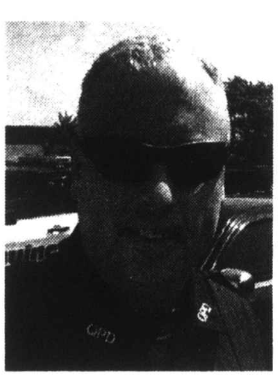
A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON



OFFICER SWEETLAND

On August 16, 2015, at approximately 5:00 p.m., Officer Robert Sweetland was on routine patrol, stopped at the red light at Fenno Street and Quincy Shore Drive. When the traffic signal changed to green, the Officer witnessed a southbound vehicle fail to stop for the red light on Quincy Shore Drive.

The Officer pulled the driver over and asked the male driver/sole occupant for his license and registration. He produced a valid Massachusetts registration but stated that he did not have a Massachusetts driver's license. He then produced a Brazilian driver's license and Brazilian passport. The information on the passport stated that his name was Jose De Oliveira, however, according to the Massachusetts Registry of Motor Vehicles data base, the vehicle was registered to Josegeraldo Oliveira.

Due to the numerous names that were being used on documents, Officer Sweetland became suspicious of this person's identity. The Officer learned from the driver that he was coming from work and had been in this country for 10 years. He also stated that he has attempted to obtain a drivers license but was not able to. He told Officer Sweetland that he was charged with driving without a license approximately one year ago in Stoughton. As the Officer tried unsuccessfully to find a criminal record of the driver's admission, Quincy Police communications confirmed that the driver did not have a valid license.

LT. DAN MINTON

Officer Sweetland then placed him under arrest and transported him to the station. During the booking process, the driver's fingerprints were taken and submitted electronically to the FBI, who determined that his true name is actually Jose Geraldo Xavier-Dos Anjos. The FBI printout also showed that he was charged in Stoughton in June of 2013 with unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle and reckless operation of a motor vehicle, but used the name Geraldo Soares. The arrest date was June 3, 2013. According to the Massachusetts Registry of Motor Vehicles data base, when he registered his vehicle, he used the name Oliveira, Josegeraldo and provided a Stoughton address. The passport and drivers license from Brazil were taken as evidence. On the citation for the motor vehicle violation, Officer Sweetland initially wrote in the name of Jose Geraldo Xavier-Dos Anjos.

A charge of misleading a police investigation was also added because the Officer believed that the driver intentionally tried to conceal his true identity from the Police.

During this entire time, the driver was very nervous and kept asking if he was being arrested. According to the FBI response, Xavier-Dos Anjos, a 31 year old Easton resident, has had a previous interaction with ICE, and has 2 charges, "Alien Inadmissibility under section 212, and Deportable Alien." Quincy Police communications was in the process of notifying ICE. Nice Work!

RECOVERED BICYCLES: the Quincy Police Department has recovered numerous bicycles throughout the city. Photos of these bikes will be posted on the Quincy Police Department's Facebook page. Be prepared to provide additional information before any bike is released. Please contact Jim McGinley in BCI at 617 745 5764 to set up an appointment.

PICKPOCKETS: come in all ages and gender and often work in teams. They often create a ruse to draw your attention away. The distraction may be a fight or they may take advantage of an outdoor performance where people are packed in close. The victim is often chosen because they are vulnerable, not a threat to the thief and because there is easy access to the purse or wallet. Cell phones are rapidly becoming a hot item too. Some recommendations to avoid being a victim:

*be aware of people coming into physical contact with you.

*skip the purse, put only what you need in your front pockets, such as money, a credit card and a license.

*cell phones in a sliding carry case can easily be removed.

*don't stand near the door of a subway car since a thief can reach in just before the door shuts and flee with your backpack, purse or cell phone.

*don't get mesmerized by your texting or cell phone use. Know who is around you and may be watching your every move!

Ask Barbara Graceffa: Secretary Of The Interior

Because I'm having difficulty climbing the stairs, I need to move my bedroom to the first floor. However, the soon-to-be former dining room is only 10x11'. One wall has a radiator and standard window, the second has a double window, the third has two columns and two pony walls leading into the living room (which does have another entrance from the hallway), and the fourth has a standard doorway to the kitchen. How can I fit my full bed, chest, and dresser with mirror in this space and add some privacy too? Elizabeth

BARBARA GRACEFFA

Without seeing a specific floor plan (which I recommend you draw out with the scale of ¼ inch on the graph paper equals 12" of furniture or room dimensions), I suspect the bureaus will fit along the wall to the kitchen since it has the fewest "obstacles". I wouldn't suggest your bed placement up against the windows, so you might try two other options. First, by hanging curtains along the entire living room wall for privacy, try putting the headboard up against the curtains. A second option, angle it in the corner between the double windows and the access to the living room. This would give you an added bonus: Whenever you position a piece of furniture on an angle, you create the illusion that the room is a little larger. You might have an empty corner in which to place a clothing rack to replace the lack of a closet. Then treat yourself to a new bedspread and enjoy your new room.

6-Story Condo Project Eyed On Granite St.

"If you use other methods, like trying to hammer using ram hoes, it would take months and people living in the neighborhood would be listening to bang, bang, bang, bang eight hours a day for months," Harrington said. "So we're not considering that."

The building would include a 29-car garage on the ground level; Harrington said the use of vehicle lifts, which would increase the garage's capacity, has been considered. An additional eight parking spaces would be available outside the building.

The floor above the garage – the first floor of the building – would include a gymnasium space. Floors two through four would include two- and three-bedroom units; the two-bedroom units would be about 900 square feet each and the three bedroom ones between 1,200 and 1,800 square feet. The top two floors would feature duplex-type units. Each unit would have three bedrooms on the fifth floor with the kitchen and living room areas in a penthouse level up above.

Jack Gillon, the traffic engineer for the developer, said the new building would generate 11 vehicle trips during the weekday morning peak hour and 12 during the weekday afternoon/evening peak hour.

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin submitted a letter to the Planning Board Chairman William Geary, saying neighbors have expressed concern over the project during community meetings and in correspondence with him.

"I wish to convey to you and members of the board my understanding of a threshold neighborhood opposition to the proposed project at 151 Granite St. that has existed from the outset," Coughlin wrote.

"Those who attended the first community meeting and who have communicated with me since have expressed to me a variety of concerns regarding traffic access and egress of Granite Street; the sufficiency or insufficiency of parking for those who would occupy the building and the guests; the inappropriateness of the building for the site itself; the implication and impacts of the ledge removal; the need for ledge and rock removal by blasting or hoe-ramming and the potential detriment to the neighborhood; the impacts of the duration of very extensive site preparation and contraction; [and] the impacts on city infrastructure, just to name a few."

No other residents spoke during the hearing Aug. 12.

Downtown Dominates 3rd Mayoral Forum

Gutro said. "You look at urban redevelopment; it does not leave some of those buildings there. There are no old, tired buildings that are held together with duct tape and Band-Aids in any of those places I talked about. If we do it building-by-building here in the city of Quincy that is the risk that we run. We have an opportunity here that is unique to get it right."

Koch, who was first elected mayor in 2007, said progress is being made in Quincy Center; Quincy Mutual's West of Chestnut project is underway, Sean and Scott Galvin's proposal to build on the site of a former Woolworth's goes before the Planning Board in September, and Peter O'Connell's plan for a residential tower will go before the City Council later this fall.

"I had to fire Street-Works in the end because they couldn't execute. We didn't whine about it. We want right to work," Koch said. "We now have four or five different developers at the table. There is steel coming out of the ground for the first time in decades in that part of the city with the Quincy Mutual project. In October, the old Woolworth's is coming down. There will be two new buildings going up on that site. There is a 15-story proposal for the Hancock Lot that is going to be going before the City Council this fall. The downtown is moving."

Koch added that new city infrastructure in Quincy Center will be paid for using new revenue generated in Quincy Center.

"The Hancock Lot is in terrible shape. The Ross Garage is in terrible shape. We need to replace those. We need to build parking structures in the downtown to create more development opportunities. As I've said from day one and I'm consistent today, those dollars needed to build those things will be paid for from new taxes in the downtown so you're not paying for it," Koch said.

"Today the downtown is a liability to each of us. All of the pipes, all the underground infrastructure, the Ross Garage, are on your dime. If we weren't promoting and bringing new development in, we wouldn't be able to do those infrastructure improvements unless you were paying for it. And you're not paying for it."

Mahoney – midway through her third four-year term on the School Committee and who unsuccessfully challenged Koch in 2011– said Koch should have questioned Street-Works' finances before the company broke ground on its Merchants Row project, which was halted after demolition and excavation took place.

"We were promised it (the Street-Works plan) was a no risk investment. It's going to happen. We're going to have a $1.8 billion downtown. Then we had to fire Street-Works. Why did we have to fire Street-Works? Because Street-Works didn't have any money. They weren't able to come up with finances to do the project," Mahoney said.

"Isn't that the first question we should have asked Street-Works before we partnered with them? But instead we waited until the hole was in the downtown for that to happen. That's a bad investment. That's not investing in the future of our city and we need to start investing in the future of our city."

Moving forward, she said the city should look to bring in new businesses to occupy existing storefronts.

"How do we fix it without asking you for more money? We have all these empty storefronts. We don't do anything about that – our idea of investing in the future is tear it down and build it up," Mahoney said. "What we can do is we can actually go out and recruit business to the city of Quincy. We have storefronts we can bring stores into. Other communities do it. I know they do it because Somerville has our stores in Somerville. We can take Somerville's stores and bring them to Quincy. It's called a garage to storefront business base and we can do that and that brings taxes back into our community."

Phelan, who was Quincy's mayor from 2002 to 2008 before being unseated by Koch, said his administration set the table for all that's gone on in Quincy Center. It was his administration, Phelan stated, that acquired land for and began construction on what would later be known as the Hannon Parkway, rezoned and established design guidelines for the downtown, and set up a District Improvement Financing district, which has been used to finance items related to the development, including acquisition of land for the Hannon Parkway.

"We rezoned the downtown. My administration streamlined the permitting process. My administration produced design guidelines that aren't being followed now that developers should have followed. It was my administration that prepared and passed the first District Improvement Finance zone in the state. It was my administration that designed that roadway that people had been trying to build forever, took all the properties and had started construction before I left," Phelan said.

"That table was set. That roadway was important because it gives value to the Hancock Parking Lot, which is a city-owned parcel, and to the Ross Garage, which is a city-owned parcel – which are two critical parcels in the future development of downtown. Mayor Koch's administration moved the [Town Brook] – did a great job doing that – provided even more value to those two parcels, which will ultimately benefit the downtown redevelopment.

"The problem is we wasted way, way, way too much time with pie in the sky dreams and we didn't have our feet set on the ground and we didn't have somebody in office saying 'wait a minute, you have to answer the tough questions. You have to tell me why this is in the city's best interest, not in my best interest politically.'"

Quincy Community Action Programs New Career Ready Course

Quincy Community Action Programs (QCAP) announces a new course designed to help individuals master the work readiness skills critical for job success.

The Career Ready 101 curriculum will include courses in career awareness and exploration, career preparation, job search, career success skills, financial awareness, and foundational work skills.

Participants who successfully complete the Career Ready 101 program will receive the ACT National Career Readiness Certificate (NCRC), a nationally portable credential that demonstrates achievement and workplace employability skills in Applied Mathematics, Reading for Information and Locating Information. Achievement in these areas suggests a student has demonstrated the essential work readiness skills that employers indicate are critical to success.

The new Certificate program is designed to benefit individuals who may not have received their high school diploma or HiSet – formerly the GED – but who have career aspirations. The goal is to expand supports and services to nontraditional students and increase access to employment and education opportunities.

QCAP is working with the South Shore Workforce Investment Board (SSWIB), Chambers of Commerce, and local partners and employers to raise awareness of the NCRC as a credential to employment.

The course begins Monday, Sept. 14 and will be broken into two sections: Applied Mathematics (Mondays and Wednesdays, 6 to 9 p.m.) and Reading for Information (Tuesdays and Thursdays, 6 to 9 p.m).

The class is self-paced, with teachers providing guidance and coaching to students to complete their lessons. The high school diploma is not a requirement to take this course.

Funding provided by the SSWIB and the Massachusetts Department of Elementary and Secondary Education (DESE).

Participants will be connected to QCAP's Greater Quincy Financial REACH Center, which provides financial education and money management, and job counseling and placement.

They will also be connected to QCAP's many other services including adult basic education, Head Start and early education and care, and housing, fuel, and food assistance.

For more information and to register in QCAP's Career Ready 101 course, contact Margaret Doherty, Educational and Career Advisor, at 617-479-8181 x 387 or mdoherty@qcap.org.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Cupid is strong in the Aries aspect this week, with the cherub opening romantic possibilities for single Lambs, and strengthening ties 'twixt loving pairs already in a caring relationship.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your dramatic flair might make things more interesting as you recount an event to your colleagues. But be careful not to exaggerate reality to the point that facts and fancy combine to form fiction.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You love to talk, and this week you should get lots of chances to share your thoughts with people who will not only pay attention to what you have to say, but will want to hear more.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) The pattern of recent changes could begin to shift from mostly workplace-related events to more personal matters. Continue to keep an open mind as you prepare to deal with them.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) An opportunity for work-related travel could be just what the Terrific Tabby needs to get a new perspective on a balky situation. The trip also could prove to be personally rewarding.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You might want to suggest resolving an old disagreement before it can affect a matter expected to come up for discussion. It's always best to start with a clean slate.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) The week favors combining dollops of creativity and practicality to work out both professional and personal problems. A longtime friend could have something of note to suggest.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Some surprising facts could come to light if you decide to probe deeper into an "opportunity" than you might usually do. What you'll learn could determine what you'll earn.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Someone close to you might seek your counsel. Hear him/her out, but hold the line at giving actual advice until you get credible answers to all your questions.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) What seems to be an overwhelming workplace project can be dealt with quite well if you handle one category at a time. Things will soon begin to fall into place.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A personal matter might need more of your time than you had expected. Try to prioritize between your many outside commitments and your domestic responsibilities.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A developing situation still needs more time to grow, and more time to study before you can plunge in and make some attention-getting waves. Patience is best for wise Pisceans.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a gift for organization that would make you a fine archivist. (Are you listening out there, Library of Congress?)

God Saw You Getting Tired

God saw you getting tired
And a cure was not to be,
So He put His arms around you
And whispered "come to Me".
A golden heart stopped beating,
Hard working hands at rest,
God broke our hearts
To prove to us
He only takes the best.

Mayoral Candidates Discuss Diversity At 2nd Forum

you're Catholic or you're Protestant, whether you're gay or lesbian, whatever the case may be – what do we want here in Quincy?

"We want a safe city; that's what we have. You want clean streets; that's what you have. You want beautiful parks; that's what you have. Outstanding schools; that's what we have. We all enjoy all of those beautiful public assets and our job is to provide all of those to all residents."

Gutro noted 352 same sex couples have married in Quincy since it became legal to do so in Massachusetts. He also said city boards and commissions would meet, and residents given a chance to participate in city government, if he were elected.

"When I'm mayor, my boards and commissions will actually meet. The mayor talked about the work that he's done on drugs. I sent out a public records request and I asked for the agendas under the open meeting law and the meeting minutes from the mayor's drug task force, and until I sent that there were none. March of this year was the first one. The disability commission has not met in several years. The human rights commission," Gutro said.

"These are people who voluntarily serve whose voice needs to be heard in the city of Quincy. When I'm mayor, folks will be given an opportunity to participate in the process and have a voice in city government."

Tim Lynch, an attorney and Squantum resident, asked the candidates what they have done to address problems facing LGBT youth. He noted one-third of teenage suicides are related to being LGBT and one-quarter of LGBT youths have tried to commit suicide, for example, and up to 40 percent of homeless individuals under the age of 24 are from the LGBT community.

Phelan said more needs to be done in the school system in terms of programs on bullying.

"I think your issue in regards to kids is important. I think it begins in the schools. We need a bullying program in our curriculum in our school department," Phelan said. "I don't believe we have one and if we have one I don't think it's being followed. So that's one specific way I would answer your question."

Mahoney stated the city needs to help people understand they have a safe place to be.

"Quincy has to come into the 21st century and realize we need to start taking control and helping people because this is nothing to be ashamed of," Mahoney said. "The problem is, is that there is still shame in the reality for people that are gay and lesbian and transgender and we need to help them realize that they do have a safe place to be."

Koch concurred that the school system plays an important role.

"The schools are so, so important. We have provided additional funding each of the last several years to our school budget. We have a very aggressive program in our schools and we a number of homeless kids we know we work closely with," Koch said. "School psychologists and all the, as Dr. DeCristofaro calls it, surround care is made available to these families and these kids."

Gutro said LGBT issues are personal for him and that a public dialogue, led by people such as Lynch, is needed in the city.

"The LGBT issues are deeply personal to me because my brother came out 15 years ago and I helped him through some of those issues. But the issues you talked about – homelessness and drug issues and some of that – these are issues that we need to bring forth as a city and we need to talk about," Gutro said. "It's all about a public dialogue."

en any thought to particular programs or initiatives they might back to address the ongoing opiate epidemic.

Verhault said she has not looked into particular programs, but has volunteered at the Germantown Neighborhood Center.

"Actually, I've done a lot of volunteer work down at the Germantown Neighborhood Center and I've been very involved with [GNC Executive Director] Kathy Quigley and I've dealt with some of the police officers that work down there – actually my son-in-law is a police officer – and I hear what's going on," Verhault said. "I haven't actually looked into programs, but I've worked with some programs through the Germantown Neighborhood Center. It's desperately needed."

Roos said the city could provide help to residents who come forward and say they have a problem as well as take steps to prevent addiction in the first place.

"I think what you can do on a city level is definitely look to, in a way, not criminalize it so if somebody with an addiction problem comes into the police station, you don't arrest them. You try and get them the treatment they need first and foremost," Roos said. "[And] as much as we can do to prevent the addiction from taking place. Continued education through schools. My Kids went through DARE camps; I would love to see that program expanded. I would love to see pharmacies have more information about where people can dispose of prescription drugs."

Cain said he has been involved in the Quincy Anti-Drug Coalition, which promotes drug awareness to students.

"Even before I decided to run for this position, I noticed there was a group that was formed called the Quincy Anti-Drug Coalition. They've had maybe two or three formal meetings that have taken place so far. Their big goal, which I've been a part of, has been drug awareness – especially at a younger level for middle school, even elementary school. It's an organization that exists. It's an organization that's out there," Cain said. "That's already an organization that's up and running and I've been a part of."

A second resident asked the candidates if they had done any volunteer work in the city.

Verhault replied that she ran Quincy Youth Baseball and Quincy Youth Hockey, the Mayor's Commission on Women and has volunteered for the Germantown Neighborhood Center for 12 years.

Roos has been running Wollaston T-Ball for 14 years and said he also volunteered to coach in other youth leagues, volunteered at his church and in scouting organizations, and gives extra when he can at his teaching job.

Cain said he volunteered at St. Ann's Church when he was growing up and in high school.

LaForest, McCone Debate Ward 1 Issues of the current zoning that is attached to Louis right now, which is that parking lot," McCone said. "If that business was to increase then we're severely limiting the amount of people that could attend that restaurant.

"We would be basically taking something off the tax rolls and footing the maintence and all that and allowing it basically to be used by Louis, because we all know that's what is going to happen."

Laforest said the purchase of the lot was first suggested during a community meeting over concerns the site could be developed into a residential building; if acquired by the city, it could be incorporated into a renovated Houghs Neck Maritime Center.

"We're looking at ways to upgrade that space so it is one of the best public access boat ramps in the state of Massachusetts. To do that we need additional land so we could potentially parlay that project," Laforest said. "The city has hired [an engineering firm] to look at what we can do within the physical landscape because to re-grade that boat ramp you have to knock down the maritime center and widen it. We need additional land… These are conversations that are community decisions, not the ward councillor's decision.

"As soon as this is ready for public input, like every other project I work on there will be a neighborhood meeting. It's your input and your decision."

The candidates were also asked for their opinion on a proposed gas pipeline and compressor station in North Weymouth on the Fore River, across the water from Germantown.

McCone said he is opposed to the project. He also said he submitted a letter to federal regulators seeking stringent requirements to protect those living nearby.

Laforest said she was concerned community meetings on the plan have been difficult for Quincy residents to attend. She will be hosting a meeting on the plan Sept. 29 at the Snug Harbor School.

ing them. Giving support and receiving support was so important.

"I couldn't have done this without the support of my family."

With the ride in the rearview mirror, Nora says she learned a lot about resiliency.

"I learned that people are resilient. Anyone can do anything that they really try to do. So may people thought they couldn't ride their bikes across the country or so many people wanted to get into the van because they were in pain but no one ever did. Everyone just pushed through the pain.

"You can make it if you keep trying and say 'I'll go a little bit further' and voila, you've finished the ride."

Everything about the ride from fundraising to the adventure surpassed her expectations.

"I didn't know you could get to know 25 people as closely as I know my teammates. I know what order they like to do things in the morning. And I know how kind people can be.

"I've volunteered a lot in my life but that doesn't always mean every person you meet is kind but there were so many strangers who met us that day and opened their hearts and their homes to us and told us their stories. People are inherently kind.

"You just have to look for the good in everything and you'll find it."

Gen. Dunford Eager 'To Tackle Challenges' As Top Military Advisor

Quincy Marine Becomes Chairman Of Joint Chiefs Of Staff Sept. 25

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Marine Corps Gen. Joseph F. Dunford, Jr. of Quincy, who will assume the rank as the nation's top military advisor later this month, says he is enthusiastic about "tackling the challenges" in perhaps the most volatile, complex security environment since World War II.

In an interview last week during his first visit back home since the U.S. Senate confirmed his nomination by President Barack Obama as the next chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff July 29, Gen. Dunford said he is humbled to become the country's highest-ranking military officer in the U.S. Armed Forces Sept. 25.

"It's not something you would have expected. It's very humbling," Gen. Dunford said before an appearance at a Vietnam veterans reunion Aug. 27 at the Boston Marriott Quincy Hotel.

During the interview Gen. Dunford also recalled fond memories of growing up in Quincy and discussed his new job responsibilities as Joint Chiefs of Staff chairman. The four-star Marine Corps general received wide-spread praise from senators and was confirmed without opposition by the Senate.

Gen. Dunford, 59, will succeed U.S. Army Gen. Martin Dempsey as the 19th

RE Agent Facing Federal Wire Fraud Charge

DANIEL FLYNN III

By SCOTT JACKSON

A prominent Quincy real estate agent and auctioneer is facing a federal wire fraud charge for allegedly defrauding investors of millions of dollars over the past eight years.

Daniel J. Flynn III, a 52-year-old Milton resident, was arrested Aug. 27 and charged in U.S. District Court in Boston with wire fraud. Flynn was freed following the court appearance. A formal arraignment is expected within the next 30 days, after he is indicted.

According to a criminal complaint filed Aug. 26 by FBI special agent Kevin McCusker – who holds a bachelor's degree in accounting and an inactive certified public accountant license – Flynn defrauded investors of millions in a real estate investment scheme that began in at least 2007.

The complaint details several aspects of the alleged scheme, including that Flynn falsified the value of his real estate investment fund by creating fraudulent promissory notes purportedly worth millions and representing to investors that they were legitimate debts that were owed to Flynn's real estate investment fund.

The complaint further states that Flynn repeatedly induced investors to loan him money to purchase specific pieces of property that, in some cases, he already owned. Those properties include 86 Greenleaf St. in Quincy, which Flynn allegedly used to obtain loans from at least three different groups of investors.

The complaint also alleges that Flynn used investors' money to pay his personal debts and to repay prior investors. In one example, the complaint says three individuals – identified as victims – wired a total of $875,000 in January 2012 to a bank account Flynn opened in the name of Opportunity Holdings LLC for the purchase of the property at 86 Greenleaf St.; the complaint says nearly all that money was wired out of the account, including two wires in the amount of $230,000 to the Roth IRA account of another individual who had loaned money to Flynn and filed a lawsuit against him for the return of that money. In a second example, the complaint states Flynn used $100,000 borrowed from another inves-

Eight Townhouses Approved For Quincy Point

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Planning Board approved a plan to construct eight townhouse units on Cleverly Court in Quincy Point, despite opposition from the neighborhood's city councillor.

The L-shaped building – located at 65 Cleverly Ct., where a two-story home will be razed, and the rear of 57 Cleverly Ct. – will stand three stories tall. The board on Aug. 12 voted 3-1 in favor of the proposal introduced by developer Michael Grehan; board member Sean Callaghan opposed the project. The project requires a variance from the Zoning Board of Appeals as well.

The first floor of each townhouse will be used for a two-car garage; and additional two guest parking spaces will be located outside the new building. Each unit's second floor will include a kitchen, living room and half-bath, with bedrooms and a full bathroom on the third floor. The two units on the corner of the building will have three bedrooms each while the remaining six units have two a piece.

Five of the units – the long part of the "L" – will stretch from the front to the back of 65 Cleverly Court, perpendicular to the street. The remaining three units – the base of the "L" – will sit about 80 feet behind 57 Cleverly Court, parallel to the road. Trees will be planted between those two houses to help screen the view.

"When you're standing on Cleverly Court looking at this house, there will be an entire line of trees here, which will partially block the view of these units back here," Christopher Harrington, an attorney representing the developer, stated.

Grehan, Harrington added, has completed three or four similar projects in Quincy.

"When he builds them, he builds them to sell so he understands it has to look nice. Buyers come and they see it and they won't want to buy it unless it looks nice," Harrington said. "He always does a good job on his projects."

Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall spoke against the project. He noted two projects are underway nearby – a 140-unit apartment building and a 12-unit building for veterans, both on East Howard Street – and two more on Cleverly Court are in the planning stage, including the potential redevelopment of the former Pizza Hut on the corner of Washington Street and Cleverly Court.

The project, Croall stated, would be better off if it were reduced to five townhouses at 65 Cleverly Ct., without the three units located in the rear of 57 Cleverly Ct.

"Essentially you're purchasing one-half of someone's backyard to build an additional three units," the councillor said. "[There is] no question at all about the developer. He's a good man who delivers a solid product, but in my opinion it works better at five [units] than eight."

Winnie Lee – the owner of 57 Cleverly Ct. who has agreed to sell a portion of the property to Grehan to build on – spoke in favor of the project at the board's meeting.

"It will certainly create a very, very positive impact on the neighborhood," she said.

In opposing the project, Callaghan said he could not agree to the idea of putting part of the proposed building behind another one.

"It's difficult for me to agree to putting that scale of a building in someone's backyard – taking half a lot and putting a 35-foot structure in it. I don't know whether I can put my head around doing that in a neighborhood like that," Callaghan said.

Planning Board member Coleman Barry supported the project, in part because no abutters chose to speak out against it.

"This corridor of East Howard to Cleverly Court to Washington Street is on the upswing. I think well thought-out projects that add to the neighborhood are something that we should be in favor of when they're done in a way that's sensitive to neighborhood issues, like parking," Barry said. "Because I don't see parking issues here and because I don't see neighborhood opposition, I'd have a very hard time voting against this project."

SONS OF THE AMERICAN Legion, Squadron 294, Morrisette Legion Post, Quincy, recently hosted a cookout for about 40 veterans from the Boston VA Hospital. No Foul Play Suspected In Death Of Man Found Near Yacht Club

By JOSEPH REARDON

Authorities do not suspect foul play after the body of a 36-year-old Westboro resident was found in shallow water near the Quincy Yacht Club Sunday morning.

The white male was identified as Shiloh Morgado of Westboro. He was wearing shorts and a shirt when the body was first noticed by a person walking near the yacht club at the end of Sea Street around 6:30 a.m. Sunday.

According to the Norfolk District Attorney's office, the death does not appear suspicious and the case is still under investigation.

The medical examiner conducted an autopsy on the body Monday to determine the cause of death.

More information on the results of the investigation and the autopsy were not available at press time Tuesday afternoon.

GOOD AS GOLD

Any of the wide range of finishes available for gold wedding bands lends textural interest and personality to each ring. For instance, a "satin" finish produces a softer shine than highly polished gold, while "matte" gold goes even further in terms of non-reflectivity in providing a soft, flat finish. Beyond these, "hammering" creates bunched indentations that produce interesting patterns and texture. "Milgraining" (which means "a thousand grains") is a detail that resembles a string of tiny beads applied as an ornamental border. "Filigree" utilizes twisted gold wire that is soldered onto a metal background to create intricate patterns, and "florentine" is a finish created by texturing the surface with a special tool. Each finish adds its own personal touch.

A sandblasted finish is a coarse finish. Sandblasted rings have a slight grainy feel and are the perfect fit for anyone interested in textured finishes. GEN. JOSEPH DUNFORD (left) of Quincy, the chairman-designate of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, returned home for the first time since his confirmation as the nation's top military advisor Aug. 27 for a Vietnam veterans reunion at the Boston Marriott Quincy Hotel. Among those attending the event was Mayor Thomas Koch (above right).

A HOST OF local veterans including George Nicholson (left) who served during the Vietnam War and is now the City of Quincy's Veterans Services director, were on hand to welcome Gen. Joseph Dunford back to Quincy last week.

Dunford Eager 'To Tackle Challenges' As Top Military Advisor

Joint Chiefs of Staff chairman. He is only the second Marine Corps general to serve as joint chiefs chairman.

Dunford served as commander of U.S. Forces in Afghanistan from February 2013 to August 2014, and previously commanded the 5th Marine Regiment during Operation Iraqi Freedom.

For the past year, Gen. Dunford has served as the 36th commandant of the U.S. Marine Corps. He will retire from that post Sept. 24 before taking over as joint chiefs chairman.

"I have a great job right now as the commandant of the Marine Corps so I am humbled to go on as the chairman (of the Joint Chiefs of Staff) and enthusiastic about tackling the challenges that we have," Dunford told The Sun.

"This is a particularly complex time in our history. It's probably the most volatile complex security environment since World War II so there's plenty of challenges out there and being a part of trying to work our way through that is certainly something to think about."

Dunford's appointment is for two years. He can be renominated by President Obama's successor for another two years and go through the Senate confirmation again in 2017. Typically, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff serves two two-year tours.

In preparation of his new duties, Gen. Dunford has been traveling throughout the world including the Middle East visiting combatant commanders. "Part of that is to begin to develop my guidance and so forth," Dunford said.

"I'll visit each of the combatant commandants – there's the U.S. Central Command in Afghanistan and Iraq. I've visited the African Command and the European Command and others in the coming weeks."

As chairman of the Joint Chiefs, Gen. Dunford said his biggest responsibility is to provide the best military advice to the President, Secretary of Defense, Homeland Security Council and National Security Council. But there are other duties as well.

"First and foremost the biggest responsibility as the senior uniformed officer is your responsibility on behalf of the Joint Chiefs of Staff is to provide the best military advice to the President. The other thing we are responsible for is the future of the Joint Force – the capabilities and the capacities of the Joint Force – so current war-fighting responsibilities, future war-fighting capabilities and professional military education. Those are probably the big three," he said.

Gen. Dunford, the son of a Marine Corps sergeant and Korean War veteran, became interested in the U.S. Marines when he enrolled at Saint Michael's College in 1973 after graduating from Boston College High School. But a career in the military had not crossed his mind.

"When I got up to Saint Michael's in September of 1973, there was a Marine recruiter at the school. There was a table laid out with Marines pamphlets and other paraphernalia. My dad had been a sergeant in the Marines and my uncles had served in the Marines during World War II.

"I walked up to the recruiter and said, 'what's this all about?'"

Dunford later took a test and joined the program. He attended officer candidates school in 1976 in between his junior and senior years in college. When he graduated in 1977, he went on active duty.

Commissioned in 1977, Dunford was promoted to captain in 1982, major in 1989, lieutenant colonel in 1994, colonel in 1999 and general in 2004. He received his third star in 2008 and his fourth in 2010.

Now in his 38th year in the Marines, Dunford says he did not anticipate a military career when he first enlisted.

"I signed up for a two-year contract when I came to the Marine Corps. The decision to stay in as a career (was influenced) by some of the Senior Enlisted Leaders that I spent some time with as a young lieutenant. They were all Vietnam veterans who had 10 to 12 years in the Marine Corps and being around them and having them take me under their wing probably influenced me to stick around in a career.

Gen. Dunford also said he felt a sense of responsibility to continue serving with the Marines when he finished up his first two years.

"I had an exchange with a couple of senior Marines that I was with at the time and I thought maybe I'll try and accept another set of orders and do a few more years still with the intention of leaving down the road and just never did.

That sense of duty to the Marines and country has never waned.

Today, Gen. Dunford has earned praise as one of the most admired officers in the nation's military. In his nomination May 5, President Obama said of Dunford: "I know Joe. I trust him. He's already proven his ability to give me his unvarnished military advice based on his experience on the ground."

Dunford moved to Quincy in 1967 with his parents Joseph Sr. and Katherine when he was 12 years old. He attended St. Ann's School here and says he has fond memories of growing up on Narragansett Road in Merrymount because of the friends and neighbors he met. He also remembers working at two local businesses, Howdy Beefburgers on Route 3A and Big Buy.

As a kid, Joseph Jr. played in Quincy Youth Hockey and baseball for the Koch Club. He also had a paper route, which was passed down to his other brothers, Paul and James.

"When I think about Quincy, I think about the neighborhood," Dunford said. "We really had some great people. It was a place with a lot of kids. No matter what time of day it is or what day of the week it was you could walk outside and find three or four kids and play street hockey or basketball or baseball.

"I had a boat in the summertime that was moored right down at the end of the street. I have great memories of being out there on the water in the summertime.

"When you're in one of those neighborhoods, you tend to stay in your neighborhood. The people I grew up with and the neighbors I have great memories."

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

- On Sept. 16, 1620, the Mayflower sails from Plymouth, England, bound for the New World. Along the way, the settlers formulated and signed the Mayflower Compact, establishing constitutional law and the rule of the majority, an important precursor to American democracy.
- On Sept. 17, 1796, George Washington prepares a final draft of his presidential farewell address, officially announcing that he will step down as the nation's first president. Rarely, if ever, in the history of Western civilization had a national leader voluntarily relinquished his title.
- On Sept. 15, 1916, during the Battle of the Somme, the British launch a major offensive against the Germans, employing tanks for the first time in history. Some of the 40 or so primitive tanks advanced more than a mile into enemy lines.
- On Sept. 20, 1946, the inaugural Cannes Film Festival opens in the resort city on the French Riviera. The outbreak of World War II had forced the cancellation of the inaugural Cannes festival in 1939.
- On Sept. 19, 1957, the United States detonates a 1.7 kiloton nuclear weapon in an underground tunnel 65 miles north of Las Vegas. The test was the first fully contained underground detonation and produced no radioactive fallout.
- On Sept. 18, 1960, Fidel Castro arrives in New York City as the head of the Cuban delegation to the United Nations. Castro's visit was climaxed by his four-hour speech, a blistering attack on American "aggression" and "imperialism." In January 1961, the U.S. severed diplomatic relations with Cuba.
- On Sept. 14, 1975, Elizabeth Ann Seton is canonized by Pope Paul VI at the Vatican in Rome, becoming the first American-born Catholic saint. In 1797, Seton founded the Society for the Relief of Poor Widows with Small Children in New York.

Scenes From Yesterday

PARISH HOUSE, HOUGH'S NECK, MASS.

THIS IS A 1920 postcard showing the Parish House of The Most Blessed Sacrament Church at 1000 Sea St. in Hough's Neck. The house had only a single gable in 1917 when it was purchased for the newly established parish. The twin gable façade shown here was created when the church doubled the size of the main portion of the house and extended the existing wrap-around Queen Anne porch across the front of it. The house suffered fire damage in 1939 but most of its original Victorian details were lost when it was later enclosed in vinyl siding. On the right of this view was a short right-of-way that led to a dock and floats on what was known then as Norteman's Pond later known as Manet Lake. For a time the Nortemans, an early Hough's Neck family that owned a large farm and the pond, operated an icehouse on its banks near today's Lakeside Avenue. Today the lake area, zoned open space, is densely overgrown with bulrush and phragmites and is unusable. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

West Nile Virus Detected In Quincy

By SCOTT JACKSON

Health officials say mosquitoes carrying West Nile virus have been detected in Quincy and are urging residents to take action to minimize their risk of exposure.

Cynthia DeCristofaro, chief sanitarian for the Quincy Health Department, on Tuesday said one mosquito pool collected by the Massachusetts Department of Public Health on Aug. 26 tested positive for the virus. So far this year, health officials have detected West Nile virus in 106 pools statewide, including 15 in Norfolk County. One human case of West Nile virus has been reported in the state, in Middlesex County.

Symptoms of West Nile virus include fever, headache, body ache, nausea, vomiting, and sometimes swollen lymph nodes. Approximately 20 percent of those infected by the virus will develop those symptoms.

In fewer than one percent of cases, West Nile virus will cause encephalitis (swelling of the brain) or meningitis (swelling of the meninges, the lining of the brain and spinal cord). That can cause stupor, tremor, paralysis, and coma. People age 50 and over are more likely to develop the more severe symptoms.

A majority of those infected with West Nile virus – approximately 80 percent – develop no symptoms.

Health officials said residents should take steps to avoid the risk of mosquito bites and to reduce the number of mosquitoes around homes and neighborhood.

Residents should minimize their outdoors time during peak period of mosquito activity (dusk and dawn); those who must remain outdoors should wear long-sleeved shirts and pants. Special care should be taken to ensure children playing outdoors are properly covered up. If a baby is brought outside, their carriage or playpen should be covered with mosquito netting.

The use of mosquito repellent products containing DEET or picaridin is also advised; oil of lemon eucalyptus may also be considered. Products containing permethrin should only be used on clothes. Repellents should not be used on children younger than two months; oil of lemon eucalyptus should not be used on children under the age of 3. When using repellents, always follow the instructions on the packaging.

Residents should also make sure all screens are tightly attached to windows and doors; all holes in screens should be properly repaired. Standing water on one's property should also be removed to prevent mosquitoes from breeding.

Open House, Games At Dorothy Quincy Homestead

The Quincy Homestead on Butler Road in Quincy has two more open houses this season, with free public tours Sept. 12 and Oct 3.

Also on those days, "Kids' Colonial Games on the Grass" will be presented from 12-2 p.m. by the Department of Conservation and Recreation (DCR), for kids and their families. They'll include "Games and Graces," popular in 19th century America and hoop-rolling races. Hoops have been a favorite toy and serious sport around the world since ancient times.

The DCR operates Quincy Homestead in collaboration with the National Society of Colonial Dames, Massachusetts.

Public tours are free, donations are welcome. There is a charge for private tours, which may be arranged by calling 617 742-3190. The authentic colonial gardens are open even when tours are not in progress.

Sometimes confused with Josiah Quincy's house, the Quincy Homestead is known locally as the Dorothy Quincy House. Built in 1686 and expanded in 1706, it's the earliest surviving home of the Quincy family, which had Adams and Hancock connections.

87 Apply For 11 Quincy College Trustee Openings

Eighty-seven candidates have applied for the 11 positions on the new Quincy College Board of Trustees.

A five-man appointing council was scheduled to select the 11 board members. The board must be in place by Sept. 1.

Mayor James Sheets' home-rule petition to establish a 13-member board of trustees as the new governing authority of the college was approved by the City Council, State Legislature and Governor William Weld earlier this year. (Editor's note: The appointing council selected 11 of the 13-member board. Two others, one a city councilor and the second, a school committee member, would be chosen by these bodies.)

KINNEY TO RETURN AS PARKING MANAGER, ANNUAL PROFIT TO THE CITY OF $185,000 SEEN

Barring unforeseen complications, Kinney Systems, Inc. of Boston will become the new manager of Quincy's parking system, a deal that could mean an estimated $185,000 annual profit for the city.

City Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon said that the city's parking operations recommendation committee voted to negotiate with Kinney, one of the three firms vying for the parking contract. The committee included Gillon, Richard Meade, David Colton and Bernice Mader.

Kinney held the five-year contract before Metropolitan Parking Systems, Inc. of Quincy, one of the two other companies that bid on the contract. The other was Fitz-Ann Auto Parts, Inc. of Boston.

Allerton House At Hancock Park Introduces New Singing Club

There's even more music in the air these days at Allerton House Assisted Living at Hancock Park, thanks to a bright idea from Bonnie Costello.

Costello, a resident of the Quincy assisted living residence since 2012, says, "We have a lot of entertainment programs here, and I noticed a lot of people singing along. So I thought, 'How about starting a singing group?'"

Costello sang in her church choir for 20 years. She brought the idea to the activities director, and the residents' signing group began meeting this summer, singing the classics like "My Wild Irish Rose," "Let Me Call You Sweetheart," and "Yankee Doodle." "Everyone is welcome," says Costello. "You just have to like to sing!"

Stadium Sports Bar Reopening As 'Iron Furnace' Sept. 8

The Stadium Sports Bar & Grill, 1495 Hancock St., Quincy Center, will reopen later this month under a new name: Iron Furnace.

The restaurant owners said they are rebranding the establishment that is temporarily closed for cosmetic improvements. The target date to reopen is Tuesday, Sept. 8 at 4 p.m.

The Iron Furnace will be a casual, American restaurant and bar that will serve a new menu of creative pub food, and include a broader selection of craft beers and cocktails. There will also be 34 high-def TV's and space to host private events.

"Iron Furnace" is a tribute to the vital role that Quincy played in American history. The John Winthrop, Jr. Iron Furnace Site on Crescent Street in Quincy, is the site of the first commercial blast iron furnace built in 1645, on land that eventually became the United States. The site was added to the National Register of historic Places in 1977.

Ownership of the restaurant and bar is not changing. Sharon Driscoll and John O'Sullivan, former owners of The Crossing Bar in Mission Hill in Boston, bought the Quincy Stadium in January of 2015 from The Mayo Group, which also owned Stadium locations in Southie and Downtown Boston.

"We're committed to contributing to the short and long-term rejuvenation of Quincy Center," Driscoll and O'Sullivan said." With summer winding down, this is an opportune time for us to spruce the place up, move on from the Stadium brand, and be ready to go before the Patriots' home opener on Sept. 10th."

Entertainment will include comedy, karaoke, sports trivia, PaintNite, DJ's on weekends, and live music about once a month. Fall shows already lined up include Louie Bello on 9/25, and Chad LaMarsh on 10/2.

Private function rooms will be available for 20-150 people, including a private bar, the John Quincy Adams Room with a projection screen for presentations, and the Vault Room for smaller groups. We're already booking christenings, birthdays, engagement parties, wedding rehearsal dinners, bridal/baby shower, reunions, fantasy football, and fundraisers for local sports teams for the fall.

Sausage, Cream Ziti Sauce

By MARIE

Now that school will be open, it's going to be such a busy time getting everyone ready and trying to prepare a meal - so today's recipe for a pasta dish is pretty simple and can be done early in the day.

By the time you have to go to pick up the kids - you'll be able to just heat it up when it's time for dinner.

SAUCE FOR ZITI

2 tablespoons olive oil
3 tablespoons butter
1 small onion (chopped)
1 pound Italian sausages (remove the skin)
1 cup heavy cream
salt and pepper
1 pound ziti
1/4 cup Parmesan cheese

Heat the butter and the oil in a skillet. Add the onion and sauté for a couple of minutes. Add the sausage and cook crumbling with a fork until lightly browned. (about 10 minutes).

Reduce heat to low and add the cream, salt and pepper. Cook until thickened. Do not boil.

If you get this part done in the morning- you just have to cook the pasta, add to the skillet and top it with the cheese.

Refrigerate the sauce if done early in the day.

Back-To-School Lunch Tips

By SUZIE

It's almost that time folks. School is almost back in session. Time to start thinking about those school lunches! Studies show over and over that children perform far better with a healthy breakfast to start the day, and healthy snacks and lunches during school. It's not about perfection, but there is always room for improvement. Some tips from me...

1) Don't stress. Go with what your children like and stick with it. Nothing is worse than seeing an uneaten lunch in the backpack. Concentrate on protein, healthy fats (VERY important for brain health and energy levels) and the good carbs (like whole grain crackers, sprouted grain breads)

2) Invest in a thermos. A good one. Even my teens loved when I packed them soups and chili. Homemade chicken soup, chili, minestrone, it's all so comforting when the weather gets cooler. Pack with some bread and butter (pasture butter) and some fruit. The kids love raw shredded cheese to put on their chili. Leftover pasta and meatballs is always a big hit as well.

3) Make your own "Lunchables" by investing in a Bento Box (available just about everywhere now). Kids love stacking their own little sandwiches. Whole grain crackers, raw sliced cheese, organic sliced meats (I like applegate farms) are always a hit. Serve with some grapes, dip made from full fat Greek yogurt with vegetables to dip with, like peppers, carrots, celery, cucumbers...etc)

4) Pizza bagels. Kids love these hot or cold! Make them the night before or in the morning. Use raw shredded cheese and it's easy to have a jar of organic pizza sauce handy for these. A salad on the side makes this lunch even better. Which gets to my next tip.

5) Salads! Believe it or not, kids LOVE salads at lunch. It's all about the dressing. Most kids love creamy ranch, so that means you buy what they like! Or make what they like. Make a ranch dressing out of full fat Greek yogurt.

I am not aware of many healthy ranch dressings on the market, that use the "good fats" but if you aren't a fan of making dressings and such, Cindy's kitchen is pretty good or Annie's organic cowgirl ranch dressing. There are many salad "kits" out there that come with a container for the veggies and separate ones for the dressing. Leftover chicken is always great to serve with the salad, or some tuna or hard boiled eggs, if they enjoy them.

6) Good old fashioned sandwiches. Leftover meatloaf, tuna, egg salad, chicken, PB and J, turkey, whatever they like. Sprouted grain breads or best but if they don't enjoy them get what they like, as long as it doesn't contain HFCS and is whole grain. A good mayo would be Sir Kennington's brand. They use healthy fats and not canola or soy oils, with minimum ingredients. Real butter is also good on sandwiches for some much needed extra fats.

7) Keep in mind that they will be starving when they come home, no matter what they eat during the day! In Ayurvedic medicine one of the things they do with children is feed them their "dinner" when they come home from school. Because they are so hungry, they will consume a healthy meal at that time, then have a lighter dinner later. I did this for my children and it worked out very well. (not every day, but at least 3 days out of the week) Of course, this is impossible for some people, but at least focus on a really healthy snack at this time, even a bowl of leftover soup with crackers and a little salad (which is easy).

Jean's Delicious Fish Chowder

By MARIE

Today's recipe is from my niece Jean and her delicious fish chowder made with scallops and cod.

She has also used this recipe for corn chowder which I will include today.

SCALLOP AND COD CHOWDER

4 large potatoes (diced)
2 small onions (chopped)
2 tablespoons butter (plus 2 more)
1/2 pound scallops (cut in pieces if they are large)
1/2 pound cod (also cut in pieces)
1 quart whole milk
1/2 cup light cream
1/8 teaspoon pepper
1/4 teaspoon parsley
1/8 teaspoon thyme

Cook the potatoes for about 15 minutes. Reserve 1/2 cup of the cooking water.

Saute the onions in 2 tablespoons of the butter. Add the milk and cream, then the potatoes and the fish, the reserved liquid, and remaining butter and the herbs.

Cook until it almost comes to a boil, but is hot. Serve with crackers or croutons.

If you want to make the corn chowder, replace the fish with 1 package of frozen corn niblets, and 2 cans of cream styled corn.

IN PURSUIT of the Girl Scout Bronze award, Katherine Malefatto, Kailey Ross and Gerelle San Jose of Quincy Girl Scout Troop 75054 organized a clean-up-the-beach event recently at Wollaston Beach. They recruited over 20 volunteers from five troops in Quincy, Randolph and Easton.

'Where In The World Is John Adams?' Adams National Historical Park Program

Michael Lepage will portray John Adams at his farm at the foot of Penn's Hill (133-141 Franklin St., Quincy) in an entertaining and informative presentation this fall.

Lepage will discuss Adams's life and composes the letters that he will forward to his "Dearest Friend" and confidant, Abigail Adams, from Philadelphia, Europe, or the nation's capital. Program dates are Mondays, Sept. 7 and 21, Oct. 12 and 26; and Saturday, Oct. 17 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Lepage offers an intimate look at the now-famous correspondence between delegate, diplomat, and future President John Adams and his "dearest friend" Abigail. Their letters provide a sometimes heartbreaking, often amusing, and always inspirational record of the events that shaped the life and times of this truly American family and the new American nation they helped to create.

Lepage is an ardent student of history and a devotee of John Adams who portrays Adams and other "founding fathers" for appreciative audiences at Adams National Historical Park and other venues throughout the commonwealth. The annual program "Where in the World is John Adams?" will be presented at Adams National Historical Park by Mr. Lepage "when John Adams is in town."

Adams National Historical Park includes the birthplaces of Second and Sixth United States Presidents John Adams and John Quincy Adams and the "Old House" at "Peace field," home to both Presidents and four generations of their distinguished family.

Louisiana Coach Grateful 10 Years After Katrina

Outpouring Of City Support In Wake Of Devastating Hurricane

By SCOTT JACKSON

When Jefferson Parish, La., leftfielder Tyler Johns caught the final out of the 2005 Babe Ruth World Series, it marked the end of busy summer for the team of 14-year-olds, who played in state and regional tournaments before advancing to the world series, which was held at Adams Field in Quincy.

Johns was mobbed by his teammates and coaches on the field as they celebrated the 5-1 win over Nash County, N.C., on Aug. 27, 2005.

"You're seeing these guys every day for two-a-days, and through the state and regional tournaments. We really grew close as a unit," Tommy Moran, the coach of the Jefferson Parish team, recently recalled in a phone interview. "It was an exciting moment – the culmination of a great summer. It was a nice finishing touch."

"But in the back of your mind," he added. "You knew the storm was coming."

That storm was Hurricane Katrina and two days after the Babe Ruth World Series ended – on Aug. 29, 2005 – it made landfall on the Louisiana coast. Ten years later, Moran is grateful for the outpouring of support his team and his parish received from Quincy and its residents in the aftermath of the costliest disaster in U.S. history.

That September, a fundraiser at the Quincy Sons of Italy raised $16,000 for the team. Part of that total was given to each player's family and a portion of it was used to rebuild the team's batting cage and replace other equipment damaged by the storm.

Then-Mayor William Phelan and local business leaders launched a separate fundraising effort, dubbed Quincy Cares, to raise money for relief efforts across Jefferson Parish. The Quincy Cares campaign raised more than $550,000.

"While we were trying to piece our lives back together, the people of Quincy went to work on our behalf. People like Dick and Connie Lombardi (Quincy's Babe Ruth coach), Ed Duff (the head umpire), Mayor Phelan, the Sons of Italy, and so many more organized fundraisers for our families and called to check on our well-being. The grade school students of St. Ann's Catholic School wrote letters to our families – the acts of kindness were unending," Moran wrote in a recent open letter to the city.

"Our players, coaches, and families remain close to this day – a bond only enhanced by the roads and paths we have travelled since our time in Quincy. On behalf of our team – players, coaches, family members – and all of Jefferson Parish, we would like to thank the people of Quincy for always caring. The spirit of the people of Quincy is rooted in faith, resiliency, and generosity – it is a spirit we share. May God continue to bless the people of Quincy, MA – we are forever grateful."

The 2005 Babe Ruth World Series was the second trip Moran and his coaching staff made to Quincy; his 2003 Jefferson Parish squad also advanced to that year's championship, which the city hosted at Adams Field. During that 2003 trip, Moran

How Safe Are Your Personal Care Products?

A Message From The Quincy Health Department

By RUTH JONES
BSN, RN, BC, CP-FS

RUTH JONES

When choosing shampoos, lotions, and other personal products for you and your family, it's not an easy task. That's because although there's been enormous attention about chemicals like phthalates, parabens, and formaldehyde found in many personal care products, it's not clear what the risks are, if any.

While some manufacturers are voluntarily removing a handful of contentious substances from their products, you'll still find a number of chemicals in everything from moisturizer to makeup. American teens and adolescents, who tend to like to experiment with new personal care products, may be getting more chemical exposure than American women. In a 2008 study by the Environmental Working Group, 20 teenage girls used 17 products a day, five more than the average U.S. woman. The study found 16 chemicals with potentially harmful health effects in blood and urine samples of the girls, aged 14 to 19.

Many parents presume that ingredients in personal care products are safe or they wouldn't be allowed to be used. But that's not necessarily true. Premarket safety testing is not something that's necessarily done for cosmetics or personal care products. The lack of information on the health and safety of the chemicals that end up in our everyday products is alarming.

Let's examine three of the more common controversial chemicals and the science behind whether they could be harmful to you and your family.

Phthalates: Phthalates work as softeners in personal care products such as cosmetics and shampoo, as well as flexible plastics like children's toys. Several studies in both animals and humans, have found that phthalates might have some effects on hormones. One study showed that 1-year-old boys of mothers in the high-phthalates group showed signs of diminished production of testosterone, the male sex hormone. While experts agree that more research is needed to determine whether phthalate exposure affects male fertility, we know phthalates are in these products. We know they get in our bodies. The debate comes over how hazardous they are.

In another study in 2008, high levels of phthalates were found in the urine of babies that were recently soaped with baby shampoo, powder, or lotion. There was no correlation made to the amount of phthalates and any reproductive problems, but the study got a lot of attention because the debatable chemicals were in products specifically targeted toward babies.

In 2008, Congress banned specific levels of certain phthalates (BBP, DEHP, and DBP) in toys, citing studies showing the toxic effects of these substances. The EPA is adding eight phthalates to their "Chemicals of Concern" list, meaning the agency will keep a close watch on the chemicals with more stringent limitations – and even banning – possibly in the future.

But if you want to avoid these chemicals, it's not as simple as shopping for products without phthalates listed on the ingredient label. It's often a challenge to know if phthalates are in a product because manufacturers aren't required to list the specific chemicals that make up fragrances, and phthalates, are frequently used to make smells last longer. To be certain, look for labels that say "no phthalates" or "phthalate-free.

Formaldehyde: That pungent chemical that kept your frog intact in science class may be a preservative in your home, found in some of your family's cosmetics and personal care products.

There's little dispute that formaldehyde can pose health risks. Short-term exposure can cause skin irritation from physical contact or wheezing, watery eyes, and burning in the nose when inhaled.

The long-term effects of formaldehyde exposure are less certain. After research found that formaldehyde exposure caused cancer in rats, the Environmental Protection Agency classified the chemical as a "probable carcinogen." The International Agency for Research on Cancer has classified formaldehyde as a human carcinogen. But the amount of formaldehyde used in grooming products and cosmetics is much less than the amounts tested in most studies, making it hard to determine risks.

Formaldehyde limits for personal care products are set by the Consumer Ingredient Review, an independent group funded by the personal care products industry and supported by the FDA and the Consumer Federation of America. The CIR set healthy product limits in 1984 and then revised them in 2002.

Keeping your family safe from these products can prove to be a daunting task. A recent study commissioned by the Campaign for Safe Cosmetics in conjunction with the Environmental Working Group, found formaldehyde in baby lotion, baby bubble bath, and baby shampoo. The chemical was not an intentional ingredient but was a byproduct of the manufacturing process.

Parabens: Parabens are some of the most commonly used preservatives in cosmetics such as moisturizers, shampoos and conditioners, and many types of makeup. In the Environmental Working Group study of teenage girls, all 20 participants tested positive for two parabens: methylparaben and propylparaben.

Because parabens are typically used at levels between 0.01% and 0.3% and have been deemed safe in cosmetics at levels as high as 25%, the FDA official position is that currently there's no reason for consumers to be worried about using cosmetics that contain parabens. However, the FDA continues to evaluate the chemicals. It's relatively simple to tell if parabens are in a product you want to try. Check the label and look for ingredients such as propylparaben, benzylparaben, methylparaben, or butylparaben.

When looking for healthy products keep in mind, according to the FDA, cosmetic manufacturers may use any ingredient they choose, except for a few ingredients that are prohibited by regulation.

You can check products for many chemicals, such as phthalates, parabens, and formaldehyde, by visiting the Environmental Working Group's Skin Deep Cosmetic Safety Database at http://www.ewg.org/skindeep/. The online guide looks at the safety of more than 7,600 ingredients in nearly 62,000 products. You can use it to narrow the cosmetics field to find potentially healthier products.

Until there are comprehensive safety standards for personal care products, read the labels for suspect ingredients in the makeups and lotions you are planning to use. The level of risk you want to assume and how cautious you choose to be is a personal preference. Some will go to any extreme to avoid a risk, while some don't worry at all. Most people fall somewhere in between. Bottom line let common sense prevail.

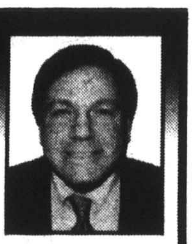
DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.



NEW GUM DISEASE TREATMENT GUIDELINES

Chronic periodontitis, a severe form of gum disease that can lead to tooth loss, afflicts 47.2 percent of the United States adult population aged 30 years and older. The incidences of moderate and severe periodontitis are estimated at 30 percent and 8.5percent, respectively, among U.S. adults. In an effort to more effectively treat chronic periodontitis and related complications, the American Dental Association (ADA) has recently released new guidelines on gum-disease treatment. Dentists are now advised to use "scaling and root planing" (SRP) as initial treatment. A side-by-side comparison of various periodontitis treatments (including the use of antibiotics) showed that SRP, which involves deep cleaning of dental plaque and tartar from tooth surfaces, is the best approach.

If we discover gum disease early enough, we can minimize or even reverse its potentially devastating effects. Oral health is a long-term commitment we share with each patient. Please call us at 617 479-6220 for an evaluation today. We provide a wide array of services. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist.

P.S. Plaque that stays on teeth longer than two or three days can harden under the gumline into tartar.

and the coaching staff got to know Lombardi and other key people in the city's baseball community.

"It's a place we all enjoyed," Moran said in the phone interview. "There are some good, good people up there."

The 2005 team flew to Quincy on Aug. 17 that year. The team went 4-0 in pool play, beating teams from Minnesota, Italy and Quincy as well as the Nash County team they would later defeat in the championship game. In the semifinal on Aug. 26, Jefferson Parish defeated a team from Stamford, Conn., to advance to the title match.

Throughout the latter days of the tournament, the team and family members were also paying attention as Katrina turned towards the Louisiana coast – adults with the group more so than the players, who were staying with local host families.

"You knew it was getting close. You knew it was going to have some sort of impact," Moran said, adding that the adults were "scrambling" to find people back home to complete storm preparations, such as boarding up windows, from half a country away.

The day after the championship match, on Aug. 28, the coaches and players flew to Dallas while the parents stayed at the Quincy Marriott. Moran anticipated staying in Dallas for two or three days at most to wait for airports in New Orleans to reopen after the storm passed, which he said was how it worked after most hurricanes.

After Katrina struck, however, it took a full week for all the players to be reunited with their families. Moran and his coaches stayed with the team in Dallas that whole time, keeping the players entertained and also trying to get updates from family and friends back home.

"It was a chore getting in touch," Moran said. "Trying to get in touch with someone in the 504 area code (the area code for greater New Orleans) was next to impossible."

To bide their time, the players and coaches would spend much of the day at the Grapevine Mall, which is home to a movie theater. At the same time, the coaches were busy coordinating travel arrangements between players and their families; many of the players and their families relocated elsewhere across the country for weeks or months after Katrina.

"It was a logistical challenge," Moran said. "It kept you busy."

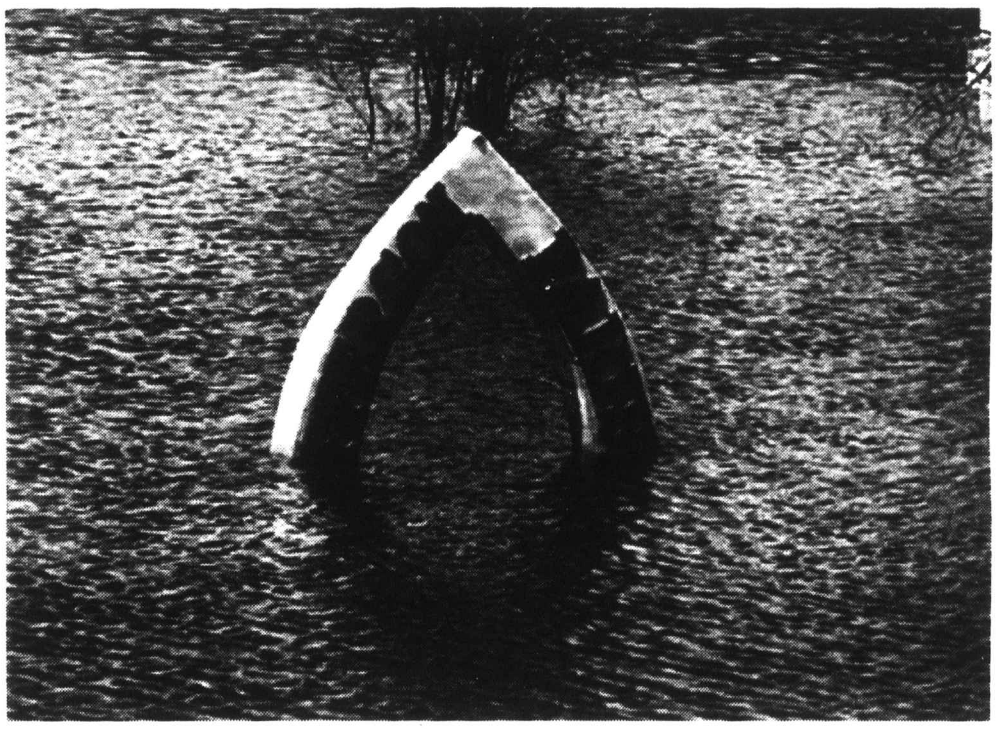
The Babe Ruth organization, Moran added, was wonderful and reimbursed him for all the expenses incurred during the extended stay in Dallas.

Jefferson Parish, which stretches from Lake Pontchartrain to the Gulf of Mississippi, was less affected by Katrina than neighboring New Orleans. Moran said two or three of his players lost all their possessions in their homes following the storm; one player because the subdivision his house was in was flooded and the other one or two because their roofs were damaged and water was able to get in, which led to mold and mildew damage. Other players' houses sustained damage from the wind and from windborne objects and falling trees.

Moran is planning a reunion for the team members to mark the 10th anniversary of their victory in the Babe Ruth World Series later this year. Two players from the team made it to the minor leagues, and the reunion will happen after their seasons end.

Mason Katz, who played for Louisiana State University in the 2013 College World Series, was drafted in the fourth round of that year's MLB draft by the St. Louis Cardinals. He is playing for the team's Class A-Advanced affiliate.

Nate Fury, who also played on the LSU team that advanced to the 2013 College World Series, was selected by the Detroit Tigers in the 36th round of the 2014 MLB draft. He pitches for the team's Class A affiliate.



IN THE AFTERMATH of Hurricane Katrina, Quincy residents and business leaders raised more than $550,000 for Jefferson Parish, La., as part of the Quincy Cares campaign. Then-Mayor William Phelan launched the fundraising effort after the parish's Babe Ruth team won the 2005 World Series, held at Quincy's Adams Field. Photo courtesy Tommy Moran

O'Donnell Emphasizes Importance Of Homestead Act

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell reminds homeowners about filing for Homestead protection.

Under Massachusetts law, a Homestead recording provides for limited protection against the forced sale of an individual's primary residence to satisfy unsecured debt up to $500,000.

"Protecting one's primary residence is a key objective for all homeowners," O'Donnell said. "Additionally, homeowners who own property jointly and are age 62 and above, by statute can file an elderly homestead, which gives them additional protection."

For all individuals who have an interest in their primary home - for example both spouses- they are jointly required to sign-up if they want to avail themselves of the full $500,000 protection.

O'Donnell noted that one of the major changes under the 2011 Law passed by the Massachusetts Legislature is that a valid homestead cannot be terminated when refinancing a mortgage. He also mentioned that another clarification of the statue is that a homestead can provide protections for a primary home kept in trust.

O'Donnell said it is important to understand there are certain debts that are exempted from protection under the Homestead Act, such as federal, state and local tax liens, as well as mortgages contracted for the purchase of a primary home and nursing home liens. Most other mortgages, debts, and encumbrances existing prior to the filing of the Declaration of Homestead, along with probate court executions for spousal and child support, are exempted from protection.

Homestead recordings can be filed at the Registry of Deeds for a state imposed fee of $36.00. To find out more about the Homestead law, or to get a free application go online to the regis-

Quincy Affordable Housing Complex Preserved, Renovated

State Issues $11.3 Million Tax-Exempt Bond

KENDRIGAN PLACE APARTMENTS, a 78-unit affordable multi-family rental housing facility in Quincy, will be purchased by NeighborWorks Southern Mass. and renovated with a $11,381,000 tax-exempt bond issued by MassDevelopment.

MassDevelopment has issued an $11,381,000 tax-exempt bond on behalf of 10 Winter Street Limited Partnership, an affiliate of Quincy-based NeighborWorks Southern Mass. The organization will use bond proceeds to purchase and renovate Kendrigan Place Apartments, a 78-unit affordable multi-family rental housing facility in Quincy.

The apartment complex consists of 27 one-bedroom units and 51 two-bedroom units, all of which are affordable. NeighborWorks Southern Mass will upgrade kitchens, bathrooms, and floors, and install a heating system and windows. In addition to the tax-exempt bond, MassDevelopment assisted the Department of Housing and Community Development with the approval of federal low-income housing tax credits, which provided approximately $6.5 million in equity. Boston Private Bank purchased the bond.

"Protecting affordable housing opportunities in the Commonwealth is critical – particularly in Quincy, a Gateway City experiencing soaring growth," said MassDevelopment President and CEO Marty Jones. "MassDevelopment applauds NeighborWorks Southern Mass for renovating and preserving 78 affordable units in a growing region."

Founded in 1981, NeighborWorks Southern Mass develops and manages affordable housing; educates and assists homeowners and homebuyers; and helps homeowners repair and maintain their homes. Today, NeighborWorks Southern Mass maintains its administrative headquarters in Quincy, a second NeighborWorks Homeownership Center in Brockton, and a third office in New Bedford. The organization serves more than 25 communities in southern Massachusetts. NeighborWorks Southern Mass currently manages over 250 units of scattered site special needs affordable housing and has an additional 55 units of affordable housing in various stages of development.

"We are thrilled at the level of support for this property from MassDevelopment, DHCD and the City of Quincy," said Robert Corley, Executive Director of NeighborWorks Southern Mass. "The extensive revocations this funding allows will be a key part in creating a new, safe and healthy environment for the families that call this property home. At NeighborWorks our staff and board believe in high quality affordable housing as critical to the health and success of families in our neighborhoods. The stabilization and improvements to this key neighborhood building in Quincy Point will help ensure the continued community development goals of our agency."

MassDevelopment, the state's finance and development agency, works with businesses, nonprofits, financial institutions, and communities to stimulate economic growth across the Commonwealth. During FY2014, MassDevelopment financed or managed 314 projects generating investment of more than $2.9 billion in the Massachusetts economy. These projects are projected to create more than 6,300 jobs and build or rehabilitate more than 1,600 residential units.

"It is important to make clear that a Homestead protects consumers against the forced sale of their primary owned residence to satisfy unsecured debt," O'Donell said. "While the debt is still owed, homeowners will have the comfort of knowing that with a Homestead filed, their primary residence cannot be forcibly sold to satisfy most debts."

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Monday, August 24, 2015, at approximately 8:40 p.m., Officers David Zupkofska and Steve Dabilis were dispatched to Kelly's Cellar bar at 1546 Hancock Street regarding a drunk patron inside throwing signs around and refusing to leave.

Upon arrival, Officer Dabilis located the male in the parking lot to the rear of the building. According to the bar staff, this male was one of 7-8 men visiting from Ireland and who had been in Kelly's Cellar. The suspect was located inside a cab and one of his friend's said they were going to bring him to Dorchester. A patron told the Officers that the suspect was throwing signs around inside and wouldn't leave when the staff asked him to. An employee said they just wanted the man to leave after he became belligerent when refused a drink order. The suspect actually reached over the bar and grabbed a bottle of whiskey and then began chugging it before they were able to get him back outside. There was no property damage and the rest of the group was behaving, so the cab was sent off with the fare.

A few moments later the cab came back and the occupants said that the suspect "just bailed out of the cab and is heading back here." The Officers observed the suspect walking across the parking lot with one of his friends pulling on his arm telling him to go with him. The suspect pulled away from him and continued towards the Officers, who asked him why he got of the cab? Due to the suspect's slurred speech, it sounded like he said that he wanted to go back in and be with his friends.

Officer Zupkofska took hold of the suspect's right wrist and advised him he was being placed into Protective Custody. Officer Dabilis took hold of his left arm. With one handcuff on, the suspect suddenly began pulling away and struggling with the Officers, forcing the Officers to bring the suspect to the ground to finish handcuffing him. Although he continued to resist, the handcuffs were put on and the suspect and he was transported to the station for booking.

It was determined that the suspect was so intoxicated that he could not be booked and was transported to the emergency room for evaluation. Due to the struggle with the 25 year old suspect, Officer Zupkofska suffered lacerations on his hands and Officer Dabilis sustained a cut to a finger on his left hand. Nice Work!

AN ILLEGAL PYRAMID SCHEME COMMON IN COLLEGE! (excerpts from FTC)

In the past few years, there has been a story in the social media about people making "incredible" money selling an energy drink. A search on the internet shows a man boasting, "Forget working 9 to 5. Join the Young People Revolution!" he says. He claims that you can make thousands of dollars a month. There are two main parts of this scam. Firstly, you have to pay out an initial charge and then monthly costs to purchase the drink which you then need to sell. Secondly, you need to enlist your friends to do the same that you are doing. The FTC just filed a complaint behind one specific company, Vemma, for running an iliegal pyramid scheme that targets college students. Here are some signs that you are being solicited to be part of a pyramid scheme:

1: Recruitment: If your income is based predominantly on how many people you recruit into the program, not how much product you sell, it's a pyramid scheme. According to the FTC's complaint, Vemma's marketing and training materials emphasize recruiting other Affiliates. In fact, one of the masterminds behind the alleged scheme says Affiliates should focus on recruiting other Affiliates because customers are simply a "byproduct of the business."

2: Buying the product: Many pyramid scheme operations require participants to buy the product or other things to stay in good standing with the company. Vemma Affiliates are told to spend $150 a month on products to stay in the monthly "bonus" pool, according to the complaint. That's $1,800 a year!

3: Reward of a lavish lifestyle. The recruitment pitch says you'll be living in luxury. It fails to tell you most people in a pyramid scheme lose money. Vemma made promises of luxury cars and travel to exotic destinations, but the company's own income disclosures tell a different story: 9 out of 10 Affiliates made less than $6,200. The FTC alleges even those figures are overblown because they don't take into account expenses like the initial purchase and the monthly purchases. With this scheme, you are most likely going to lose money and friends!

MAHONEY

VoteMahoney.com

f VoteMahoney @AnneMahoney

It's time for a new day for Quincy!

Anne Mahoney was the only elected official to speak out against Tom Koch's pie-in-the-sky downtown development deal. While other politicians were climbing aboard the Tom Koch/Street-Works bandwagon, Anne warned that the mayor was giving too much control to a private developer and that the project's financials just didn't add up. Now, Tom Koch is getting ready to make the same mistakes all over again – and with your tax dollars. Enough is enough.

As your mayor, Anne will put control of the downtown project back where it belongs – not with private developers, but with the city. With a degree in Finance and more than 25 years of business experience, Anne has a proven track record of successfully managing multimillion-dollar projects and producing positive results. That's just the kind of experience we need to make Quincy thrive again.

On Thursday September 24, vote for Anne Mahoney for Mayor

Wollaston Beach KidsFest Today

The Friends of Wollaston Beach will host its 9th annual KidsFest today (Thursday) from 5 p.m. to sundown at Wollaston Beach.

The event features inflatable obstacle courses, beach games, and a glow in the dark dance party with DJ Mark McGillicuddy at sundown.

"There will be plenty of prizes for the kids at the Back to School – Beach Bash," FWB President Neil McCole said.

KidsFest is a free event made possible by annual grants that fund the entire party.

"Save The Harbor/Save The Bay and Copeland Foundation are our fellow non-profits who back us with matching $2,500 grant," McCole said. "The Better Beaches program has also been long supported by both the MA DCR and the City of Quincy."

Over the years the corporate sponsorships have varied, but McCole added, "Jet Blue and New York Life have been our corporate sponsors for the past few years and their generosity and commitment cannot go unrecognized."

A National Digital Child ID program will be available free of charge to families attending the event.

McCole went on to say that he and the Friends of Wollaston Beach are extremely grateful to the McGettrick family for all of their support of FWB over the past 10 years.

"I had to ask Jimmy to host a Pumpkin Fest at The Beachcomber one year because the KidsFest had been rained out three times. He didn't flinch and The McGettrick's donated pizza for about 1,000 people that day."

McCole also pointed out that The Clam Box and Tony's Clam Shop have also been strong supporters of FWB and encourages everyone to frequent the seasonal businesses along the beach.

the Summer YouthWorks Program.

Last spring, Mayor Koch and the School Committee collaborated with the Superintendent's Leadership and Principal Teams to fund academic classroom and academic program teacher positions to maintain average class sizes well below the School Committee guidelines.

New academic classroom and program teachers, academic support staff, and non-academic support staff have been hired across the school system to replace retired staff. In addition, professional positions were added at the middle school level to expand the Technology Engineering program to Grades 6 through 8.

New professional staff members will participate in a two-day orientation on September 2 and 3, meeting with members of the Superintendent's Leadership and Principal Teams to learn about their professional responsibilities, the many programs and services offered by Quincy Public Schools, and the mentoring program for new staff.

This year, Quincy Public Schools will continue to implement the Massachusetts Frameworks for Common Core State Standards for English Language Arts and Mathematics. To assist with growing needs for educational technology, many upgrades have been completed this summer. Installations of new desktops and laptops, document cameras, projectors, educational software, operating system upgrades, and technology professional development are ongoing throughout the school system.

NEW WINDOWS at a number of schools including North Quincy High School (above) are among the improvements to school buildings completed this summer.

Our partners in the Quincy School~Community Partnership continue to enhance our students' educational opportunities through supporting technology initiatives and the robotics program for Grades 5-12, providing backpacks and school supplies for elementary school students, real-work experiences for high school Career and Technical Education students, and funding the mentoring program for new educators.

Along with staffing, curriculum, and technology enhancements, we are working on many initiatives across the school system.

This fall, families of students in Grades 1 through 5 will learn more about the new elementary school report card that will be used in all schools. (A new Kindergarten progress report will be developed this year for use next school year.)

Opportunities for advanced coursework in English Language Arts and Mathematics will be offered to students at all five middle schools beginning this fall. At North Quincy and Quincy High Schools, students in Grades 9-11 will make a difference in their schools and communities through volunteering in the fourth year of School Committee's Community Service initiative.

Students in Grades 11 and 12 will have the opportunity to take college courses for credit through the new Dual Enrollment program with Quincy College. At all levels, extended day opportunities will be available "beyond the bell" for academic enrichment, the arts, and athletics.

Our school buildings will be ready for the new school year, with the Public Buildings Maintenance staff completing improvements such as newly retiled floors and new carpeting, repainted classrooms, and repairs to building mechanicals including addressing electrical, plumbing, and heating issues. Custodians across the school system have worked diligently all summer to prepare classrooms and offices for the new school year. As always, we are grateful for the support of the Park Department in maintaining and improving the landscaping at our school buildings.

New windows and doors are being installed at Lincoln Hancock, Merrymount, Parker, and Wollaston Elementary Schools and North Quincy High School.

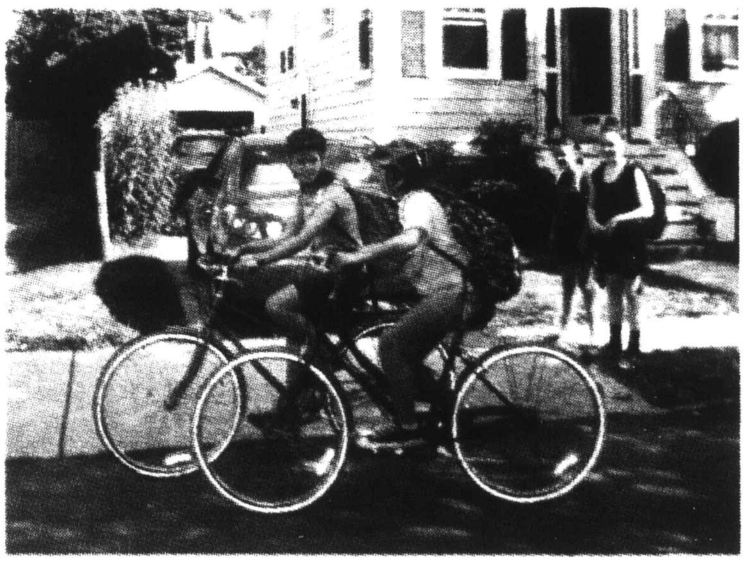
10,000 Quincy students are travelling to school every day. Mayor Thomas P. Koch and the Department of Public Works remind you to be extra vigilant on the roadway to ensure the safety of these precious commuters.



Here are a few tips to keep in mind:

- The school year creates more traffic. Operate your vehicle at or below the posted speed limit at all times, especially near schools.
- The start of school brings more bicycles on the road. Yield to those in the bicycle lane.
- All bicyclists should wear helmets.
- Use caution when reversing your vehicle. Some children are not tall enough to be visible in your rear view mirror or window.
- Yield to all pedestrians.
- Stop for pedestrians in a crosswalk.
- Be alert when you are in a School Zone. School Zones are located close to each school and are marked with signs and/or flashing lights. The maximum speed limit in all school zones is 20 mph.
- If a stopped school bus displays flashing, red lights, vehicles approaching from either direction (front or back) must stop and wait until the bus moves again or the red lights are off.
- It is extremely important to remember that children may cross in front of the bus when boarding and exiting.

The safety of each child matters.
Please work to keep them safe

pletely new energy-efficient heating system is being installed.

We are continuing to work with the Massachusetts School Building Authority and the Public Buildings Department on the new Sterling Middle School project with conceptual design underway by project architects from Ai3 in collaboration with the Sterling Building Committee and Owner's Project Manager Joslin-Lesser Associates. Updates on the Sterling Middle School project will be presented at upcoming School Committee meetings, the first of which will be held on Wednesday, Sept. 16 at 7 p.m. in the Coddington Building and broadcast live on QATV Channel 22.

As the new school year begins, please remember that the most meaningful factor in assisting students to have a successful school experience is the concern and participation of their parents. In order to help your children attain their goals, we need your involvement, whether it be through attending parent-teacher conferences and Parent Academy events, volunteering in your child's school, and most importantly, reinforcing the importance of on-time school attendance, appropriate behavior and class participation, and completion of schoolwork.

You can also stay informed about your child's school and all of Quincy Public Schools through our website www.quincypublicschools.com or by following us on Facebook or Twitter (@QuincyPS).

While you enjoy the last few days of summer vacation, please note the calendar for the opening days of school below. Your principal will be happy to answer any questions you might have related to the opening of school or feel free to contact my office at 617-984-8701.

- The first day of school for Grades 1-9 is Wednesday, Sept. 9.
- Grades 10-12 will begin school on Thursday, Sept. 10.
- Pre-Kindergarten and Kindergarten students will attend an Orientation at their individual schools on Friday, Sept. 11; each family will receive information on orientation from their child's school.
- The first day of school for Kindergarten and Pre-Kindergarten is Monday, Sept. 14.

On behalf of all of the staff at the Quincy Public Schools, best wishes for a successful school year to you and your family.

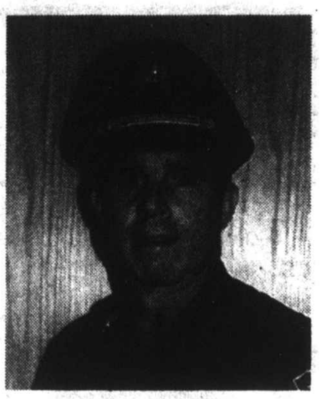
Back-To-School Safety

By LT. DAN MINTON
Quincy Police Crime Prevention Officer



LT. DAN MINTON

It's that time of year again. Time to send your children back to school. It can be a frightening time for parents, but if you prepare your child for the big world you may help save them from getting into trouble.

- Make sure your children are taking the safest route to school and friends' houses, one that avoids danger spots like alleys, new construction, and wooded areas.
- Encourage your children to walk and play with friends, not alone, and to stay in well-lit, open areas where others can see them.
- Don't hang a house key around your child's neck. It's a telltale sign that you won't be at home when they return from school. Put it inside a pocket or sock.
- Teach children to walk confidently and stay alert to what's going on around them.
- Encourage your children to look out for other kids' safety and report anything they see that doesn't seem right.
- Tell your children to stay away from strangers who hang around playgrounds, public rest rooms and empty buildings.
- Rehearse with children their full name, address, and phone number (including area code) and how to make emergency phone calls from home and public phones.
- Tell children never to accept gifts or rides from someone they don't know well.
- Check your neighborhood for areas that threaten children's safety, like brush in wooded areas, overgrown shrubbery, abandoned buildings, bad lighting, vacant lots littered with debris, no sidewalks or bike paths next to busy streets.
- Teach children to go to a store clerk or security guard and ask for help if you become separated in a store or shopping mall. Tell them never to go into the parking lot alone. Accompany your children to public rest rooms.
- Teach children no one, not even someone they know, has the right to touch them in a way that makes them feel uncomfortable. Tell them that they have the right to say "No" to any adult in this situation.

If you teach the above tips to your children, they will be better prepared to survive in this great big, sometimes crazy, world.

Back-To-School Sleep Tips

School has either just started for most kids or is rapidly approaching in the next few weeks.

Katie Kovaleski a Family Sleep Institute Certified Child Sleep Consultant and Founder of Anytime Sleep Consulting gives her tips to help settle families back into the school routine.

"I frequently use family meetings during consultations especially when working with toddlers age 2.5 and above. Family meetings are a great way to get everyone on the same page and for the younger children, while they may not be able to fully engage in a complete conversation, it's nice to be able to chat with them about what is going to happen and I also include visuals to help further their understanding.

Call A 'Family Meeting'

- Before the meeting, establish what you would like to discuss, for a back to school family meeting, establish things like: schedule changes, the new morning and nighttime routine if there will be any changes made (like picking out clothes the night before, having a homework check at a certain time, packing clothes for after school activities etc).
- Let all of the family members know the morning ahead that there will be a family meeting, including when and where. Ex.: Family meeting tonight, living room, 5 p.m., snacks will be provided.
- Create visuals for the meeting. A great way to do this is either with a poster board or wipe erase board. You can make one for the whole family or little ones for each member. This is a great thing to let the child help decorate if you would like to hang it in their room later on.
- Make sure you have specific goals that you can articulate to your child Ex: Bedtime will be moved 15 minutes earlier this week before school starts so everyone will be able to easily adjust to the earlier wake up time in the morning. Or: We will pick out and lay your clothes on this chair each night so they are ready for the morning and we will do this 5 minutes before bath time. It's very helpful to work in things like that into the nighttime routine so it becomes habit very quickly
- Have fun with it! Help your children get excited about returning to school and list at the top of the board one thing they are each looking forward to about starting this school year.

Presidents Aim To Keep Winning Momentum

Quincy Opens Season Sept. 11 At Braintree

By BILL GRIFFIN

There is the known and the unknown for Quincy High's football team. Each promises to tell an interesting story as the season winds its way from September through the autumn to late November.

The known is clear. Quincy brings a culture of success the Presidents established with three straight winning seasons including last year's 8-3 team which came within a touch of good fortune of a league title and a deep run in the playoffs.

Quincy also returns senior tailback Jahvae Handsom-Fields who has the ability to play at the next level and is almost certainly the best running back in the Patriot League.

The unknown is equally clear. Quincy graduated an exceptional class of seniors and returns only two starters on offense and four on defense. There are new people with size and talent. How well they fit around Handsom-Fields and how much they have been influenced by the victories of the last three years will determine the course of Quincy's season.

"I'm fascinated with how it is going to work out," said coach Bill Reardon. "We have the momentum of the last three years, but we lost a lot. We have holes to fill. We have athleticism and some young players with decent size. The key is how quickly they can step up and replace a group of real good football players."

Begin with Handsom-Fields. He has gained almost 2,100 yards and scored 21 touchdowns in two years. Last year, he rushed for over 1,100 yards and scored 15 TDs in nine games. He is that rare combination of power and speed. He can carry tacklers for five yards and a first down. He can also run a kickoff, a punt or an interception back for 90 yards and a touchdown. He has track-star speed in the open field and the blast of a fullback between the tackles.

He can score from anywhere on the field. Quincy will give him the ball frequently.

"We will lean on him tremendously," said Reardon. "He is in great shape and he is hungry for the challenge. The key for Jahvae is he has exceptional balance. He has the ability to anticipate the hit, absorb the contact and keep going."

The problem is most of his friends up front have departed. Both tackles, both guards, and the tight end graduated. They were not only veterans, they were exceptional players. Abraham Hoti, William Young, Steve Scolaro, Curtis Calley and Jake Bergonzi tore open holes for three years for Quincy.

Only senior captain Mike Munroe returns. He played center last year, but could move to guard this season. Reardon worked in captain Isiah Uzamere to the rotation last year, and he played well. They will be the anchors up front. Quincy is looking for good things from Jhonata Sousa, Ryan Ahola, Declan Mayo, and Bernie Vancassell.

There is clearly inexperience here, but there is decent size and the advantage of blocking for Handsom-Fields. A great back can make a line look good. He doesn't need much. He doesn't need a hole large enough to surround a house. He needs a crack.

"I like the way the kids have worked and they have the size to do the job. With Jahvae, all they have to do is give him a little and he has the ability to take care of the rest," said Reardon.

Senior Cody Desmond succeeds James Lam at quarterback. Lam was a leader and a dangerous pass-run threat who directed Quincy to three consecutive winning seasons for the first time in over a decade. There is much to like about Desmond. He is an athlete. He showed his speed roaming centerfield for the baseball team for the past two springs. He throws a good ball. He will also not shrink from the moment. As a pitcher in baseball, he traveled to Plymouth North and baffled the powerful Eagles on their home field which is something quite rare.

"The spotlight won't bother him," said Reardon. "He's used to being the center of attention. He won't get rattled. I'm confident he can handle the job."

Senior Tyrian Leonard will play fullback. Jose Garcia and Frankie Nunziato are working at wide receiver.

"Wide receiver is probably the biggest question mark we have have in the pre-season," said Reardon.

Handsom-Fields is a three-year starter at free safety and could well be Quincy's best defensive player. This highlights an issue Reardon hasn't dealt with over the past three years. Quincy will have several players going both ways which brings in the threats of injuries and fatigue.

"We have more players going both ways than I would like," said Reardon. "I think as the season goes on, we'll be able to get more and more kids a chance to play."

JAHVAE HANDSOM-FIELDS returns to the Quincy backfield for his senior year. The tailback gained over 1,100 yards and 15 touchdowns in nine games last season and is among the elites running backs in the Patriot League.

'Huge' Line Gives North Quincy Building Block

North Quincy Hosts Bedford Sept. 11

By BILL GRIFFIN

It will be easy to spot North Quincy's football team this season. When the Red Raiders move across the field, they will blot out the sun and the sky.

North is huge. North is huge for a high school team. North is huge for a college team. North is huge for a row of oak trees. The Red Raiders have four linemen between 255 and 290 pounds. They have three more between 190 and 220. They will not be easily moved.

"We have some athletic kids, but our strength is our line. I think we have one of the biggest lines on the South Shore, and that gives us a good building block," said coach Mark Nutley who has eight returning starters from last year's 2-9 team.

There is more than just size. The Red Raiders have three three-year starters up front who bring experience and talent. Seamus Broughton (275 pounds), Derek Huynh (290) and Conor Pound (215) have learned the hard lessons of varsity football on the front line and are primed for their senior year. Pound had 7 ½ sacks from his defensive end spot last season.

"I honestly think we could have one or two all-league linemen," said Nutley.

Senior John Griffen (275), junior Brian Manning (255), Jack Ryder (220) and tight end Jake Grady (190) contribute to the collection of bulk up front which adds to a cool 1,720 pounds. The advantage is clear. North will be difficult to block. North should be able to open holes. In high school football, if a team can stop the run on defense and rush the ball on offense, the team will do well.

"If we put Broughton, Huynh and Griffen in the middle, that will be a tough group to move out," said Nutley. "That will force a team to go outside and we feel we have the people who can make the plays against the sweep."

On offense, Nutley went with a wise formula. He put his best athlete at tailback. Senior Aidan Brown was North's leading receiver last year, but he moves to running back this season. He's quick, hits the hole hard, and thanks to work in the weight room, has bulked up to 190 pounds.

"We figured we would take our best player, put him at tailback and get the ball in his hands as much as possible," said Nutley. "Aidan is an excellent athlete. He runs downhill. He does a 4.6 in the 40, so he can break a play."

Senior Joey Fallon is the quarterback. Fallon played two games as a sophomore when Andrew Kiley was injured. He was solid against Medford and had North in the lead until the final minutes of the game. Against Boston Latin, he threw a pair of TD passes. He has played behind Kiley for the past two years, and Nutley feels he is ready for the step up to varsity speed.

"He threw 16 TD passes for the JVs last year," said Nutley. "He's played varsity football, so he knows he has the ability to be a varsity quarterback. He has some experience and that should help him."

Jake Petersen, Tom Whooley and John Le are working at wide receiver. Grady will be the tight end. Tom Koch, Joel Lawless, Liam O'Connor and Kevin Ganno give North depth at fullback.

"We have good athletes with good hands at wide receiver," said Nutrley.

On defense, Brown, Le, Petersen, Whooley, Chris Donagy and Conor Donagy will play in the secondary. Grady is a three-year starter and should be an anchor at middle linebacker. Koch, Ganno, O'Connor, and Luca Smith will also see action at linebacker.

Many of the linemen will go both ways which highlights North's biggest area of concern. Depth. The numbers have improved, but North has a fistful of two-way players. Injuries hurt Red Raiders badly last year, and they are a concern this season.

"Numbers are our biggest issue," said Nutley. "We have solid, quality players at almost every position, but if we start losing them to injury, it will hurt us. We don't have the depth I would like to have."

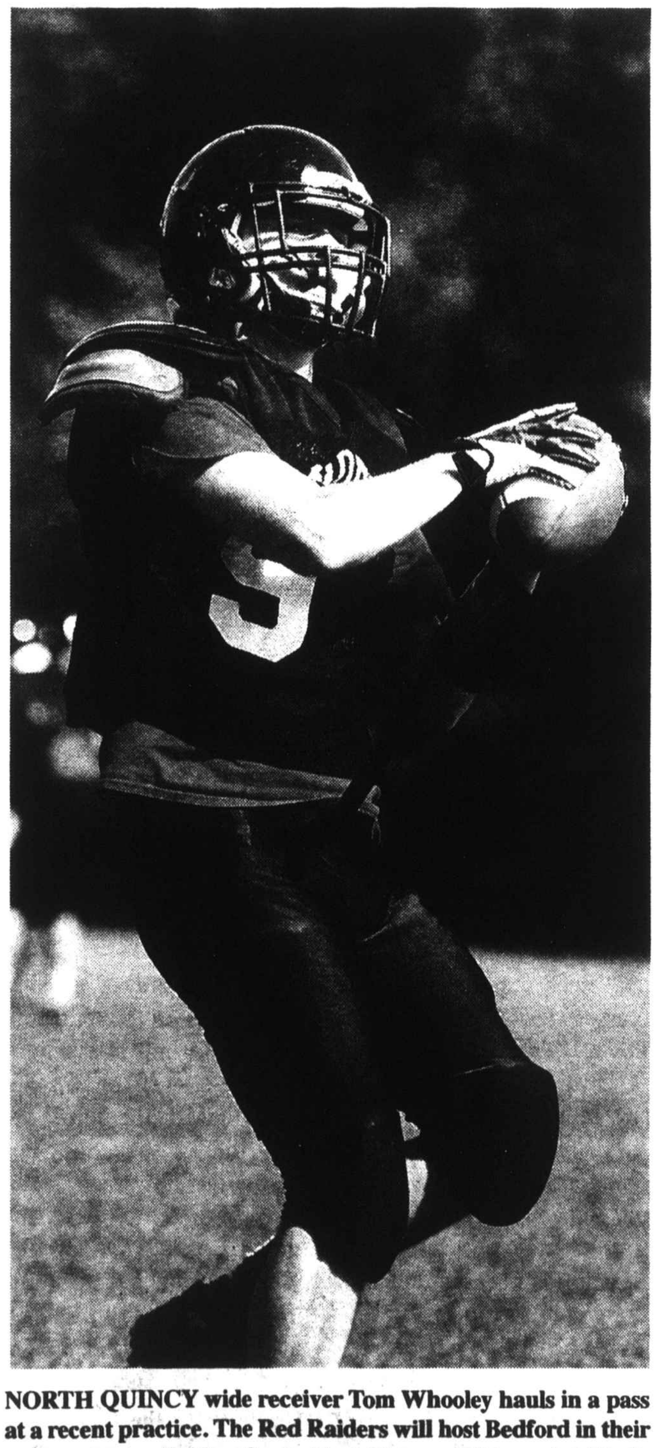
This is Nutley's third year at North. He has made progress boosting the numbers. North has more than 30 freshmen out which is most encouraging. The best way to keep and develop them is to experience success, and Nutley feels his club has a good chance at an improved season with its power up front.

"Winning helps," smiled Nutley. "We have some real athletes in that freshman group, and they should develop into good football players. I live in Marshfield and I drive right by the practice field. They have 70-80 players out. That's what everyone wants and that's what all of us want to build towards at North.

Defending Fisher Division champion Middleboro returns a large number of talented players from last year's club. Hanover will also be tough. Nutley sees potential in his club to compete in the division.

"We have size and we have athletes," he said. "If things come together for us and we can stay healthy, I think we can compete with anybody."

North opens at home against Bedford Sept. 11 at 7 p.m.



NORTH QUINCY wide receiver Tom Whooley hauls in a pass at a recent practice. The Red Raiders will host Bedford in their season opener Friday, Sept. 11 at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

Quincy And North Quincy High Girls, Boys Soccer Previews

NQ Girls Soccer Deep, Quincy Improving

By BILL GRIFFIN

There will be a fascinating story line played out by the two girls soccer teams in the city, and it could produce two of the best rivalry games of the school season.

North Quincy is the established power. The Red Raiders have made the tournament 15 of the last 20 years. Despite the loss of two brilliant, college-level players, North returns a fistful of experienced performers who provide talent and depth at all positions.

Quincy is the newcomer. Despite having only two seniors, the Presidents have the best of both worlds. They are young and experienced. As freshmen and sophomores, they faced the test of fire in the brutal Keenan Division which includes Hingham, Duxbury and Whitman-Hanson who are among the best teams in the state. The Presidents not only survived. They grew as players and as a team.

"We're still young, but we improved a great deal last year," said QHS coach Seth Harmon. "We competed against a lot of top teams and we kept the score close. We have a great incoming freshman class who are ready to contribute. I think we'll keep getting better."

"Our overall depth is our biggest asset," said North coach Paul Bregoli. "We have a good group of seniors who have played together since the 10-and-under leagues. We have everybody back on defense. We should be solid. Our goal is to qualify for the tournament again."

North's main task is to replace the scoring and crackerjack all-around play of Courtney Campo and Ciara Forde. Campo is playing for Stonehill, and Forde is playing for Simmons. Campo is one of the all-time leading scorers in school history. The pair scored many goals. They will not be easily replaced.

"I think the offense will be more spread around this year," said Bregoli. "We'll be looking to Haley Houlihan who scored eight goals last year. Captain Molly Donahue, Cora Cluett, Sinead Hanlon, Annie Doherty and Emily Anglehart are all experienced players at forward. They are all capable of scoring. We'll be more balanced."

Quincy has proven players just where a teams wants them: up the middle of the field. Junior keeper Emi Guarante gained priceless experience against the league's top offenses. Junior center backer Ally McPherson not only anchors the defense by keeping the scoring area clear, she also has a powerful leg. She can cover nearly the entire field with her kicks which is a valuable asset in turning aside threats.

Senior center halfback Gabby Jerahian is a three-sport athlete who handles well the transition from offense to defense. Center forward, sophomore Kari Wismar, scored five goals as a freshman and will be a dependable threat on attack this year.

Quincy will miss the services of Patriot League All Star forward Emma Papile who graduated. Junior Brianne Dane will work with Wismar on a forward line which should get better and better as the season progresses.

"We're looking for Kari to keep improving. Gabby and Ally give us good athletes on the halfback and fullback lines," said Harmon.

Midfield will be a strength for the Presidents. Senior Ariana Paulo and

Quincy, NQ Boys Have Cornerstones

By BILL GRIFFIN

Quincy and North Quincy boys' soccer teams each have proven cornerstone players at important positions. The issue at each school is how inexperienced, promising players adapt to varsity speed and make needed contributions, especially with scoring along the forward line.

North, who lost 14 players from last season's team, features three-year starters Joey England in goal and Andrew Jayne at center halfback. England is a talented keeper who has developed the confidence to direct his team from his spot in net. Jayne is a multitalented player who is a key performer both on attack and defense.

"We're going to rely a lot on those two players," said coach Rich Hanlon. "We're young, but we've seen good development in our players over the summer. We have some good players up from the JVs, and I think we'll get stronger and stronger as the year goes on."

Quincy, who lost five quality players including top scorer Yuri Mascarenhas to graduation, has a strong foundation on defense. Senior keeper Rob Smith is a four-year veteran who is quick and sure in net. Senior center backer Aidan Smyth anchors the back line and has the talent and experience to keep the scoring area free of rushes and rebounds.

"I think the back line will be our strength," said coach Mark Spendlove. "The people we lost were quality players. I think our talent may be deeper overall than it's been in some time. The question is how quickly the different styles our players have mesh together."

Smith and Smyth are excellent core players at important positions.

"Aidan reads plays well and closes down on the attackers. He keeps things tidy in front. Smith has experience, and he is an excellent reflex keeper. He gets to a lot of shots," Spendlove said.

Senior Ben Morse is another proven player on the back line, and Spendlove is looking for a strong season from senior Derek Andrade at fullback as well.

"Derek is adaptable and strong. Ben is a very fit player and like Aidan, he has a good deal of varsity experience," said Spendlove.

Junior captain Tristan McCormack is a brilliant performer at halfback. He has a strong leg and moves the ball well from defense to offense. Senior Enes Ekren is another proven performer at halfback. Senior Hashim Hamdi , Tony Barbosa and Uyi Ogiugo will attack from the forward line.

"Enes sees the field and passes well," said Spendlove. "Tristan plays with a great deal of energy, and we're looking for a big year from him. We lost a lot of our scoring when Yuri graduated, and we need someone to step up at forward. Hashim is very fast and Uyi has great potential."

As usual the Keenan Division of the Patriot League is brutal. Duxbury and Hingham annually feature teams that advance deep into the state tourney. Despite the challenging schedule, Spendlove can see his club making a run at a tournament berth.

"I think we have a crack at the tourney," said Spendlove. "I'm excited by the potential we have. We have good speed and size. There are a few unknowns, but once we put it all together, I think we'll have a good team."

The Presidents are dedicating their season to the memory of Alfred Schofield who was the captain of the 1964 Quincy team. Schofield was killed in action in Vietnam and was awarded the Silver Star.

"The city dedicated a square to him last year on Adams Street. I went with four of our players, and we were moved by the connection to soccer. It was something that the players wanted to do," said Spendlove.

England will anchor the Red Raiders. He has been tested under the fire of the Hinghams, Scituates and Duxburys of the league. He has faced some of the best attacks in the state and he has learned from the experience. He knows what he is doing.

"What I like best is that Joey has become more and more vocal. He's really directing the team which is what I want from a keeper," said Hanlon. "He has good reactions, and he comes out to challenge the shooter. He's solid on corner kicks and also covers the penalty area well."

Jayne is one of the fastest players on the team, and he uses his impressive set of skills to control the action in the middle of the field.

"Andrew has the best skills on the team," said Hanlon. "His defensive qualities are so good that you're tempted to move him back to fullback, but he attacks the offensive end just as well. He is an ideal center halfback."

Quan Ho is an experienced defender on the back

Garcia, Mike Nazzaro, and Pat Bambrick will see action in the secondary. Senior Garrett Cronin is a returning starter at linebacker. Munroe and Uzamere will be the foundation of the interior defense.

The Keenan Division is loaded. Defending champ Duxbury was a sophomore-junior team last year and led by quarterback Bobby Maimaron are the favorites again this season. Plymouth North, Hingham and Whitman-Hanson are always good.

"The division is always tough," said Reardon. "I think another a winning season is a reasonable expectation. I don't think we want to accept anything else. If we have a quick learning curve from our younger players, we could be a nice surprise this season."

Quincy opens at Braintree Sept. 11.

junior Joelle Robinson join Jerahian to form a trio with both talent and experience.

"We want to keep focusing on our passing and possession game no matter the opponent. I think it's one of the big reasons we improved over the course of last season," said Harmon.

North's stout defense begins in goal with junior Shannon Kennedy, a three-year starter who has recorded 14 shutouts. She is a complete, proven keeper. She plays the angles, keeps the scoring area clear and communicates well with her defense.

"She also has no fear," said Bregoli. "She'll go the ground for a save or come out and challenge an attacker. She's made some huge saves for us."

Patriot League All Star Molly Kate Cannon leads a parade of talent at fullback. Cannon is likely the best one-on-one marker in the league. Captain Julia O'Donnell is an excellent sweeper. Kerin Coleman, Mandy Hazelton, and Charlotte Chretian have all played and played well on defense.

North has one of the best athletes in the league in senior Marissa McGue at center halfback. She is fast, strong and skilled. She knows the game and handles well the short passing game in the middle of the field which makes a seamless transition between attack and defense. Her skills are so good Bregoli is tempted to move her up front, but she has too much value at one of the most important positions on the field.

"She is the glue that holds the team together," said Bregoli. "I'd like to move her up front more, and we might be able to do it a little more as the season progresses."

Jillian Hallisey and Emily Butruccio will also play on the halfback line. Abby Koch (halfback), Kara Carchedi (defense) and Ciara Viscione (defense) were all recovering from injuries when practice started, but should help the Red Raiders over the course of the season.

These two teams should be fun to watch. In the second game between North and Quincy last year, the Red Raiders won 3-2 despite the fact that Quincy controlled a good deal of the match. North won because a great player, Campo, wouldn't let them lose. She scored three, including the winner in the dying seconds.

This year, North is loaded. Quincy returns a caravan of young, talent players. They meet on Oct. 10 and Oct. 24. Be there.

Quincy hosts Pembroke Sept. 10 at 3:30 p.m. in its opener. North hosts Fontbonne Sept. 8 at 4 p.m.

line. Josh McDonald, Declan Murphy and Devlin St. Marie will also play at fullback. Three-year veteran Steven Cobble will be solid at halfback. Freshman Aidan Ring will also see action on the halfback line.

Philip Wilhein and senior Angelo Taho will lead the attack at forward.

"Scoring is the one area we need to improve. Wilhein is a transfer from Germany. He has good potential," said Hanlon.

Like Spendlove, Hanlon's club faces a daunting schedule against teams who have been playing soccer together since they were able to walk.

"It's hard to say how we'll be because we have so many young players. I think they will develop and play better as the season goes on. We'll play hard. We may lose, but we won't be outworked," said Hanlon.

Quincy begins its season Sept. 10 at Pembroke. North opens at Whitman-Hanson Sept. 10.

THE RED CARPET TREATMENT

At the latest Cannes Film Festival, organizers banned women from wearing flat-heeled shoes to screenings. This is unfortunate for these and other women in high heels. To begin with, walking is a delicate balancing act. As we place one foot in front of the other, we must maintain our center of gravity in a relatively constrained manner as we catch ourselves from falling. Wearing high heels complicates this process by shifting body weight forward away from the heels toward the ball of the foot, which is less able to absorb the shock. These changes in foot position lead to increased lower-back curvature, altered pelvic movement, and an increased backward lean. Increased strain and pain in the lower back commonly result.

High heels look great but at a cost to the muscles/joints of your feet/ankles and your spinal/pelvic joint alignment. Have regular chiropractic care to help the spine and pelvic joints readapt from unnatural strains and stresses. Maybe it's time to visit us at FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC for safe and gentle chiropractic care. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy, where we work to restore your health. Stop suffering needlessly, call 617.472.4220 today to schedule an appointment. We offer computerized spinal scans.

P.S. Electromyography (EMG) tests, which measure the electrical activity of muscles at rest and during contraction, have shown that the lower back, knee, hip, calf, and foot muscles all have to work harder with a high-heeled shoe.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Careful, Lamb. Taking on too many tasks at one time can cause you to create more snarls each time you try to work your way through the tangled mass. Best to handle one job at a time.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Making bold moves is what Bovines do. But the best moves are made with lots of data to provide backup just in case you charge into an unexpected complication. A new relationship shows promise.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Sharing credit for a job well done is easy for you to do, but not necessarily for your partner. But fair is fair. Don't let yourself be denied the right to have your contributions recognized.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Communication is important to help bridge a gap that can lead to problems at home and/or at the workplace. Find a way to get your points across before the breach becomes a chasm.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Relationships, whether business or personal, need to be watched carefully for signs of trouble. Any negative indications should be dealt with before they become too burdensome.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Congratulations. A more positive aspect highlights much of the Virgo's week. You should find others more receptive to your suggestions, and also more likely to act on them.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) All work and little play could wear the Libra's usually positive attitude down. Take some much-needed time off. Perhaps a short jaunt with someone special is the way to go.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) This is a good time to expand your view from the known to the unfamiliar. Confronting new situations could be challenging, but ultimately also could be extremely satisfying.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Giving advice to those who just want validation for what they're doing can be unsettling. So back off and save your counsel for those who really appreciate it.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Cultivating a more positive attitude not only makes you feel better about yourself, but also has an upbeat effect on those around you, especially that certain someone.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Keeping the lines of communication open and accessible is the key to establishing the right foundation on which to build an important and meaningful relationship. Stay with it.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Before agreeing to act on a request, consider using your perceptive Piscean talents to see what might lie hidden beneath its surface and could possibly cause problems later on.

BORN THIS WEEK: You're a friend who, if you err at all, does so on the side of concern for those you care about.

James S. Gould, Jr., 89

A funeral service for James Stoddard Gould, Jr., 89, of Weymouth was held Tuesday in C.C. Shepherd Funeral Home, Weymouth.

Mr. Gould died peacefully at home Aug. 26, surrounded by his loving family.

He was born, raised, and educated in Quincy. Mr. Gould enlisted in the Army at 17 to serve in World War II. Postwar, he became a skilled automotive mechanic. Mr. Gould owned and operated Tower Automotive, on Adams Street in Quincy, for more than 40 years before selling the business to retire in 2000.

Mr. Gould met Alba, his wife of 69 years, in Florence in 1945. It was WWII, and he was working for the Americans as a communications specialist; she was working for the German's communications office. Alba got his attention when she prevented American soldiers from sending personal communications using work resources. He decided to investigate and liked whom he encountered. A year later, on May 8, 1946, they were married in Rome. They lived in Italy more than a year, and gave birth to their eldest child, Loretta, while in Italy.

Mr. Gould loved gardening and all water activities: boating, fishing, water skiing, parasailing, and scuba diving with his brothers for lobster. He also loved traveling and Italy, and he made sure his wife, and children, visited and stayed connected to the family in Italy.

Mr. Gould will be remembered for his ability to fix anything mechanical, and for his caring, generous, and dare devil nature. He will also be remembered for his integrity, and the kindness he showed his customers, at Tower Automotive. He ran a trustworthy business and often helped elder and widowed customers, discounting repair rates and plowing their driveways during snowstorms.

Survived by his beloved wife, Alba Gould (Rossi) of Weymouth; his loving children, Loretta Lamb and her husband Al of ME, Sandra Fleischmann and her husband Gus of NM and Richard Gould of Weymouth; his cherished grandchildren, Charlz, Jenny, Ananda, Patrick and Sarah; and his great-grandchildren, Isabella and Mervin. The family wishes to also acknowledge ex-"daughter-in-law" Cheryl Snyder of Abington, for her friendship and support.

Interment at Massachusetts National Cemetery, Bourne.

A graduate of Wentworth Institute of Technology, he was employed as a professional draftsman with TRW, a components manufacturer serving the automotive industry, for more than 30 years.

Mr. Goon was a respected, longtime member of Faith Lutheran Church, Quincy, as well as one of its predecessor churches, the Salem Lutheran Church, beforehand. He was also a member of the Cyril P. Morrisette Post #294 of the American Legion and the former American Legion Post #95. His favorite times were those spent in the company of his loving family.

He was the devoted husband of the late Rita (Gu Fong) Goon, who died in 2003. Quincy South Shore Area Jewish Committee Meets

The Quincy South Shore Area Jewish Committee held a general membership meeting Aug. 16 in the Roche Bros Falls Market community room.

A light brunch was served.

Elan Ezickson, son of Ruth Ezickson and the late David Ezickson, founder of the QJC, presented a lecture and slide show about his and wife Melanie's travels through South and East Africa for three months volunteering and sight-seeing in 2014. Some of the 3,000 plus photos taken were shown.

Ezickson described his work as a volunteer working in a game preserve and the extent of the poaching and killing of many endangered species, such as the African elephant, white and black rhinoceroses for their tusks and many of the cat family, lions and leopards and hippopotamus.

He grew up in Quincy going through the public schools prior to attending Yale and the Columbia Law School. He currently serves as the chief of operations for a Cambridge bio-tech company. He responded to many questions.

Another Reward For Hard Work

By KRISTEN ALBERINO
Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

On Labor Day, many Americans enjoy a long weekend to commemorate the hard work they do the rest of the year, as well as those who support working people. With barbecues and ballgames, beach trips and fireworks, this annual holiday often marks the unofficial end of summer. Established in 1882, Labor Day has become a timeless American tradition that many look forward to all summer.

Labor Day also reminds us that all our hard work is paying off in more ways than one — including paying into a retirement fund that makes you eligible to collect monthly benefits after you reach retirement age. If you work 10 years, and receive four credits each year for a total of 40 credits, you'll enjoy the security of Social Security retirement benefits. Remember, those years don't have to be consecutive. You can check your Social Security Statement and make sure you have enough credits by opening a my Social Security account at www.socialsecurity.gov/myaccount.

Social Security Online Services

Credits are the building blocks we use to find out if you have the minimum amount of covered work to qualify for each type of Social Security benefit. If you stop working before you have enough credits to qualify for benefits, your credits will stay on your record. If you return to work later on, those credits will be added so that you can qualify. We pay benefits to anyone who has enough credits.

When a worker files for retirement benefits, the worker's spouse may be eligible for a benefit based on the worker's earnings. Another requirement is that the spouse must be at least age 62 or have a qualifying child in her or his care. By a qualifying child, we mean a child who is under age 16, or who is eligible to receive Social Security disability benefits.

The spousal benefit can be as much as half of the worker's full retirement benefit, depending on the spouse's age at retirement. If the spouse begins receiving benefits before "normal" (or "full") retirement age, the spouse will receive a reduced benefit. However, if a spouse is caring for a qualifying child, we don't reduce the spousal benefit. If a spouse is eligible for a retirement benefit based on his or her own earnings, and if that benefit is higher than the spousal benefit, then we pay the retirement benefit based on the worker's own record. Otherwise, we pay the spousal benefit. In other words, we pay the higher of the two benefit amounts.

The best way to see what those benefits might be is to visit Social Security's Retirement Estimator at www.socialsecurity.gov/estimator. The Retirement Estimator is an easy way to get an instant, personalized estimate of future retirement benefits. The Estimator uses your actual earnings history to compute a benefit estimate.

In the past, applying for benefits could be laborious, requiring you to drive to a Social Security office, wait, and fill out paperwork. Now, you can visit www.socialsecurity.gov/applyonline to find out everything you need to know about applying online for retirement benefits. And, when you're ready, you can securely file the application online in as little as 15 minutes.

In most cases, after you submit your online application electronically, that's it. There are no additional forms to sign or paperwork to complete. In rare cases, we'll need additional information, and a representative will contact you.

Labor Day might mean something a little different once you're retired, but that's a pretty fair trade off when you're no longer laboring. Spend a few moments considering what your hard work has earned in the form of Social Security protection for you, your family, and working people everywhere.

GEN. JOSEPH DUNFORD

Gen. Dunford is not the only Merrymount youngster who grew up to be a military general. James McConville, a graduate of West Point, is now a U.S. Army lieutenant general who commanded the 4th Brigade, 1st Cavalry in Iraq from 2004-2005 during Operation Iraqi Freedom.

The two and their families have known each other for years.

"We knew the McConvilles very well," Dunford said. "Jim was always playing sports with us and involved. I remember him and his brothers and sisters very well."

Not only do they know each other, the two generals have served together on several occasions.

"I've had the privilege of serving with Gen. McConville. We were together in Afghanistan when he commanded the eastern part of the country and I was the commander of the U.S. Forces over there which had to be one of the highlights to find ourselves in the same place at the same time. That actually happened twice. We were together in Iraq in 2004 when our years coincided and we were back together in Afghanistan in 2013 and 2014.

"Gen. McConville has done extraordinarily well in his military career," Gen. Dunford continued. "And I don't think anybody was surprised. He went to West Point after graduating from Archbishop Williams High School and everyone always looked at him as somebody with great potential. He's got a great reputation and he's making Quincy proud in the U.S. Army."

While Quincy is known as "The City of Presidents," you could also call it "The City of Generals."

Retired U.S. Army Gen. Gordon Sullivan also hails from Quincy. Gen. Sullivan served as the 32nd Chief of Staff of the U.S. Army and as a member of the Joint Chiefs of Staff under President Bill Clinton. He retired in 1995 after 36 years of active service.

Another well-known military general who grew up in Quincy was Charles Sweeney. The 1937 graduate of North Quincy High School rose to the rank of major general in the U.S. Air Force. Major Gen. Sweeney piloted the second atomic bombing over Nagasaki, Japan that ended World War II.

Asked if he has any advice for young adults contemplating a career in the military, Gen. Dunford replied:

"The first thing is the foundation of any success is education. I look back at what might have made you successful and its teachers along the way. For me it certainly was high school during my formative years.

"Before you think about doing anything you need to be well-founded in how to think."

Flynn Facing Federal Fraud Charge

tor to pay a contractor to finish the basement of Flynn's Milton residence.

Once investors uncovered Flynn's fraudulent activities, Flynn changed the name of his business and created similar entities through the names of third parties in an effort to conceal his fraudulent activities, according to the complaint.

If convicted of wire fraud, Flynn would face up to 20 years in prison, three years of supervised release, and a fine of up to $250,000. Actual sentences for federal crimes are typically less than the maximum penalties, federal prosecutors stated; sentences are imposed by a federal district court judge based on the U.S. sentencing guidelines and other statutory factors.

U.S. Attorney Carmen M. Ortiz and Vincent B. Lisi, the special agent in charge of the FBI's Boston Field Division, announced the charges Aug. 28. The case is being prosecuted by Assistant U.S. Attorney Neil J. Gallagher, Jr. of Ortiz's Economic Crimes Unit.

Mark Messina Fundraiser Sept. 13

"Friends of Mark Messina" will hold a fundraiser Sunday, Sept. 13 from 1 to 5 p.m. at the Granite Links Pavilion Tent, Quincy.

Tickets are $25 and the event will feature music, karaoke, hors d'oeuvres, raffles and an aution.

Proceeds from the event will benefit Mark Messina, a North Quincy native who was severely injured in a tractor trailer accident last Labor Day, Sept. 1, 2014.

During an over the road trip through Hattiesburg, MS for UPS, Messina was resting in the tractor's sleeper berth while his team member was driving. When the driver swerved to avoid deer crossing the road he hit the soft shoulder, lost control and crashed the tractor into the trees.

Mark spent a couple of months at the Shepherd Center while struggling through therapy and rehabilitation. It was now time to come home to face the challenges of a new lifestyle. Mark and Jacinta's home in Nashua, NH needed to be renovated to become handicap accessible. During this time, and currently, they reside in a handicap accessible hotel room at the Marriott Residence Inn in Nashua. While experiencing lengthy delays in the beginning of this work, they also had to deal with the insurance company on the purchase of a handicap van.

It was determined that even after modifications to their home it would still be unsafe and their new living conditions would be difficult. It was decided that they would sell their home in Nashua and have a new home built in Seabrook, NH. Adding to their financial constraints, according to Workers' Compensation guidelines, Mark and his family will soon lose all group health benefits. Medical expenses, for Mark only, directly related to his accident will be covered. All other family health benefits will be lost. To help offset these costs, and to address future expenses as they adapt to their new reality, we ask for help.

For ticket information call Paul Messina at 617-312-5091. To donate online visit "FriendsofMarkMessina.org"

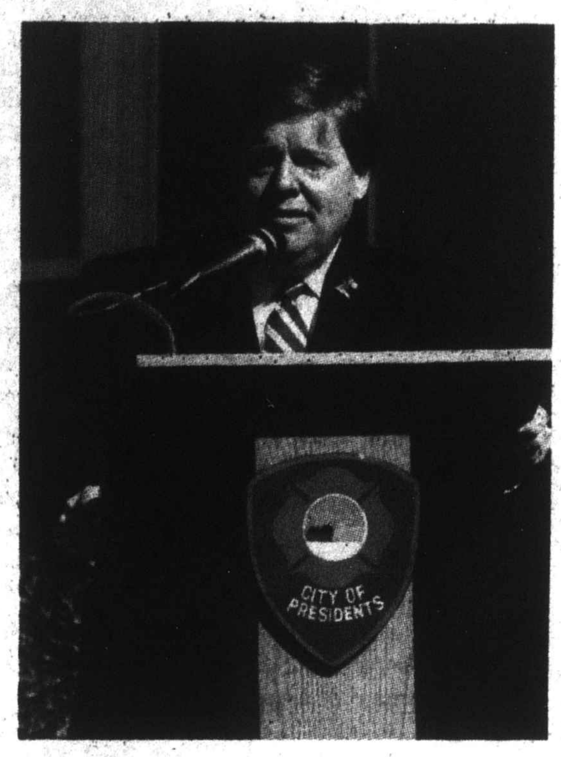
MAYOR KOCH LEADING THE REBIRTH OF DOWNTOWN QUINCY



If revitalizing Quincy Center were going to be easy, it would've been done 40 years ago. It took the bold leadership, vision, and guts of Mayor Tom Koch to get us moving forward. The result: Construction is now underway on the first major development in Quincy Center, with hundreds of millions in private development to follow...That's leadership.

What's happening now?

- $60 million apartment and retail complex under construction.
- More than $30 million of vital infrastructure improvements completed or underway

What's next?

- 15-story luxury apartment building
- New luxury condos already in permitting process
- Hotel and ground-floor commercial space
- New 500-700 space parking garage

What's it cost?

- Mayor Koch has been clear from day one: the downtown pays for itself.
- Public improvements funded with state and federal grant money or new revenue from private investment—recently more than $200 million.
- No property taxes from outside Quincy Center used.
- No impact on the City's operating budget.

Rizzo Stepping Down As Quincy Chamber President

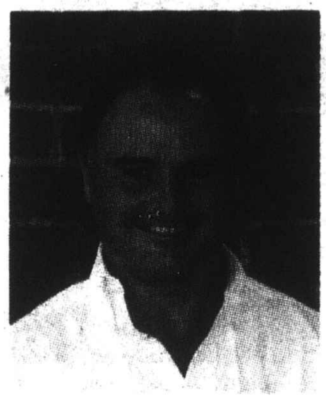
Board Of Directors Searching For Successor

The Quincy Chamber of Commerce (QCC) announces Dean Rizzo will step down from his 12-year posts as Director of Quincy 2000 Collaborative and President of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce, effective by year's end.

In his statement, Rizzo explained to the Board of Directors that he is proud of all that has been accomplished over the years and that it is time for him personally to engage in a new professional opportunity.

"It has been a dynamic time of working alongside so many talented people dedicated to the success of the organization and to the City of Quincy," Rizzo said. "I am proud to have been with the organization for the better part of my professional career. On a personal level, there are different passions and interests that I would like to pursue in this next chapter of my career.

"As I begin to look for a new career opportunity I also reflect on this experience working with an adept staff, a dedicated Board of Directors and a vibrant city with pride, pleasure and great fulfillment," he added.



DEAN RIZZO

The QCC Board of Directors expressed appreciation for the years of dedication Rizzo has given to the Quincy business community. "Dean has been a forward-thinking leader and deserves ample credit for building a solid Quincy Chamber of Commerce," said QCC Chairman of the Board, Ed Fleming.

The QCC was formed in 2010 after merging six business organizations within the City of Quincy. The membership has grown from 100 to nearly 600 members, and QCC has executed hundreds of events and initiatives to foster business growth and expansion in Quincy. According to the Boston Business Journal, the QCC is one of the largest chambers in Massachusetts, supporting a vibrant business community and playing an instrumental role in the overall growth of the city.

Rizzo led QCC's economic development arm, Quincy 2000 Collaborative, to open the Quincy Center for Innovation (QCI) in 2013. The QCI is a 20,000 square feet co-working facility home to more than 45 startup companies representing 16 industry clusters. "The Innovation Center is evolving into a real economic engine providing a variety of resources and services that support entrepreneurship and innovation south of Boston," explained Rizzo.

In collaboration with the QCC, and also under Rizzo's leadership, the Quincy Chamber of Commerce co-created the Life Sciences Corridor, a regional collaboration among the cities of Boston, Cambridge, Somerville, Braintree and Quincy. This development partnership promotes the region as an economic target area for biotech and life science industries to raise the profile of the city and diversify its economic base.

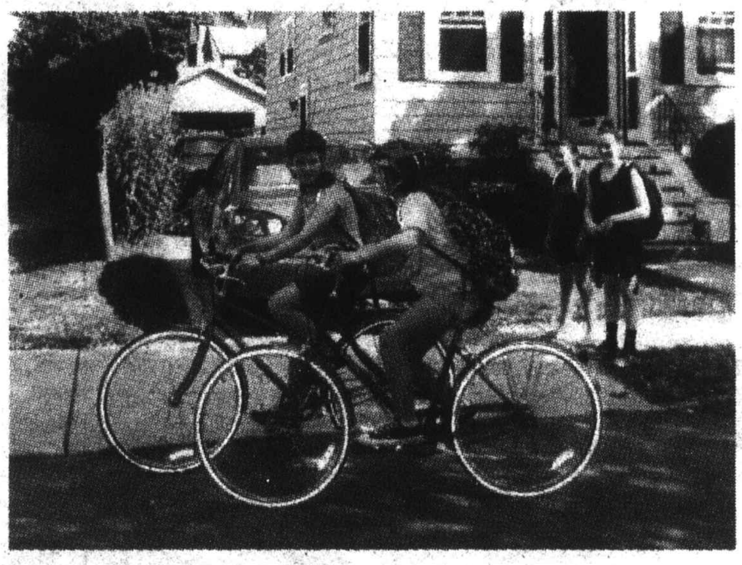
Back to School SAFELY

10,000 Quincy students are travelling to school every day. Mayor Thomas P. Koch and the Department of Public Works remind you to be extra vigilant on the roadway to ensure the safety of these precious commuters.



Here are a few tips to keep in mind:

- The school year creates more traffic. Operate your vehicle at or below the posted speed limit at all times, especially near schools.
- The start of school brings more bicycles on the road. Yield to those in the bicycle lane.
- All bicyclists should wear helmets.
- Use caution when reversing your vehicle. Some children are not tall enough to be visible in your rear view mirror or window.
- Yield to all pedestrians.
- Stop for pedestrians in a crosswalk.
- Be alert when you are in a School Zone. School Zones are located close to each school and are marked with signs and/or flashing lights. The maximum speed limit in all school zones is 20 mph.
- If a stopped school bus displays flashing, red lights, vehicles approaching from either direction (front or back) must stop and wait until the bus moves again or the red lights are off.
- It is extremely important to remember that children may cross in front of the bus when boarding and exiting.

The safety of each child matters.
Please work to keep them safe
today and everyday.

BRIDGING PAST AND PRESENT

As interest in vintage styles shows no signs of waning, romantic types are increasingly choosing "cushion cut" diamonds for engagement rings. This classic cut combining a square shape with rounded corners (much like a pillow shape) is essentially a hybrid of the modern "round" and "old mine" cuts. As such, it bridges classic and contemporary styles by providing an antique feel with the performance of a modern diamond. The classic cushion cut diamond is a square, but cushion cut diamonds are also frequently found in slightly rectangular shapes. While cushion cuts are generally less brilliant than round brilliant diamonds, they often produce more "fire" (the light that reflects out of a diamond), which is part of their unique charm.

The standards for a cushion cut diamond vary more than most other shapes, and personal taste will dictate choice. The diamond collection at Rogers Jewelry contains virtually any shape and size imaginable. We maintain, along with three other jewelers, a permanent presence in the diamond centers of the world. The established relationship affords us the ability to bring you all the qualities, sizes, and shapes at value prices. For more information, please call 617-773-3636. THE HISTORY CHANNEL

- On Sept. 26, 1580, English seaman Francis Drake returns to England, becoming the first British navigator to sail around the world. Drake had set out from England on Dec. 13, 1577, with five ships on a mission to raid Spanish holdings on the Pacific coast of the New World.

2-Year-Old Christopher Dumas Quincy Firefighter For A Day

Department Honors Youngster With Cerebral Palsy

By JOE REARDON

Two-year-old Christopher Dumas plopped himself down in the driver's seat of the Ladder 5 truck at the North Quincy branch of the Quincy Fire Department on a recent Friday morning and calmly asked the firefighter next to him to hand him the keys to the massive vehicle.

Christopher, after all, had been sworn in as an Honorary Firefighter for the day and was anxious to protect the streets of Quincy of fires, if only for a short period of time.

The handsome, blond-haired boy has been battling Cerebral Palsy since he was born prematurely and spent the first 2-1/2 months of his life in the Brigham & Women's Hospital. The disease affects the growth of his legs and movement in his left arm.

The fire department got wind of Christopher's plight and unmatched love for everything having to do with firefighters and honored him with a morning on the job.

The framed proclamation, written and signed by Deputy Chief Joseph Jackson Jr., read: "Let it be known that Christopher Dumas, age 2, of Quincy, MA, is, on this 21st day of August 2015, an Honorary Member of the Quincy Fire Department. He will be assigned for the day to Engine 2, Ladder 5 firehouse and is to report to the Officer in Charge for his daily duties."

Along with the proclamation, a table was set up at the back of the house with various Quincy Fire Department T-shirts, stickers and patches for Christopher, along with a proclamation from Mayor Thomas Koch.

Jackson said the firefighters are enthusiastic with the kids as they help them climb into the trucks and tour the department. "They love it," he said. "They do a great job reaching out to the community. Usually they call me up every couple of months. They've done it quiet a few times. It's got to be a great experience for him."

Christopher became a big fan of firefighters last Halloween. His mother, Siobhan, wanted him to dress up as Prince Charming, but once he saw a firefighter costume, complete with a bright red jacket he was hooked. Later, when vacationing in Las Vegas with her husband Chris, she bought Christopher a Las Vegas Fire Department T-shirt. "He was so in love with the T-shirt he didn't want to take it off," she said.

She then came up with the idea of contacting fire departments throughout Massachusetts and the rest of the country in hopes of buying T-shirts. The shirts began to come through the mail at the rate of six or seven per day and Christopher now has well over one hundred. There is currently a Facebook page with more than 1,200 members titled Fire Shirts For Christopher. The page shows many of the shirts he has gotten through the mail, one of the most recent from the Hanson Fire Department that was signed by every firefighter.

Christopher could barely contain his excitement the the day before and again on the morning of his adventure.

"He really didn't get too excited until yesterday," said Chris. "He knew it was coming up and he was all giddy when he woke up this morning. He told us he had to go to work. It really hit him when he pulled into the parking lot. You couldn't even hold him in the car. He just had to get out and see all the firefighters and the trucks. That's all he wants to be now is a firefighter."

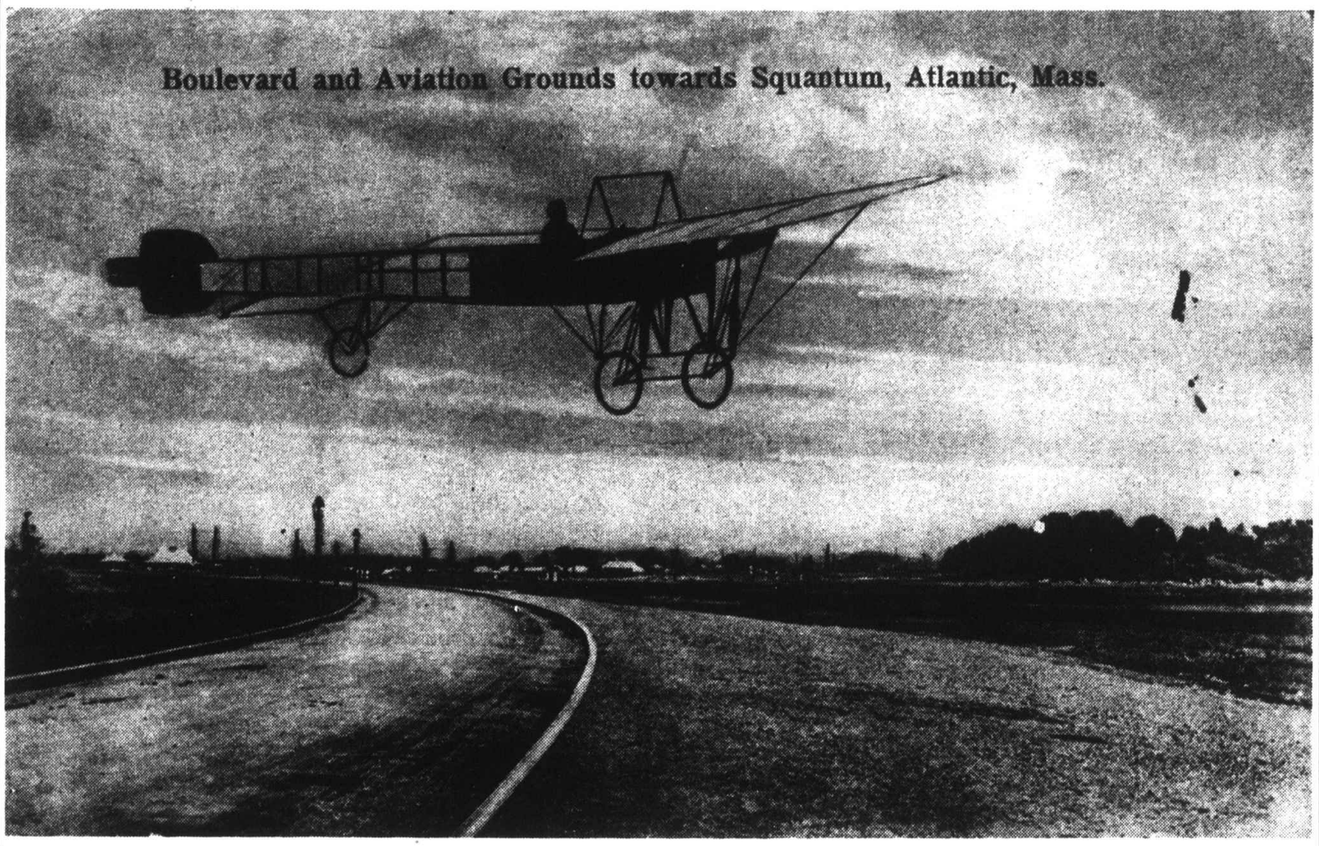
Siobhan said: "It was like Christmas Eve last night because he knew he'd be going to the fire station today. He ate breakfast quick so he could get to work today. He wanted to pack a lunch. He thinks he works here now. We take this route to his therapy office so we pass by here every single day. Without fail Christopher will say, 'Mom, there's where I work.'"

Chris was in awe of how nice the firefighters were to Christopher and his daughters, four-year-old Kera and five-year-old Kori-Anah. "They are absolutely awesome," he said. "The outpouring of support from these guys is just insane to me."

The Dumases have kept up with the physical therapy for Christopher and he has responded well. "He's doing great," said Siobhan.

"To me he just looks like a normal kid. I don't even notice it any more. He runs around like a normal kid just like everybody else."

Scenes From Yesterday



Boulevard and Aviation Grounds towards Squantum, Atlantic, Mass.

ONE HUNDRED and five years ago this week the Harvard Boston Aero Meet was held at the Harvard Aero Field in Atlantic. The Harvard Aeronautical Society had rented the 500-acre field for five years. They offered large cash prizes for record-breaking thrilling contests to lure the most daring aviators and the most advanced aviation equipment from around the U.S. and Europe to this meet. It was only the second aero-meet held in the U.S. and it was only seven years after the Wright Brothers' first flight at Kitty Hawk. Wilbur Wright was present but he did not participate. Among the over 50,000 observers who came to Quincy that week were President William Howard Taft, Boston Mayor John F. (Honey Fitz) Fitzgerald and New York State Senate candidate Franklin Roosevelt. This postcard, looking north on the newly opened Wollaston Boulevard, shows a French-built Bleroit monoplane with Englishman Claude Graham-White at the controls. This was the first single-winged plane seen in the United States. Graham-White won most of the contests at the event. Today, there is a Dunkin' Donuts shop on the corner of the Squantum Causeway pretty much where the tent is seen on the left. Moswetuset Hummock is on the right. Adams National Historical Park Welcomes 4th Graders Through 'Every Kid In A Park' Initiative

Adams National Historical Park invites all 4th grade students to visit the park for free as part of the White House's new Every Kid in a Park program.

The program began Sept. 1. Fourth grade students can go to www.everykidinapark.gov to complete an activity and obtain a free annual entry pass to more than 2,000 federal recreation areas, including national parks.

"During the National Park Service's centennial celebration, we want everyone to get to know their national parks, and we're offering a special invitation to fourth graders and their families to discover everything that national parks offer," said National Park Service Director Jonathan B. Jarvis. "We hope these free passes for fourth graders will introduce 4th graders, their classes, and families to our national treasures, places where they can run and play, explore and learn."

Adams National Historical Park offers a variety of activities that fourth graders and their family can enjoy, including a guided tour, a junior ranger activity, an educational program, and special events. Programs and opportunities will be posted on the park website, http://www.nps.gov/adam, throughout the year

To receive their free pass for national parks, fourth graders can visit the Every Kid in a Park website and play a game to access their special Every Kid in a Park pass.

Fourth graders and their families can use the pass for free entry to national parks and other federal public lands and waters across the country now through Aug. 31, 2016. The website also includes fun and engaging learning activities aligned to educational standards, trip planning tools, safety and packing tips, and other important and helpful information for educators and parents. Fourth grade educators, youth group leaders and their students across the country will also participate in the program through field trips and other learning experiences.

The goal of the Every Kid in a Park program is to connect 4th graders with the great outdoors and inspire them to become future environmental stewards, ready to preserve and protect national parks and other public lands for years to come.

A Pre-Preliminary Thought

As we approach the preliminary election on September 24th, the electorate should decide if they want a scientific approach to city management free of political staffing.

By now, the electorate has considered the statements of the candidates. The time has come to decide which candidate will best meet the need for management throughout the city's workforce based on merit, not influence.

'Go Back To School,' Former Mayor Urges Teens

"Go back to school boys and girls while you have the opportunity."

That was the message voiced by William A. Bradford, former mayor of Quincy, a civic-minded citizen and a man who for over 45 years has been either directly or indirectly identified with the education of youth. He was referring to the current "Go-To-School" drive, which is directed at keeping boys and girls in their upper teens in school.

Some of Bradford's most distinguished public service has been rendered in connection with his work on the advisory committee of the Quincy Trade School, of which he has been the sparkplug for many years. (Editor's note: Bradford served as Quincy's 16th mayor in 1921-1922.)

AMERICAN ARMIES SWEEP AHEAD AS NAZIS RETREAT TO HOMELEAND

American armies today fanned out through Alsace-Lorraine to within artillery range of Germany itself and approached and perhaps crossed the Belgian border on a 65-mile front.

Front dispatches predicted the Allies may cross into both Germany and Belgium this weekend, if they have not already done so. Belgian sources said a Belgian underground army nearly 1,000,000 strong has been ordered into action.

KEEPING UP WITH THE RED SOX

Three members of the Boston Red Sox have the highest batting averages in the American League. Outfielder Bob Johnson leads the league with a .326 average. He is closely followed by Bobby Doerr at .325 and Pete Fox at .324.

The Red sox were in fourth place in the eight-team American League with a 69-60 record, 2 ½ games behind the league leading St. Louis Browns.

GRACE MURPHY, a preschool student at the Wollaston Hill Montessori School, holds her toy animal, "Sparky, the Fire Dog."

FIREFIGHTERS FROM THE Wollaston station recently stopped by the Wollaston Hill Montessori School and taught the students some fire safety with the preschool students. Firefighters spoke about the importance of smoke alarms and carbon monoxide detectors in the family home and answered questions from the many excited children in the audience.

Preschool Fire Safety Fun With Wollaston Firefighters

Once again, the Wollaston Fire House Team made their yearly visit to the Wollaston Hill Montessori School in Quincy, and brought joy to the children's faces. This year, Captain James Kennedy led his team in giving fun lessons on fire safety to Ms. Oonagh Connolly's preschool class. He spoke about the importance of smoke alarms and carbon monoxide detectors in the family home, answering questions from the many excited children in the audience.

A young boy named Okan Dervisoglu, was fascinated at hearing how a standard fire engine can carry a minimum of 300 gallons in its booster tank. Another named, Armaan Nathan, had many questions for Firefighter Steve Sweet, who was demonstrating the use of the face mask and air tank.

But the highlight of the event appeared to be the moment when each child got a chance to "drive" a fire truck. Assisted by Firefighters Sean Breslin and Steve Chencharik, from Engine 4, along with Firefighters Jimmy Ho and John O'Driscoll, from Ladder 2, the children were able to test their skills from the driver's seat.

"Having the Fire Fighters up close and personal was very comforting for the children" said Oonagh Connolly, Director of the WHMS, "and the team did a great job of reassuring them, about what to do in the event of a fire." Even Sparky, the Fire Dog, did his part in comforting little Grace Murphy, when the sirens got too loud.

"Say Good-Bye to the Fire Fighters, children", said Ms. Connolly. "They all have to go back to work". And with a round of Hi-Fives, the children waved and watched as the team faded into the distance, already looking forward to next year's visit.

Although public tours are free, donations are welcome. There is a charge for private tours, which may be arranged by calling 617 742-3190. The authentic colonial gardens are open even when tours are not in progress.

Sometimes confused with Josiah Quincy's house, the Quincy Homestead is known locally as the Dorothy Quincy House.

Built in 1686 and expanded in 1706, it's the earliest surviving home of the Quincy family, which had Adams and Hancock connections. Dorothy, the youngest child of Edmund Quincy IV, married John Hancock, signer of the Declaration of Independence. Two of her portraits adorn the house.

DONNA BERRY of Houghs Neck beams beside her spectacular blooming Night Cereus. Featuring long, scraggly limbs and odd-shaped leaves, the Night Cereus resembles a "Little Shop of Horrors" plant that blooms and opens its buds one night a year. The dinner plate-sized flowers release a pleasing scent. When the plant bloomed on a recent Saturday night, Berry called fellow members of the Houghs Neck Garden Club to experience the exciting surprise. Donna has been tending to the odd but beautiful plant for 15 years. Before that, the plant was owned by a 70-year-old friend who received the plant from her grandmother.

Strawberry - Rosemary Dessert

By MARIE

Here is a delicious simple dessert to make - from my 14 year-old granddaughter, Ellie.

We were altogether at the Cape on a cloudy day – so what to do? She baked! The thing of it was that all of the ingredients she used were already there.

STRAWBERRY SURPRISE

For the toping
1 cup flour
1 cup sugar
1 cup milk
1 teaspoon baking powder

Mix the flour, sugar and baking powder together. Add the milk and mix until well blended. Set aside.

FOR THE STRAWBERRY MIX

1 package of frozen strawberries (slightly thawed)
About a half teaspoon fresh Rosemary
Juice of half a lemon

In a bowl place the strawberries. Sprinkle the Rosemary around and then add the lemon.

Ellie used individual small cake pans, but one casserole dish will do. Place the strawberries on the bottom, and then pour the topping over each one.

Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until top is golden brown. We had it with fresh whipped cream. Delicious!

Bean And Bacon Soup

By SUZIE

I know it seems pretty impossible to even think about making soup with all this stifling hot weather!

But soon enough, it will be soup time. (If you believe in the Farmer's Almanac predictions, we are in for another very cold and snowy winter.)

Sitting in a very cold air conditioned office at work, I was remembering a really good soup I made last year and was hoping I could have it now!

Homemade soup is nutritious, delicious, and really not hard to make using canned broth and beans. This is a very creamy and comforting soup. It has bacon in it so maybe your children would like it in their thermos when the weather gets cooler instead of a sandwich! The mashed beans make this nice and creamy, with no dairy at all.

BEAN AND BACON SOUP

Ingredients

4 strips organic nitrate free bacon (you can use turkey bacon if you prefer)
1 large chopped carrot
2 ribs of celery, chopped
1 medium onion, chopped
4 cloves of garlic, minced
1 large handful of chopped baby spinach, baby kale or arugula
2 (two) 15.5 ounce cans navy beans DRAINED and rinsed
2 tablespoons chopped fresh parsley
3-4 cups organic chicken or vegetable stock/broth

Directions

In a large saucepan over medium heat, cook the bacon until crisp, 6 to 8 minutes. Transfer to a paper towel-lined plate. Let cool, then break into pieces.

Return the saucepan to medium heat, add the carrot to the pan drippings, and cook for 5 minutes.

Add the celery, onion, and garlic, stirring well and cooking for 3 minutes more.

Add the beans, spinach and 3 cups water. Bring to a boil, cover, and reduce heat to low. Let simmer for 10 minutes.

Uncover and, with a potato masher or large slotted spoon, partially mash the bean mixture until it thickens slightly. If you want soup thinner add extra broth at this time.

Stir in the parsley, and bacon. Season with sea salt/pepper to taste (if needed) ENJOY.

Kids love it with a little shredded cheese melted on the top even better.

Pastry Cream Or Vanilla Puddy

By MARIE

Today's easy stove top custard can be made in advance, and kept in the refrigerator until it's ready to eat.

This is the same recipe my mother would make for vanilla pudding and one in which she used for filling cream puffs.

You can fold in bananas or coconut and use to fill a baked pie shell.

PASTRY CREAM OR VANILLA PUDDING

1/2 cup sugar
2 tablespoons flour
2 tablespoons corn starch
2 eggs
3 cups milk
1 1/2 teaspoons vanilla

Mix together the sugar, flour, cornstarch, and the eggs in a bowl. In a sauce pan, heat the milk until it comes to a boil. Gradually put half the milk in the egg mixture, stirring constantly.

Pour the milk and egg mixture back in the sauce,

Cook, stirring over medium heat until thick and bubbly.

Remove from heat, and add the vanilla, and continue mixing.

Cool and then either make individual pudding dishes or use it to make a pie.

At this point if you do want to make a pie, prepare the pie crust be pre-baking a shell for 10 minutes at 325-degree oven.

Fold in two ripe bananas and refrigerate until cool. Top with whipped cream.

Mark Messina Fundraiser Sunday

"Friends of Mark Messina" will hold a fundraiser Sunday, Sept. 13 from 1 to 5 p.m. at the Granite Links Pavilion Tent, Quincy.

Tickets are $25 and the event will feature music, karaoke, hors d'oeuvres, raffles and an aution.

Proceeds from the event will benefit Mark Messina, a North Quincy native who was severely injured in a tractor trailer accident last Labor Day, Sept. 1, 2014.

During an over the road trip through Hattiesburg, MS for UPS, Messina was resting in the tractor's sleeper berth while his team member was driving. When the driver swerved to avoid deer crossing the road he hit the soft shoulder, lost control and crashed the tractor into the trees.

Mark spent a couple of months at the Shepherd Center while struggling through therapy and rehabilitation. It was now time to come home to face the challenges of a new lifestyle. Mark and Jacinta's home in Nashua, NH needed to be renovated to become handicap accessible. During this time, and currently, they reside in a handicap accessible hotel room at the Marriott Residence Inn in Nashua. While experiencing lengthy delays in the beginning of this work, they also had to deal with the insurance company on the purchase of a handicap van.

It was determined that even after modifications to their home it would still be unsafe and their new living conditions would be difficult. It was decided that they would sell their home in Nashua and have a new home built in Seabrook, NH. Adding to their financial constraints, according to Workers' Compensation guidelines, Mark and his family will soon lose all group health benefits. Medical expenses, for Mark only, directly related to his accident will be covered. All other family health benefits will be lost. To help offset these costs, and to address future expenses as they adapt to their new reality, we ask for help.

For ticket information call Paul Messina at 617-312-5091. To donate online visit "FriendsofMarkMessina.org"

NORFOLK COUNTY Dist. Atty. Michael Morrissey (at lectern) praises the work of state Attorney General Maura Healey and the Legislature for securing a constant, discounted supply of the opiate overdose reversal drug Naloxone for police and fire departments across the state. Fund, Funding For Overdose Reversal Drug

DA Morrissey: Police, Fire Departments Will Get Steady Price, State Support

When the price of the life-saving opiate overdose reversal drug Naloxone spiked last year – roughly tripling in a few months - Norfolk County Dist. Atty. Michael Morrissey turned to Attorney General Maura Healey for help.

That help has arrived, and local police and fire departments are going to have a steady supply, at a discount, thanks to AG Healey's work.

"We purchased 900 doses of naloxone to provide to all of our police and fire departments in March of 2014, and we paid roughly $22 a dose," Morrissey said. "Some of our municipalities were using those doses very quickly. When we offered grants to help replenish those supplies, we saw that the prices were inconsistent and rising, with Walpole paying $37.50 per dose, Randolph paying $39 per dose, and then Needham and Wrentham paying $66.89 for the same dose. We knew something was wrong with this picture."

Last week, a few months after initially raising the issue with Attorney General Healey, Morrissey joined her, state Sen. President Stanley Rosenberg, Sen. John Keenan (Quincy), Norwood Police Chief William Brooks III and others announcing a solid resolution to the resupply problem.

During the last budget cycle, the State Senate created a dedicated revolving fund to allow the Department of Public Health to purchase naloxone in bulk, then re-sell it at reduced cost to municipal police and fire departments. The legislature appropriated $125,000 to the fund.

On Aug. 31, AG Healey announced that her office has reached an agreement with Amphastar Pharmaceuticals, Inc. that will require the company to pay $325,000 to help offset the costs of the drug. The first-of-its kind payment from the manufacturer to a state will go into the Commonwealth's Municipal Naloxone Bulk Purchase Trust Fund, established to increase access to the nasal spray version of Naloxone through a discounted program.

"Putting Naloxone in police cruisers started with the City of Quincy and the good work of Chief Paul Keenan and Lt. Det. Pat Glynn. It has spread to a state-wide movement, and it is saving lives across the Commonwealth – and spreading across the country," Morrissey said.

A Message From The Quincy Health Department

Heartburn

By RUTH JONES
BSN, RN, BC, CP-FS

RUTH JONES

Heartburn is a burning sensation in the chest caused by stomach acid backing up into the esophagus (tube from mouth to stomach). The burning is primarily in the upper and central part of the chest, just behind the breast bone. It can worsen or be brought on by lying flat or on the right side. Pregnancy tends to aggravate heartburn. People commonly experience heartburn after eating specific foods or drinking certain beverages. Heartburn can be a symptom of GERD (Gastroesophageal reflux disease), a chronic and more serious form of heartburn.

Symptoms of heartburn include: difficulty swallowing, chronic cough, stomach pain in the upper abdomen, persistent sore throat, regurgitation of foods or liquids with a taste of acid in the throat, and persistent hoarseness or laryngitis.

Many people experience heartburn and there are a large number of over-the-counter (OTC) medications and home remedies available to treat heartburn symptoms. If heartburn is severe or the pain is accompanied by symptoms such as shortness of breath or pain in your arms or neck, you should contact your health care provider to distinguish these symptoms from more serious medical conditions such as a heart attack. Often all that a health-care professional requires is a thorough history and physical to make the initial diagnosis of heartburn. The doctor my suggest some of the following tests to evaluate the severity of your heartburn:

- Endoscopy: A flexible scope is passed down the esophagus to examine the esophagus as well as the stomach.
- Upper GI series (upper GI series): After drinking a liquid that coats the inside of the digestive tract, X-rays are taken to show the outline of the digestive system.
- Ambulatory pH testing: This test measures the acidity in the esophagus via a small tube that goes through the nose into the stomach.

Every person reacts somewhat differently to specific food groups. Items to avoid may include: alcohol, coffee and orange or other acidic juices, fatty foods, fried foods, and some acidic foods, (grapefruits, tomatoes) as well as spicy foods. To track what foods worsen your symptoms, keep a food journal. Keep track of what you eat, the time you ate, any activity that worsened or made the heartburn better, and indicate which days you have heartburn symptoms.

Heartburn can be treated with lifestyle changes and medications (over-the-counter and prescription). In rare cases, surgical procedures are available to help with severe and chronic heartburn. Treatment options include: weight management because excess weight increases the pressure on the stomach, increasing the chance of acid reflux into the esophagus, quitting smoking because it interferes with the proper functioning of the lower esophageal sphincter, avoiding foods that trigger heartburn and elevating the head of the bed to decrease reflux.

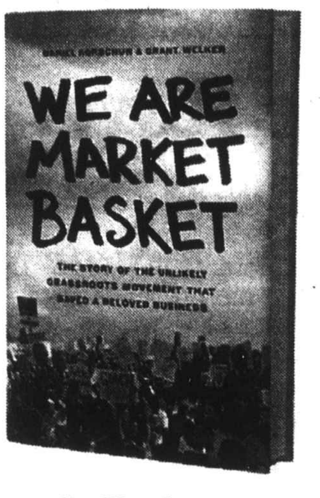
'We Are Market Basket' Topic Monday

The unlikely grassroots movement that saved Market Basket will be the topic at the Thomas Crane Public Library Monday, Sept. 14 at 7 p.m.

Lowell Sun reporter Grant Welker who covered the story as it was happening will share tales he incorporated into his new book on this inspiring modern story of solidarity and unprecedented defense of an executive.



WE ARE MARKET BASKET
THE STORY OF THE UNLIKELY GRASSROOTS MOVEMENT THAT SAVED A BELOVED BUSINESS

What if a company were so treasured and trusted that people literally took to the streets—by the thousands—to save it? That company is popular New England supermarket chain Market Basket. After long-time CEO Arthur T. Demoulas was ousted by his cousin Arthur S. Demoulas, the company's managers and rank-and-file workers struck back. Risking their own livelihoods to restore the job of their beloved boss they walked out, but they didn't walk far.

At huge protest rallies, they were joined by loyal customers—leaving stores empty. Suppliers and vendors stopped deliveries—rendering shelves bare. Politicians were forced to take sides. The national media and experts were stunned by the unprecedented defense of an executive. All openly challenged the Market Basket board of directors to make things right. And, in the end, they prevailed.

Learn from firsthand accounts from the streets and executive suites what is it about Market Basket and its leader that provokes such ferocious loyalty. How does a company spread across three states maintain a culture that embraces everyone—from cashier to customer—as family? Can a company really become an industry leader by prioritizing stakeholders over shareholders?

Set against a backdrop of bad blood and corporate greed, We Are Market Basket chronicles the epic rise, fall, and redemption of this iconic and uniquely American company. Books will be available to purchase afterward.

Harrington Placed On Paid Administrative Leave

Council Set To Address Issue At Tuesday Meeting

By SCOTT JACKSON

Mayor Thomas Koch has placed Dennis Harrington – the city's longtime planning director – on paid administrative leave two weeks after reassigning him to a different position within the Planning Department.

Koch put Harrington on paid administrative leave last week pending the result of an investigation already underway, reportedly into allegations that Harrington has been bullying employees of the Planning Department.

Messages left for City Solicitor Jim Timmins and Harrington were not returned Sept. 4.

The City Council was scheduled to vote on Koch's decision to place Harrington on leave at the body's meeting Tuesday night, which took place after The Sun went to press for the week.

In a separate agenda item, the council was slated to hold a hearing on Koch's Aug. 18 reassignment of Harrington to the position of director of transportation planning, a post that was vacated in January with the departure of Kristina Johnson. The mayor's longtime chief of staff, James Fatseas, was named interim planning director in his place. Koch said his decision was prompted by Harrington's Family and Medical Leave Act request in June to work a reduced 15-hour per week schedule and that Harrington's compensation and benefits would not be affected by the reassignment.

Harrington, in an Aug. 19 response to Koch, called that action "unlawful," citing the 1973 state law that established the Quincy Planning Department, which says the planning director "may be removed by the mayor with the approval of the City Council." Harrington requested a hearing on the matter in a separate letter to councillors Aug. 20.

Other matters on the agenda for Tuesday night included:

Koch sought $475,000 to repair the Sachem Brook outfall pipe. That appropriation would be charged to the sewer rehab fund.

Councillors Brian Palmucci, Margaret Laforest, Kevin Coughlin and Kirsten Hughes co-sponsored a resolution seeking an update on the city's efforts to control eradicate rodents.

In a separate resolution, Palmucci requested the Department of Conservation and Recreation hold a public meeting relative to the agency's plan to allow hunting in the Blue Hills Reservation.

Councillor Doug Gutro was set to introduce three resolutions. The first seeks information relative to the city of Boston's repair of piers belonging to the former Long Island Bridge from Quincy's permitting agencies. The second requests an itemized breakdown of all claims made against the city for damage incurred on private property related to snow removal over the winter. The last resolution asks the Planning Board to publically review and discuss the urban redevelopment covenant signed between the mayor and developers of the proposed 56-unit Cliveden Place complex.

Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall and Laforest sponsored a resolution that asks their fellow councillors to oppose Spectra Energy's plan to build a compressor station in North Weymouth on the Fore River. The proposed site, just east of the Fore River Bridge, overlooks Quincy Point and Germantown.

Day Of Remembrance For Unborn Saturday

On Saturday, Sep. 12th, there will be a National Day of Remembrance for the Unborn celebrated at churches and gravesites throughout the United States.

A Memorial Mass at 9 a.m., preceded by the Rosary at 8:30 a.m., will be celebrated at Holy Trinity Parish's Church of Our Lady of Good Counsel at 228 Sea St. in Quincy.

All are welcomed to attend and remember the unborn children.

Council Approved $650,000 For 10-Foot Span

Rockland Street Bridge Work To Start This Month

By SCOTT JACKSON

Repair work on the Rockland Street bridge is expected to commence by the end of this month and the project should be completed by the end of this year's construction season.

The City Council in June approved a $650,000 appropriation to cover the cost of repairing the 10-foot-long bridge, which is one of two points of access to the Rock Island neighborhood of Houghs Neck, spanning over what neighbors call "the creek."

As part of the project, the bridge deck will be reconstructed and the abutments supporting the span will be repaired. Gas and water mains that run along the current span will be buried under the deck of the new bridge.

The deadline for contractors to submit bids for the project is today (Thursday) at 3 p.m. Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest, who held a Sept. 1 meeting to update area residents on the plan, said work should begin by the end of September. The contractor will be required to finish all substantial work on the project within 70 days and 100 percent completion within 100 days.

"We want this done by the end of the construction season," Laforest said in a phone interview. "It's imperative that we keep vehicular access to this neighborhood. We need to get this completed quickly."

The bridge and surrounding roads, the councillor added, are prone to flooding during winter storms; over the past winter, the area was under up to six feet of water. The city performed spot repairs on the bridge bridge several years, but its condition has since deteriorated.

Because the bridge needs to be completed by the end of the construction season, and because some work can only be undertaken at low tide, Laforest said officials would work with the winning bidder to map out a schedule that will include some work during times when construction does not normally occur. If low tide were at 2 p.m. on a Saturday, for example, work would be done around that time and not just during the typical weekday hours.

Laforest said residents living near the bridge will be informed of the schedule once it is finalized; about two dozen attended the Sept. 1 meeting and they were amenable to the idea, she added. Laforest also plans to meet with a resident whose property directly abuts the construction zone.

A police detail will be posted on the bridge during construction and one lane will remain open to traffic at most times. Nearby residents will be given advance notice before the bridge is closed to traffic and signs will be posted. Emergency response to the neighborhood will not be impacted.

Signage will be installed along the second point of access to the Rock Island neighborhood, Kilby and Rhoda Streets, to help with traffic during construction of the bridge. Brush will also be cleared along that corridor.

"They are very awkward and difficult roads to navigate," Laforest said. "This will make it easier to navigate."

Wollaston Congregational

Wollaston Congregational Church, 48 Winthrop Ave., will resume Sunday School for the year with the annual blessing of the backpacks during Rally Day Sunday, Sept. 13 at 10 a.m.

After the blessing children will hear a message from Rev. Fred Hayes and then be excused from service to begin their christian education classes. Children all ages are welcome with infant through 4 year old care available while parents are in church and 5-12 year olds in Sunday School. A youth group for teenagers has expanded this year.

Quincy College, UMass Boston Form Joint Nursing Admission Program

Quincy College and the University of Massachusetts Boston have established a joint admission program leading to Associate of Science (AS) and Bachelor of Science (BS) degrees in Nursing.

The agreement is in recognition of and coordination with the Commonwealth of Massachusetts' efforts to increase the percentage of baccalaureate educated registered nurses practicing in the state.

The partnership is the first of its kind in the Greater Boston area. This agreement is formed to better serve the community and students of the two institutions, by streamlining the application process and establishing a clear pathway from the AS degree to the BS degree.

The joint admission program offers qualified students the ability to be admitted simultaneously to both the AS program at Quincy College and the BS program at UMass Boston. The application process is streamlined to establish a clear and concrete pathway to baccalaureate completion.

The agreement allows Quincy College to attract students to the AS program who are interested in baccalaureate completion as well as support enrollments in UMass Boston's Nursing for RNs program offered both online and face to face at Cape Cod.

For more information and to apply, contact the Quincy College Admissions Office at admissions@quincycollege.edu or call 617.984.1710.

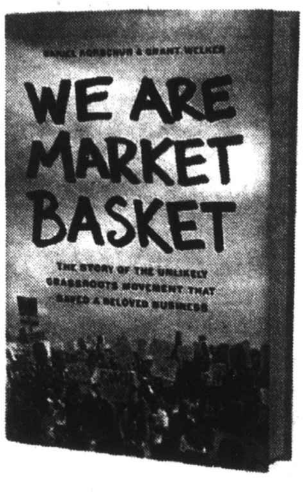
The Boy Scouts of America believes and through over a century of experience, knows — that helping youth is a key to building a more conscientious, responsible, and productive society.

For information on any of these programs stop by the main library, 40 Washington St., Quincy on one of the rally dates and meet with a local BSA Scouting volunteer in Quincy. Unable to make it to the rallies visit beascout.org.

'We Are Market Basket' Topic Monday

The unlikely grassroots movement that saved Market Basket will be the topic at the Thomas Crane Public Library Monday, Sept. 14 at 7 p.m.

Lowell Sun reporter Grant Welker who covered the story as it was happening will share tales he incorporated into his new book on this inspiring modern story of solidarity and unprecedented defense of an executive.



DANIEL KORSCHUN & GRANT WELKER
WE ARE MARKET BASKET
THE STORY OF THE UNLIKELY GRASSROOTS MOVEMENT THAT SAVED A BELOVED BUSINESS

What if a company were so treasured and trusted that people literally took to the streets—by the thousands—to save it? That company is popular New England supermarket chain Market Basket. After long-time CEO Arthur T. Demoulas was ousted by his cousin Arthur S. Demoulas, the company's managers and rank-and-file workers struck back. Risking their own livelihoods to restore the job of their beloved boss they walked out, but they didn't walk far.

At huge protest rallies, they were joined by loyal customers—leaving stores empty. Suppliers and vendors stopped deliveries—rendering shelves bare. Politicians were forced to take sides. The national media and experts were stunned by the unprecedented defense of an executive. All openly challenged the Market Basket board of directors to make things right. And, in the end, they prevailed.

Learn from firsthand accounts from the streets and executive suites what is it about Market Basket and its leader that provokes such ferocious loyalty. How does a company spread across three states maintain a culture that embraces everyone—from cashier to customer—as family? Can a company really become an industry leader by prioritizing stakeholders over shareholders?

Set against a backdrop of bad blood and corporate greed, We Are Market Basket chronicles the epic rise, fall, and redemption of this iconic and uniquely American company. Books will be available to purchase afterward.

A registration table will be set up in the atrium on Wednesday, Sept. 9 and Saturday, Sept. 12 from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. (same time both days). Get signed up and talk with the teachers about what you want to learn.

Harrington Placed On Paid Administrative Leave

Council Set To Address Issue At Tuesday Meeting

By SCOTT JACKSON

Mayor Thomas Koch has placed Dennis Harrington – the city's longtime planning director – on paid administrative leave two weeks after reassigning him to a different position within the Planning Department.

Koch put Harrington on paid administrative leave last week pending the result of an investigation already underway, reportedly into allegations that Harrington has been bullying employees of the Planning Department.

Messages left for City Solicitor Jim Timmins and Harrington were not returned Sept. 4.

The City Council was scheduled to vote on Koch's decision to place Harrington on leave at the body's meeting Tuesday night, which took place after The Sun went to press for the week.

In a separate agenda item, the council was slated to hold a hearing on Koch's Aug. 18 reassignment of Harrington to the position of director of transportation planning, a post that was vacated in January with the departure of Kristina Johnson. The mayor's longtime chief of staff, James Fatseas, was named interim planning director in his place. Koch said his decision was prompted by Harrington's Family and Medical Leave Act request in June to work a reduced 15-hour per week schedule and that Harrington's compensation and benefits would not be affected by the reassignment.

Harrington, in an Aug. 19 response to Koch, called that action "unlawful," citing the 1973 state law that established the Quincy Planning Department, which says the planning director "may be removed by the mayor with the approval of the City Council." Harrington requested a hearing on the matter in a separate letter to councillors Aug. 20.

Other matters on the agenda for Tuesday night included:

Koch sought $475,000 to repair the Sachem Brook outfall pipe. That appropriation would be charged to the sewer rehab fund.

Councillors Brian Palmucci, Margaret Laforest, Kevin Coughlin and Kirsten Hughes co-sponsored a resolution seeking an update on the city's efforts to control eradicate rodents.

In a separate resolution, Palmucci requested the Department of Conservation and Recreation hold a public meeting relative to the agency's plan to allow hunting in the Blue Hills Reservation.

Councillor Doug Gutro was set to introduce three resolutions. The first seeks information relative to the city of Boston's repair of piers belonging to the former Long Island Bridge from Quincy's permitting agencies. The second requests an itemized breakdown of all claims made against the city for damage incurred on private property related to snow removal over the winter. The last resolution asks the Planning Board to publically review and discuss the urban redevelopment covenant signed between the mayor and developers of the proposed 56-unit Cliveden Place complex.

Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall and Laforest sponsored a resolution that asks their fellow councillors to oppose Spectra Energy's plan to build a compressor station in North Weymouth on the Fore River. The proposed site, just east of the Fore River Bridge, overlooks Quincy Point and Germantown.

Council Approved $650,000 For 10-Foot Span

Rockland Street Bridge Work To Start This Month

By SCOTT JACKSON

Repair work on the Rockland Street bridge is expected to commence by the end of this month and the project should be completed by the end of this year's construction season.

The City Council in June approved a $650,000 appropriation to cover the cost of repairing the 10-foot-long bridge, which is one of two points of access to the Rock Island neighborhood of Houghs Neck, spanning over what neighbors call "the creek."

As part of the project, the bridge deck will be reconstructed and the abutments supporting the span will be repaired. Gas and water mains that run along the current span will be buried under the deck of the new bridge.

The deadline for contractors to submit bids for the project is today (Thursday) at 3 p.m. Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest, who held a Sept. 1 meeting to update area residents on the plan, said work should begin by the end of September. The contractor will be required to finish all substantial work on the project within 70 days and 100 percent completion within 100 days.

"We want this done by the end of the construction season," Laforest said in a phone interview. "It's imperative that we keep vehicular access to this neighborhood. We need to get this completed quickly."

The bridge and surrounding roads, the councillor added, are prone to flooding during winter storms; over the past winter, the area was under up to six feet of water. The city performed spot repairs on the bridge bridge several years, but its condition has since deteriorated.

Because the bridge needs to be completed by the end of the construction season, and because some work can only be undertaken at low tide, Laforest said officials would work with the winning bidder to map out a schedule that will include some work during times when construction does not normally occur. If low tide were at 2 p.m. on a Saturday, for example, work would be done around that time and not just during the typical weekday hours.

Laforest said residents living near the bridge will be informed of the schedule once it is finalized; about two dozen attended the Sept. 1 meeting and they were amenable to the idea, she added. Laforest also plans to meet with a resident whose property directly abuts the construction zone.

A police detail will be posted on the bridge during construction and one lane will remain open to traffic at most times. Nearby residents will be given advance notice before the bridge is closed to traffic and signs will be posted. Emergency response to the neighborhood will not be impacted.

Signage will be installed along the second point of access to the Rock Island neighborhood, Kilby and Rhoda Streets, to help with traffic during construction of the bridge. Brush will also be cleared along that corridor.

"They are very awkward and difficult roads to navigate," Laforest said. "This will make it easier to navigate."

Wollaston Congregational

Wollaston Congregational Church, 48 Winthrop Ave., will resume Sunday School for the year with the annual blessing of the backpacks during Rally Day Sunday, Sept. 13 at 10 a.m.

Children all ages are welcome with infant through 4 year old care available while parents are in church and 5-12 year olds in Sunday School. A youth group for teenagers has expanded this year.

'CARS' Donations To Benefit Beth Shalom - Blue Hills

Congregation Beth Shalom of the Blue Hills announced it is partnering with CARS (Charitable Adult Rides & Services) as a way for donors to contribute to its Capital Campaign to build a new spiritual home, continuing the traditions of Temple Shalom of Milton and Temples Beth El and Adas Shalom of Quincy.

CARS allows you to donate a car, boat, or other motorized vehicle for a full tax deduction, frees you from the hassles of selling your vehicle, and provides Beth Shalom of the Blue Hills a significant percentage from the transaction. It requires almost no effort from the donor, while the benefits will greatly help the congregation build its new home and maintain a Jewish presence in the greater Milton and Quincy area.

To donate, call 855-500-RIDE (7433), available seven days a week. Tell them you would like to donate your vehicle on behalf of Congregation Beth Shalom of the Blue Hills. They will pick up the vehicle and provide a receipt for the amount it was sold for after the sale has been completed.

Proceeds will support the renewal and revival of the Jewish community in the area while helping to build a symbol of its vibrancy and spirit.

For more information on the CARS program or the congregation's Capital Campaign, call the Beth Shalom of the Blue Hills office at 617-698-3394, visit BethShalomBlueHills.org, or visit donatingiseasy.org.

Childhood Cancer Awareness Month

By KRISTEN ALBERINO

Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

Cancer can affect any one of us, at any time. Sadly, thousands of people under the age of 20 are diagnosed with cancer every year, and it remains the leading cause of disease-related death for children. In September, we honor the strength and courage of children who are battling the many forms of cancer, as well as the young Americans who have lost their lives to these terrible diseases.

Social Security
Online Services

Social Security provides benefits for children who suffer from many disabling diseases, including some forms of cancer. These benefits could help with the additional costs of caring for an ill child. The Supplemental Security Income (SSI) program pays benefits to disabled children who have limited income and resources.

If you wish to apply for benefits for your child, you'll need to complete both an application for SSI and a Child Disability Report. The report collects information about your child's disabling condition, and about how it affects his or her ability to function.

Here are the steps to apply.

- Review the Child Disability Starter Kit. This kit answers common questions about applying for SSI benefits for children, and includes a worksheet that will help you gather the information you need. You can view the starter kit at www.ssa.gov/disability/disability_starter_kits_child_eng.htm.

The SSI program is a "needs-based" program for people who have low family income and resources. SSI has strict limits on the amount of income and assets you can have and still be eligible for SSI. Contact Social Security right away to find out if the income and resources of the parents and the child are within the allowed limits, and to start the SSI application process.

- Fill out the online Child Disability Report. At the end of the report, we'll ask you to sign a form that gives the child's doctor(s) permission to give us information about his or her disability. We need this information to make a decision on your child's claim. You can access the Child Disability Report at secure.ssa.gov/apps6z/i3820/main.html.

Social Security also has an obligation to provide benefits quickly to applicants whose medical conditions are so serious that they obviously meet our strict disability standards.

Social Security's Compassionate Allowances program enables us to identify diseases and other medical conditions quickly that invariably qualify under the Listing of Impairments based on minimal objective medical information. The Compassionate Allowances list allows Social Security to identify the most seriously disabled people for allowances based on objective medical information that we can obtain quickly. Compassionate Allowances is not a separate program from the Supplemental Security Income program. You can learn more about Compassionate Allowances at www.socialsecurity.gov/compassionateallowances.

No matter what month it is, Social Security is here to provide benefits to those with severe disabilities. If you or anyone in your family needs assistance, visit http://www.socialsecurity.gov/disability.

Behavioral Health Treatment Area Opens In Beth Israel Deaconess Hospital-Milton's Emergency Department

Beth Israel Deaconess Hospital-Milton officially recently opened a new behavioral health-sensitive treatment area within the Emergency Department (ED).

The newly renovated, four-bed area is physically separate from the main ED treatment area to provide a more therapeutic environment for behavioral health patients. It was opened in conjunction with a $2 million grant awarded to BID-Milton through the Healthy Policy Commission in order to develop an integrated behavioral health program with South Shore Mental Health.

The patient-centered treatment area is designed to appropriately and efficiently care for those patients with acute mental health and/or substance abuse issues and provides improved services for boarding patients awaiting placement in an inpatient behavioral health facility. Lack of coordinated behavioral health services is a pressing public health problem throughout the community and the state.

"This new area will improve the response to behavioral health crises in the community, as well as reduce the length-of-time these patients may spend in the Emergency Department awaiting assessment and referral to treatment," stated Vice President of Healthcare Quality and Chief Medical Officer Ashley Yeats, MD. "Overall, it will help us improve the quality of care for this under-served patient population while reducing inpatient hospital utilization and costs."

As part of the integrated behavioral health program, a team of South Shore Mental Health professionals, including crisis assessment clinicians, a behavioral health navigator and certified peer specialists, will provide specialized clinical, supportive and follow-up services to behavioral health patients within the new treatment area.

"South Shore Mental Health is pleased to partner with BID-Milton on this important project in improving the quality and safety of care provided to our behavioral health patients," said Sherry Ellis, LICSW, MSW, vice president of crisis and rehabilitation services for South Shore Mental Health.

"Improving access to appropriate, high-quality care for individuals suffering from mental health and/or substance abuse issues was clearly identified as a pressing public health problem in the hospital's Community Health Needs Assessment," explained Peter Healy, president and CEO of BID-Milton. "This new treatment area will ensure that BID-Milton continues its mission of providing the appropriate level of care at the right place and the right time."

BID-Milton was one out of 28 community hospitals awarded a Community Hospital Acceleration, Rehabilitation and Transformation (CHART) grant through the Health Policy Commission last fall.

Mayoral Hopefuls Tout Background, Experience

By SCOTT JACKSON

The four candidates seeking to serve the city of Quincy as its mayor for the next four years argued their backgrounds and experience sets them apart during a recent forum.

The candidates – Councillor Doug Gutro, incumbent Mayor Thomas Koch, School Committee member Anne Mahoney and former Mayor William Phelan – all appeared at the Aug. 24 meet the candidates night hosted by the Merrymount Association. Nearly 100 residents attended the event, the third forum all four candidates appeared at in a 13-day span. Each candidate was allowed to speak for 25 minutes that night – 15 minutes for an opening speech and 10 minutes to field questions from those in attendance.

Two weeks from today (Thursday), on Sept. 24, the candidates will face each other in a preliminary election. The top two finishers in that preliminary will advance to the final election on Nov. 3. The winner will serve the first four-year mayoral term in Quincy's history; voters in 2013 approved doubling the term from two to four years.

Gutro, who was first elected Ward 5 councillor in 2001 and at-large in 2011, opened his remarks by discussing his background. After graduating from Quincy Public Schools, he earned a bachelor's degree in business administration from UMass Boston and a master's in public administration from Suffolk University.

"That's the degree that many folks pursue when they're looking to become a town manager," Gutro said. "I had a passion at a young age to work in local government."

For the last 26 years, Gutro has worked in the federal government and he is currently the head of government and community relations for the Environmental Protection Agency's New England office.

"Every day I work with mayors and town managers all over New England on a range of intractable issues to find some community based solutions to the issues they impact," Gutro said. "I also work with the team that works with congressional offices, members of Congress. We meet with the governors, lieutenant governors of the six New England states, environmental commissioners and public health commissioners.

"I've had the ability over the course of my career to cultivate relationships at the local level, at the state level and at the federal level that I believe will be beneficial on day one if elected mayor."

Gutro is also one of 35 city and town officials statewide on the board of directors for the Massachusetts Municipal Association.

"Eight times a year we meet with the governor and lieutenant governor to talk about the issues that impact all 351 cities and towns. I'm proud of that affiliation. I've learned an extraordinary amount about the issues that impact cities and towns in Massachusetts and I've brought many of those ideas back to the city of Quincy," Gutro said. "It is never a bad idea to steal a good idea."

Gutro – the first president of the Ward 5 Civic Association prior to being elected to the council –promised to bring "neighborhood know-how" to the mayor's office.

"I used to say you could name a street in my ward, I could tell you somebody that lives there and the issues that are important to them," he said. "I call that neighborhood know-how and that's the finger on the pulse I would bring for every neighborhood if elected mayor."

Gutro said he is running for mayor because of his concern over what has taken place in Quincy the last two years.

"I feel like the city moved in a different direction. Our downtown project collapsed, we lost our community hospital, our housing authority was taken over by the state for maintenance issues," Gutro said.

"The failure to disclose or appeal the FEMA flood maps troubled me greatly and cost frankly 4,600 property owners a substantial amount on insurance moving forward over the life of their mortgage – and the fact that the administration offered elevation certificates to do those costs $600,000 and change for the rest of the taxpayers."

Gutro also cited the $13.5 million Quincy spent this winter on snow and ice removal, more than other communities such as Worcester, Lowell and Brockton spent.

"It is a financial management issue and an emergency management issue," he said. "The time to do emergency planning is not in the middle of a disaster. You decide those issues well in advance with a plan in place."

Additionally, he faulted Koch for not delivering a citywide traffic study.

"People lament to me all the time that it takes 30 minutes to get from Marina Bay to South Quincy or 20 minutes to get here from Granite Links," Gutro said. "I'm not saying you can solve that, but you can manage those issues and it's an opportunity to look at citywide traffic issues."

Gutro said the city needs a system in place so residents can track requests they make for city services.

"There are cities like Somerville and Boston that track constituent inquiries and manage performance; you can see in a very transparent manner what happens out there in terms of the constituent request," he explained. "In those communities you're not, quote, on a list. You can see where you are and when it will be resolved."

The city, Gutro added, also needs a plan for its

QATV Mayoral Debate Airs Tonight

By SCOTT JACKSON

The four candidates seeking to serve as Quincy's mayor for the next four years will face-off in a debate that will air tonight (Thursday) at 8 p.m. on Quincy Access Television.

The QATV-sponsored debate will tape earlier this afternoon before airing at 8 p.m. on channel 8 for Comcast subscribers. It will also air on several other occasions leading up to the Sept. 24 preliminary election. Those times have yet to be determined.

QATV's Mark Crosby will moderate the debate and a panel of three local media members will pose questions to the four candidates. The debate will consist of four rounds – one question will be asked of each candidate in each round, with the other three candidates able to respond and then a rebuttal from the first candidate. Candidates will also be allowed opening and closing statements.

The four candidates – incumbent Mayor Thomas Koch, Councillor Doug Gutro, School Committee member Anne Mahoney and former Mayor William Phelan – will face each other in the preliminary election on Sept. 24, with the top two finishers advancing to the Nov. 3 final election.

"We need a coastal resiliency plan that looks out for the city of Quincy and looks out for the 27 miles of coastline. I asked a long time ago for a harbor use commission to look at some of the issues that impact Quincy Bay," Gutro said.

Koch, who has served as mayor since unseating Phelan in 2007, said he has been a strong example of leadership during his four terms in office.

"I've been your mayor now for eight years and it's truly been a privilege and an honor to serve you and if you look at the last several years you will know what leadership is about because we've been tackling the issues facing our city head-on," Koch said. "That was the issue of financially stability for starters, investment in our schools, the opiate issue and our downtown."

On schools, Koch said the city has built a new Quincy High School and Central Middle during his tenure and is in the process of replacing the aging Sterling Middle School.

"We built Quincy High on time and on budget and we then tackled Central Middle School. Central was talked about for 40 to 50 years about being replaced. We got it done and we got the highest reimbursement rate we can, which was 80 percent," Koch said. "We're now working on Sterling Middle School. We have the architect on board, the [owner's project manager] on board and we're now under design for that neighborhood of our city – the next worst facility in our system. I expect to get 75 to 80 percent, the maximum reimbursement."

Koch added that he is proud of the city's school system, as both the mayor and a father of three.

"Not only am I proud of my school system as mayor and chairman of the School Committee but as a father of three. My oldest is a freshman at St. Joe's College in Maine…he's a graduate of North Quincy High School and my twins will be juniors at North Quincy High School this year," Koch said. "I can say first hand as a parent how pleased I've been with the wonderful job the staff and teachers have done at North for my children."

Koch also highlighted improvements to intersections, which the city was able to use federal and state money to finance.

"The North Quincy intersection – Hancock and East and West Squantum Streets – being rebuilt; 75 percent of the cost being picked up by the federal and state government. Quincy [Avenue] and East and West Howard Streets has just been rebuilt and realigned, paid for completely by the federal and state governments," Koch said.

"Sea Street – the state has put aside $1.2 million, we've put aside $1.2 million. It's now under design from Palmer Street all the way to Southern Artery for improvements."

He disputed claims made at previous forums that his administration has spent recklessly, noting the city's bond rating has increased on his watch and that debt service payments represent only 5.6 percent of the city's total budget for the current fiscal year.

"I hear my opponents talk about reckless spending and I don't know what they're talking about, because what we're doing is investing. We're investing in your community, in your neighborhoods, in your schools, in your parks, in your libraries, in your senior centers and in the veterans services we provide in this great city," Koch said.

"I'd also suggest if we had a reckless spending rate, the bond experts would not have raised our bond rating to AA+. Only three communities in Massachusetts with a higher bond rating than Quincy. That wouldn't happen if we weren't being responsible with our spending. In addition, our debt ratio versus our budget is 5.6 percent. What does that mean to you? Most cities are 8 to 10 percent. It's another sign we're being responsible with your tax dollars."

Koch also defended the city's spending on snow and ice removal over the winter. In Quincy – unlike many communities – snow was hauled away to snow farms across the city because there was no other place to put it.

"There was nowhere to put it so we made a decision to remove it. Many communities did not make that decision; we made that decision and we tackled this neighborhood like we did every other neighborhood in our city. I wouldn't do it differently. We made a difference. We didn't have a loss of life through public safety in our city, thank God for that," Koch said.

"And I know some comparisons have been made. You look at road miles on removal. Boston and Somerville were the only two communities doing the amount of removal we did. Somerville paid far more per road mile and Boston and Quincy were on par."

Mahoney – midway through her third four-year term on the School Committee and who unsuccessfully challenged Koch in 2011 – is a fourth generation resident of Quincy. She said she bought her family home two decades ago and has seen promises made and broken by city officials since then.

"In those 21 years that I've been living in my house, I have had different leaders in the city of Quincy. I've had promises for a shipyard, promises of Honeywell and promises of a downtown. They've been big promises and they've cost us money – millions and millions of dollars," Mahoney said. "We need a leader who will bring us into the future, not bring us back into the past."

Mahoney said she worked her way through college; she earned a bachelor's in finance from Suffolk University. She also highlighted her work in the private sector.

"I have a degree in finance. Much like everybody in the city of Quincy who went off to college, I worked three jobs to put myself through school to get that degree and I've been using that degree every single day in my business," Mahoney said. "I do project management for Fortune 500 companies. I'm accountable for the businesses I work with. They award me contracts. I go in with budgets. I have to be accountable to the budget and return an investment to those businesses."

A mother of three, Mahoney added she has no problem saying 'no' and would not let people take advantage of the city.

"I'm also the mom of three. I have absolutely no problem saying 'no' and I will not let people take advantage of our city or my family – and I consider you all my family," she said. "I promise you when I am your mayor that will be something that doesn't happen.

"Education is something that got me into politics because I wanted to stay in Quincy. I wanted to stay in my home – the home my great-grandfather built in 1897 – and I had to convince my husband this was the place to stay. He was thinking he wanted to move someplace else."

Mahoney faulted Koch for raising taxes and said residents haven't seen enough in return.

"People are concerned about their taxes. In this administration our taxes have gone up 35 percent. We don't have 30 percent better roads. We don't have 30 percent better services. We don't have 30 percent better living arrangements," Mahoney said. "But we pay 35 percent higher taxes in the city of Quincy."

The city, she added, should give residents a better idea of what future tax increases will be and not surprise taxpayers with large increases.

"What we really need to do with our taxes is stop the yo-yo taxing – one year it's nothing and the next year it's $500. We have to actually start planning for the future and we can do that. Other communities are doing that," Mahoney said. "They're projecting their taxes so that you know and you can plan and you're not going to be surprised."

Quincy, Mahoney said, needs to stop relegating different groups to the sidelines.

"We need to stop relegating different diversities to the sidelines," she said, "and start celebrating the contributions that we all give to our city, open up our city for an opportunity for a creative environment, open up our business fronts that are empty with new stores to come into, open up our educational opportunities that exist in our schools to go work at our businesses."

Mahoney concluded by saying she is the right person to manage the city moving forward.

"I'm running for mayor because I believe in the city, I believe in this community and I believe in the people of this city. I believe we can have the dreams we want but we have to manage it correctly. I believe I have the right skills to do that. I'm dreaming big because I think Quincy deserves somebody who is going to come in and manage our city, take care of you from the seniors to the babies that are in the audience – they're going to want to come in live in our houses and take care of us," Mahoney said.

"We need somebody with a strong backbone. We need a mother who knows how to say 'no,' a person who is going to stand up to the special interests and somebody who is going to remember we're taking care of all the taxpayers, who is going to be accountable for your dollars."

Phelan, who served as mayor from 2002 until 2008 before being unseated by Koch in the 2007 election, said he first got involved in politics to improve the school system. His first run for office was in 1999, when he won a seat on the School Committee.

"I became involved in politics for one reason: To make the Quincy school system better," Phelan said. "My daughter had a problem, a significant learning disability, and I found myself fighting over services and I found myself realizing 'wait a minute, if my daughter isn't receiving services, a whole host of other people's daughters and sons aren't receiving services,' and that's why I entered public service."

That daughter, Phelan added, is now teaching in the Mississippi Delta as part of the Teach for America program.

Phelan was a practicing attorney before entering politics and now runs his own firm in Quincy Center.

"I've been in the private sector with six years as the exception and those are the six years that I served as mayor," Phelan said. "Other than that, I've always worked in the private sector. I'm a small business owner – I have my own law practice – and I consider myself someone from the private sector."

While on the School Committee, Phelan said he led the charge against building a new Quincy High School off Quincy Avenue on land that was used as a dumpsite for the former Fore River Shipyard.

"I didn't just ask questions, the tough questions. I demanded answers," he said. "I got environmental reports stacked up from my feet almost to my knees. I went through every one of them. I went through the federal archives, investigated lawsuits, pulled out old discoveries and interrogatories and deposition testimony about that land, found out a developer and contributor to the former mayor bought the property for $1 million and two weeks later carved off the dirtiest six acres and entered into an agreement to sell it to the city for $3 million, leafleted the entire city with the help of so many good people and stopped that atrocity from occurring.

"Now we have a beautiful, state-of-the-art high school in the center of our town right where it should be."

Phelan touted a number of accomplishments he made in terms of the school system during his three terms as mayor. He said the school budget increased by an average of 4.4 percent annually while he was in office and also implemented full day kindergarten and early literacy programs, overhauled the early literacy curriculum, and put in place programs to reduce the drop out rate.

"My motto was we have to have the best schools in Massachusetts – no exceptions, the best – if we want to be the greatest city in Massachusetts," Phelan said.

Aside from education, Phelan said he was able to turn $5.6 million deficit into a $17 million surplus, in part by getting Quincy College to pay about $6 million of back pension obligations to the city. Phelan added he was able to keep property taxes down while he was mayor; in two out of the six years, the tax rate dropped.

"Having healthy respect for whose money you're spending is the first step in being able to manage a budget," Phelan said. "No one is going to dispute that I managed this city well and that every single decision I ever made on its behalf was made in the people's best interest."

After losing a rematch to Koch in 2009, Phelan served as the town administrator in Holbrook from 2011 until earlier this year.

"Guess what I did in Holbrook? I lowered taxes in Holbrook one year. We put more money in the bank in Holbrook than they've ever had in Holbrook. We got a bond rating increase in Holbrook. We did all kinds of infrastructure improvement in Holbrook," Phelan said.

"We renovated town hall in Holbrook. Guess how much it cost – not $15 million, I can tell you that, $300,000 because we partnered with the Norfolk County Sherriff's Office, who supplied all the labor from inmates."

If he were elected mayor again, Phelan said he would continue to make every decision in the best interest of the city.

"I think and I hope and I pray I would enjoy the job a little more," Phelan said. "But I can tell you what I wouldn't change. I would always keep my commitment to always do and act with every decision I made in the best interest of the city."

Sheriff's Program Earns Accreditation

The American Correctional Association (ACA) recently conferred its accreditation on the Norfolk Sheriff's Office's electronic incarceration program, which serves as an important component in the effective reentry of inmates back into their communities at the end of their jail sentences.

It was the fourth time the Norfolk Sheriff's Office has earned ACA accreditation for its electronic incarceration program, and it has received 100 percent compliance scores all four times.

"Earning the ACA accreditation is very important to us," Sheriff Michael G. Bellotti said, "because it gives us the chance to measure ourselves against the best in the nation. We find it instructive to hear from the national auditors, who are the tops in the corrections field from all over the United States."

The electronic incarceration program involves inmates wearing an electronic ankle bracelet during home confinement as an option to being locked up in jail. Inmates are carefully chosen for the program, usually during the last segment of their incarceration at the jail.

The bracelet carries GPS technology that allows Norfolk Sheriff's Office staff members to track the inmates at all times. In certain circumstances, inmates are allowed to work at a job during prescribed hours and then return home. Other allowances – such as for medical appointments and meetings with substance abuse counselors – can also be made.

Cubmaster

As part of Pack 6 Quincy's membership drive this year they are offering free registration to any boy who is new to scouting. Why sign your son up for Cub Scouts you ask? There are so many reasons, first of all Cub Scouting program has been an educational experience concerned with values, important values that are not often taught. The Cub program is designed to build character, physical fitness, practical skills, and service. Character development is a key element of the Cub Scout program, the 12 core values, of Citizenship, Compassion, Cooperation, Courage, Faith, Health, Honesty, Perseverance, Positive Attitude, Resourcefulness, Respect, and Responsibility are integrated throughout all elements of the program—service projects, ceremonies, games, skits, songs, crafts, and all the other activities enjoyed at den and pack meetings.

Cub Scouting is a family-oriented program designed specifically to address the needs of younger boys. Some of the best things about Cub Scouting are the activities you get to do: camping, hiking, pinewood derby, going on field trips, or doing projects that help your hometown and the people who live there. Cub Scouting means "doing." Cub Scout Camping is where we Learn to live in the outdoors. Camping takes you on exciting adventures into the natural world. Cub Scout Derbies - Racing in a Cub Scout derby is great fun. You'll get to design your racing vehicle, work with a parent to build it, and see it perform on race day. Outings and Field Trips - "Outing" is a big part of Scouting. Cub Scouts get out and about with many kinds of outdoor fun, such as field trips, hikes, nature and conservation. Service Projects - Doing service projects together is one way that Cub Scouts keep their promise "to help other people."

Cub Scouting is for boys in the 1st through 5th grades. Cub Scouts meet in their dens once each week, and a pack meeting is held for all Cub Scouts and their families once a month. A den is made up of 7 to 10 boys of the same age who are led by a Den Leader and Assistant Den Leader who are parent volunteers. Meetings are Wednesday nights from 6:30 to 7:30, meetings are held at the Houghs Neck Congregational Church at 310 Manet Ave.

At Pack 6 we strive to keep the cost of scouting low by keeping our registration fees the lowest in the City of Quincy and subsidize the cost of special outings through our popcorn fundraising. We are a well-established Pack with a long history in the Community. In 2015 we are celebrating our 75th Anniversary, we are the oldest continuously run Pack in the Greater Boston Area. Police Seize $150,000 In Heroin; 2 Held On Drug, Gun Charges

Glynn of the Special Investigations and Narcotics Unit.

The search followed a month-long investigation of drug sales from the address, Glynn said in a statement; that investigation revealed the apartment was the base for a mid-level heroin distribution operation. Individuals stored and packaged bulk heroin for street sales and larger quantities, approximately 10 grams each, known as "fingers," according to Glynn.

Quincy police detectives, while conducting surveillance of the apartment earlier in the evening, observed a drug deal at approximately 7 p.m. and arrested both the seller and buyer, Glynn said.

During the search of the apartment, Glynn said police recovered approximately 600 grams of heroin with a street value of $150,000; one Glock Model 23 .40 caliber semi-automatic pistol, which was reported stolen in Manchester, N.H.; one magazine with 13 rounds of ammunition; $4,091 in cash; one finger press, which Glynn said is used to compress heroin; a 2005 Jeep and a 2002 Chevrolet Trailblazer, pending forfeiture; and a replica .40 caliber pistol.

"This investigation will put a significant dent in the heroin sales locally. The combination of cash, large quantity of heroin, vehicles and weapons seized disrupts the chain of profits, product, transportation and security, all key elements for this illegal business. Peace and safety were restored to the residents of the building and neighborhood," Glynn said in a statement.

"Also utilized during this operation, Quincy Officer Paul Foley and the newest member of the department, his drug certified partner, (K-9), Charlie. Charlie was placed in service within the past 60 days. Investigations such as this demonstrate how the citizens and police work together to provide a safe community."

Rizzo Stepping Down As Quincy Chamber President

His business development experience also includes a number of years working for the South Shore Chamber of Commerce and more than eight years as a small business owner.

The QCC's Board of Directors is searching for a new president to continue the progress established by Rizzo.

"In collaboration with the City of Quincy, the Quincy Chamber plays an important role in attracting commercial investment and supporting a growing tourism industry through its tourism arm, Discover Quincy," said Fleming. "It is a prime opportunity for someone eager to play a leadership role in the future growth of one of the Commonwealth's most up-and-coming markets."

Interested candidates are invited to email a letter of interest and a resume to efleming@flemingpc.com by Oct. 9. In the interim period, Rizzo will continue to serve in his current role until a suitable replacement is found.

Housing, Financial Data Positive For Norfolk Real Estate Market

Reviewing the latest housing and financial data, Norfolk County Register of Deeds, William P. O'Donnell said there was some good news coming out of the Norfolk Country real estate market for the month of August; which saw property transactions rise by nearly double digits.

"The total number of deeds recorded for the month of August increased 9 percent compared to August 2014. These numbers are confirmation of my strong belief that Norfolk County is a destination location for individuals and families to live and work. Reinforcing this belief is the 5% increase in total dollar volume of commercial and residential sales to $737 million," O'Donnell said.

On the flip side, the average sale price of Norfolk County property decreased 2% to $597,009.

"We need to watch this figure closely to see if this decrease that took place in August was an aberration or a slight market correction that is taking hold." O'Donnell noted.

The mortgage market continued its improvement. Statistics showed that in August, 2,607 mortgages were recorded compared to 2,394 during the same time period in 2014. Total mortgage indebtedness for the month was $1.058 billion, a 47 percent decrease compared to the previous August. This decrease is explained by a large mortgage that was taken out against commercial retail property in Dedham, Canton and Medfield in August of 2014.

Another positive result that occurred in August was the reduced number of foreclosure deeds filed and maybe more importantly, a significant reduction in Notice to Foreclose Mortgage filings. There were 19 foreclosure deeds filed in August as compared to 21 in August 2014. "Lending institutions have been working through a backlog of foreclosures that resulted from the economic downturn that occurred in 2008. Hopefully, this reduction in foreclosure deed filings will continue," O'Donnell said.

There was also a reduced number of Notice to Foreclose Mortgage recordings. "There were 31 Notice to Foreclose Mortgages recorded in August as compared to 52 year over year. Notice to Foreclose Mortgage is the first step in the foreclosure process. While one foreclosure is one too many, it is hoped these numbers are an indication that the worst of the crisis is behind us," O'Donnell said.

The Registry continues to partner with Quincy Community Action Programs at (617) 479-8181 x-376 and Neighbor Works Southern Mass at (508) 598-0950 to help anyone who has received a Notice to Foreclose Mortgage from a lender. Another option for homeowners is to call the Massachusetts Attorney General's HomeCorps program at (617) 573-5333.

Homestead recordings increased 9 percent in August compared to one year ago. Homestead recordings provide limited protection against the forced sale of an individual's primary residence to satisfy unsecured debt up to $500,000.

"While the trend lines are positive, there are three notes of caution, said O'Donnell. "First, I continue to be concerned about the level of housing inventory. Increased inventory is critical to maintaining growth in the real estate market. Secondly, while August was a volatile month for the stock market, I remain concerned about a potential move by the Federal Reserve Bank to increase interest rates and the effect it might have on borrowing. Finally, we need to keep a close eye on the new federal disclosure rules, scheduled to go into effect in early October, and the resulting impact it will have on real estate closings and mortgage processing, particularly as we enter the 4th quarter."

Arts, Crafts Contest Winners

This year's Quincy Recreation Arts and Crafts display at City Hall Plaza saw a year of exceptional projects with over 300 ballots cast with an outstanding voter turnout from both the public and the playgrounds.

Each of the 15 parks spent many hours creating their projects, which made for a fabulous final display and a close competition.

This year's competition held within it a theme. The theme of the projects this year was Disney. All projects created were from a variety of Disney characters, movies, and themes. Coming in first place this year was Beechwood's "Beauty and the Beast."

The battle for second place was extremely close and ended in a tie. Taking second place this year was "The Little Mermaid" by Montclair and "The Disney World Castle" by Heron Road.

Third place went to Kincaide Playground's "Finding Nemo."

Arts and Crafts Specialists Kara Reardon, Mollie Oldham, and Courtney Timmins organized the display.

The Recreation leaders at the winning playground, Beechwood Playground, are Andrew Minton, Andrew Jaehnig, Kerin and Karyn McEvoy. Participants Ryan Boretti, Nicholas and Donovan Murray, and Harrison Stengal spent many hours

Farmers Market At Home In New Location

Positive Feedback On First Day At Pageant Field

By JOE REARDON

A cool, late summer breeze descended on Pageant Field Friday as the enormously popular Quincy Farmers Market took root for the first time in its new location overlooking Quincy Bay after nearly 34 years in the Hancock Municipal lot.

Hundreds of shoppers of all ages roamed the area for deals on fresh vegetables, fruits, maple syrup, fresh eggs and desserts. The vendors' spirits were high as they sold their goods to the customers, some they recognized as well as first timers. A folk singer played his acoustic guitar on the stage of the Ruth Gordon Amphitheater and there was violin music in background as well, giving the market a festive atmosphere.

Market director Janet Little believes the move into the more rural location gives the farmers market a country feel. "It's a beautiful space and there's a beautiful view of the water up here," said Little. "Families can bring their children and spend more time - bring a frisbee up, horseshoes, play games. It's got a more festive atmosphere almost like a fair. Everything is fresh and grown in Massachusetts.

"I'm very happy. The people seem very positive about the move. The season's been very nice. We've had really good weather. The farmers and vendors felt it would be a better transition midseason because they could talk to their customers and verbally tell them what was going on. The farmer's market is direct consumer to customer. They come back week after week. This is a very nice crowd. There's nice shade up here and we're going to have picnic tables put out."

The vendors decided it made sense to move the location midseason instead of next June to give the shoppers a feel for the new area. Executive Director of Parks, Chris Cassani, originally went to Little eight months ago and recommended Pageant Field as the new home for the market because the Hancock lot was slated for development. Cassani was on hand Friday, taking in the

UNDER TOM KOCH, YOUR PROPERTY TAX RATE HAS GONE UP 35%
SO WHERE HAVE YOUR TAXPAYER DOLLARS GONE?

DOWNTOWN DEBACLE

Taxpayers are on the hook for $30 million in debt from Tom Koch's mismanagement of the downtown – plus millions more in lost commercial tax revenue from bulldozing existing businesses

HUNT ST. PARKING LOT

Tom Koch forced 14 Quincy families from their homes so he could build a parking lot and sports field that nobody requested

20 FURNACE AVE

Tom Koch spent $485,000 of your money on a piece of property that shouldn't have cost taxpayers a dime. That money went to Tom's childhood friend Dan Flynn, who was recently arrested on federal fraud charges

AND THERE'S MORE...

- City Hall Renovations – $12.7 Million
- Coddington Hall - $10.5 Million
- Snow Removal – $13.5 Million, TWICE what larger cities spent!
- Tom Koch's 23% pay raise — he asked for 30%

QUINCY NEEDS BUSINESS LEADERSHIP

Quincy's $269 million budget needs a CEO to manage it — not career politicians. With a degree in Finance and 25 years of business experience, Anne Mahoney has a proven track record of successfully managing multimillion-dollar projects, all of them on time and on budget. As your mayor, Anne will eliminate wasteful spending. She will hold the line on property taxes, and she'll make sound financial decisions that benefit all Quincy residents — not just developers, politicians and the Mayor's friends. NQ Girls Volleyball Young But Talented

Hosts Hanover Friday, Visits Quincy Monday

By JOE REARDON

Injuries can decimate even the best teams in any sport, but when you have a young squad still finding its way on the the court and battling injuries at the same time, the results can be crippling.

That was North Quincy's 2014 campaign in a nutshell.

Last year the Raiders had more than its share of injuries that kept the team from rising above the .500 mark in a very competitive Patriot League that includes the likes of Hingham, Duxbury, Hingham, Hanover and Middleboro. NQ Coach Kerry Ginty has seen the landscape of volleyball in the state change with teams emerging stronger than ever. "The level of volleyball in the league and in the state is getting better," said Ginty.

And you could say this season is off to a somewhat ominous start with setter Jen Butka sustaining an ACL injury that will sideline her for the fall.

Ginty, who captained North Quincy and then the University of Connecticut during her playing days, can feel for a disappointed Butka who worked tirelessly to get ready for the Raiders' season, only to now face surgery to repair her damaged knee.

"She did a lot of work in the offseason to get better and ready to go," said Ginty.

Still, Ginty, now in her 10th season as head coach, is confident North Quincy can be competitive this fall. And with her impressive background, Ginty has volleyball smarts to make adjustments during the season to right the ship if North Quincy finds itself in a rut.

The roster is still a young one, but it does have loads of talent and potential and that should bode well if the Raiders can just avoid those costly injuries that can change a season on a dime.

Junior setter Sammie Caldwell is back and brings with her a wealth of varsity experience. Senior Katie Sautter got plenty of playing time on the JV squad last fall and is ready to make the move up to varsity. Ginty is looking for Sautter to be an impact player for the Raiders.

"We're looking for her to step up and take the reigns," Ginty said. "We're still a little on the young side. But we have a lot of girls who want to get out there and compete.

"I would just like to stay healthy this year and learn to compete against teams that may have a little more experience than us. I really want the kids to have that experience. I think we were so young last year and got beat down with injuries. They're anxious to get out there and see how they can compete."

Fans got their first look at the team on Tuesday in a home tilt against Marshfield. The Red Raiders host Brockton Wednesday and Hanover Friday at 5:30 p.m. They play cross-town rival Quincy Monday, Sept. 14 at 5:30 p.m. at QHS.

Probably the best news coming out of the North Quincy camp is that Isabelle Flaherty is back and healthy. Regarded as one of the best outside players in the league, Flaherty missed time last year with a concussion. "She's one of the best outside players in the Patriot League," said Ginty.

Ginty has a couple of options at the all-important libero position with Trina Liang and Sarah Tsan, both strong talents defensively on the back the row. Tsan is yet another player who missed playing time in 2014 with a concussion.

Junior Remy Aucoin is one of the more versatile players on the team and should see plenty of time up front blocking and on the middle line.

Sophomore Julia Klincewicz worked as hard as anyone during the offseason and will be a starting middle blocker.

Junior setter Kaleigh Manton prepared well in the offseason and will be looking to have a strong season on the court.

QYFL Arsenals Stocked Of Talented Players

Preview Of 65th Season – Games Get Underway Saturday, Sunday

By SEAN HALPIN

Quincy Youth Football League will kick off its 65th season this coming weekend.

On Saturday morning, Junior Varsity (6-7th grade) and Freshman (3-5thgrade) teams will launch the season at 9 and 10:30 a.m. at various locations around the city.

Varsity action begins Sunday afternoon with a triple-header at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

The Milton Mustangs will host the North Quincy Apaches at 1 p.m.

The West Quincy Elks will battle the Quincy Point Panthers at 2:30 p.m.

At 4 p.m., a rematch of the 2013 Title game will take place between the Houghs Neck Manets and the Squantum Storm.

Quincy Youth Football held its 18th Annual Varsity Jamboree Sept. 3 at Veterans' Stadium. This perennial event showcased all top players and teams around the QYFL.

Here is a preview of the 2015 QYFL Lineup:

The Squantum Storm will defend their 2014 QYFL title on the backs of two returning QYFL All-stars in FB Josh Jackson and RB Mikey Adamson. Jackson will grind it out between the tackles while Adamson will attack the edges to balance out this strong running game.

Seventh grader Tommy Roache will handle the quarterback duties for the Storm.

Veteran Coach Mike Killilea will look to Erik Mayo, Shane O'Connell, Michael Dooley, Adam Higgins and Sean Jackson to fill in key roles in their 2015 campaign.

The North Quincy Apaches quest for the QYFL title will rest on the shoulders their solid "Wall O' Stone" offensive line. This group features returning QYFL All-Stars Thomas Le and Thomas McCormack and veteran players Mikey Levine, Declan Geary, Will Farrell and TE Aiden Murphy. Eighth grade players Andrew Gott and Will Whooley will provide leadership on both sides of the football along with newcomer Coleman Flaherty.

First year Head Coach Ryan Craig looks to a solid group of 7th grade skill players to power his offense: QB Danny Scolaro, RB Tyler Le, RB Ryan Tapper and Wide-outs, Jamal Maximillien and James Ward.

Coach Craig remarked, "We have a young varsity squad with some talented players that complement our solid core of veterans. I'm confident we will compete each and every week this season."

The West Quincy Elks look to recapture QYFL glory after a rebuilding year in 2014. Quarterback Franco Calabro will lead an Offense for the Elks that features returning starters RB Stuart Dozier, WR Franck Yhomby, WR Landon Pierron and TE Patrick Devoy. The Elks also have a strong group of players moving up from the 2014 Junior Varsity Championship Team. Look for Eoin Gormley, Aaron O'Toole, Ethan Voeun Ros, Sean O'Toole and Milo Santangelo to play key roles in the Elks lineup.

Coach Justin Thorley also looks to newcomers Aidan and Evan Dyer to be impact players on this West Quincy squad.

The Quincy Point Panthers return just one starter from last season in 6'1" 250-pound Tackle Sean Butts. That does not discourage Coach Noel DiBona who will look to a strong group of Jayvees moving up this season.

QB Sean Dwyer will lead the Panther offense that features RB Proudley Louis, WR Joseph Osgood, RB Michael Coote and newcomer Rolinsky Saint Cyr. Opening holes for the Point Panthers will be Lineman Billy Nguyen, Butts, Adam

Reinhart, Brandon Tran and Manny Maloof. Coach DiBona commented on his team: "We have had a solid preseason with scrimmages against the Apaches and Storm and we look to contend in a tough Myers Division this season."

The Houghs Neck Manets were the QYFL runner-up last year and look to return to the title game this season. The Manets will be lead on offense my RB Isaiah Steinberg, QB Shane Murphy and FB Mike Cugini.

The Manets backfield will have a massive offensive line to open holes. They are led by veteran Kevin Ferent, Gen Reardon, Devante Williams Aidan O'Donahue and Tyler Duncan. Coach Mike Flavin looks to newcomers Riley O'Connor, Kevin Gallant, Steven Dunn and Derek Little to play a big role in the Manets' game plan.

The Milton Mustangs will be coached by Rich Laine this year, who returns to the sideline after a brief hiatus. Coach Laine will look to veteran QB Liam Regan to lead his Offense. The Mustangs have a strong cast of returning starters in RB Stephen Joyce, WR Rile Rhodes, TE Michael Gemma and Linemen Keith Savage, Anthony Golden and Larry Darcy.

The Milton squad will also feature WR Ethan Aaker, OL Shea Johns, WR Ernie Mealey, RB Louis Timmins and WR Deon Davidson.

The 2015 season looks to be one of the most competitive years in QYFL history – there is no clear-cut favorite to win the championship this year but,every team looks to be in the hunt.

For more information on the QYFL, check them out on the web at www.QYFL.org. Many teams are still accepting new players.

Brian Buckley New NQHS Girls' Basketball Coach

By BILL GRIFFIN

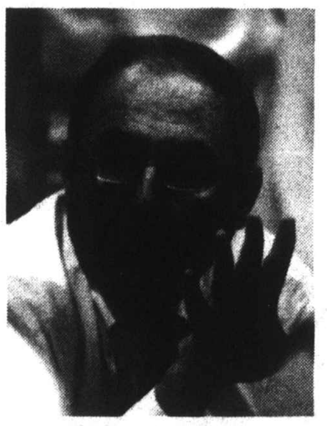
North Quincy could not have done better.

Brian Buckley has lived a splendid 41-year coaching life which has graced high school and college, men and women, boys and girls, AAU and recreation leagues. There have been great victories and school records, and deep runs in tournaments which one year brought him to the floor of the Boston Garden.

There has been more than basketball. It has also been a wonderful time of touching young lives and building relationships which have lasted far beyond the basketball court, far beyond high school or college. A look at his resume brings three words to mind: Hall of Fame.

Buckley will be the new girls basketball coach at North. He succeeds Jess Worden who resigned after four years as head coach. He is a Quincy guy and he is coming home.

"North was on the short list of the jobs which would interest me," said Buckley. "I grew up and lived in Quincy all my life. I couldn't be more excited about the opportunity. I live close and I have a lot of time to devote to the program."



BRIAN BUCKLEY

Buckley played for Archbishop Williams and was on the team that lost to Catholic Memorial in 1969 in the quarterfinals of the old Tech Tourney in Boston Garden. While a student at Boston State, he took his first coaching job as an assistant to Paul Hunter at B.C. High.

A fine story had begun.

He was an assistant for three years and the head coach for six years at Quincy College. His 1984 team won the Greater Boston Small College League.

Buckley coached for six years at Curry and led a team to a school record in wins for a season. He also brought Curry to its first championship in the Commonwealth Coast League.

He coached for six years at B.C. High and guided the Eagles to their first outright championship in the Catholic Conference. He led the Eagles to the state semifinals where they fell to Chris Herren and Durfee.

He was an assistant at Suffolk for two years. Buckley coached women for the first time as an assistant at Emerson. He was head girls coach at Archbishop Williams for a year and led the Bishops to the tournament and second place finish in the Catholic Conference.

He was athletic director for three years at North Quincy and assisted Jim Rendle with the freshman team.

Buckley coached at Scituate from 2004-2012 and established a rich basketball tradition. The Sailors made the tournament in seven of Buckley's eight years as head coach. In six of the seven years that they went to the tourney, they won at least one game. In 2011, Scituate lost by a point to Hopkinton in the sectional finals.

In 2012, the Sailors beat Natick in the sectional finals and lost in overtime to Reading in the EMass finals in the TD Garden. Three players from that team are now playing college basketball: Kelly Martin (Stonehill) Megan Otto (Babson) and Shannon Brady (Bowdoin).

This is a run of brilliant basketball of which most coaches can merely dream. However, when asked to look back at these 41 years, Buckley speaks of people, not victories.

"I have great memories, the best is having a chance to make a difference in a young person's life," said Buckley. "I have stayed close to my players. I've gone to their weddings, graduations and baby showers. Thanks to social media, I can stay in touch with them as far away as Florida and California."

Along the way, there are names like Dave McLaughlin, Kevin Moran, Kaitlyn St. George and Jen Reddish. They are a small sample of Buckley's players who have become coaches. The love of the game he brings to his players is a strong one.

"How many players have become coaches? I don't know. I should have started keeping track when I was younger," said Buckley.

This enthusiasm is the first thing Buckley wants to instill at North.

"I couldn't be more enthusiastic and I want everyone to feel that excitement and enthusiasm. That's the first thing I try to bring to a new job," said Buckley.

Buckley saw North play a few times last year. Remy Aucoin, Marissa McGue and Kerin Coleman are among several veterans who return this year. However, Buckley brings no judgments about players to his job. Everyone starts new and will have every chance to show what she can do on the court.

"I come in with an open mind. Everyone starts equal at tryouts," he said. "My father was a coach, and he taught me to trust and evaluate only what you see. I want to see them practice and play with my own eyes. I want to get to know and understand them as players and people."

Buckley loves to run, but he knows well that he needs to use the style which best fits his talent.

"I love to run, but, for example, if you have trouble rebounding, you have to slow it down. We'll use the style that works best for the players," he said.

Even after he retired from Scituate, the pull of the game remained strong. He announced the Stonehill games on the radio. He coached an AAU team for a season. He coached in the Quincy Recreation League. Old coaches never fade away, they just wait for another chance that feels just right.

North fit perfectly.

"The time at North I spent as an AD was such a good experience. I met good people and established great relationships. This is just where I want to be," said Buckley.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Saturday, August 29, 2015, at approximately 2:25 a.m., Officer Mark Connolly was dispatched to the parking lot of CVS in Wollaston for a report of a person sleeping or unconscious in a car.

Upon arrival, the Officer observed a man sitting in the driver's seat of a vehicle with his head facing down towards his lap and drool dripping from his mouth. Officer Connolly also observed a syringe on the driver's lap and a spoon containing a light brown powdery substance on the center armrest. Believing this to be a Heroin overdose, the Officer retrieved the Narcan kit from his cruiser while requesting an ambulance be dispatched. Officers William Griffin and Thomas Gaeta Jr arrived on scene at this time.

As Officer Connolly opened the driver's side front door of the vehicle, the driver awakened and immediately concealed the needle and cotton that was on his lap. The Officer instructed the driver to place the items on the floor and get out of the vehicle, which he did. He was then able to stand outside of his car without assistance and was alert. Officer Gaeta observed a clear bag containing a light brown powdery substance that resembled Heroin on the passenger seat. After a search of the vehicle, no other drugs were found.

Numerous capped syringes were removed from the vehicle and disposed of in the HazMat container. The spoon containing Heroin and the clear bag containing Heroin were placed into separate clear bags, heat sealed, placed into a sealed evidence bag and then placed into the drug lock box at the station.

The driver, a 37 year old Quincy resident, was placed under arrest for possession of class A Heroin and transported to the Quincy Police Station by Officer Griffin. Nice Work!

ANOTHER JOB WELL DONE: On Wednesday, September 2, 2015, at approximately 9:15 p.m, Officers Jeffrey Bossart and Steve Dabilis were dispatched to a West Quincy address for a reported unwanted husband who was locked in the home's bathroom doing drugs.

Upon arrival, the Officers met with the suspect's wife, who said that her husband has been in and out of drug treatment and just came home tonight, locked himself in the bathroom, and was smoking crack cocaine. She informed the Officers that her two children were in their bedroom.

The Officers made their way to the bathroom and found the door to be locked. After knocking and identifying themselves as Quincy Police Officers, the suspect opened the door clad only in a towel. When told why they were there, the suspect initially stated he already smoked all the crack he had and then changed his story, stating that he flushed the crack-cocaine down the toilet. Officer Bossart, believing that the suspect was being untruthful, again asked the suspect about drugs on the premises. The Officer expressed his concern regarding the suspect's two young children in the next room finding and ingesting the drugs by accident should they find them. The suspect then stated he would give the Officers the drugs and led them to the bathroom, telling them that he hid the drugs in a drawer. A check of the drawer showed that there were no drugs there.

As the suspect spoke to the Officers, they noted that his speech was mumbled and consistent with someone having an object(s) in their mouth. Officer Bossart instructed the suspect to open his mouth so he could look inside for drugs. The suspect did not open his mouth and in fact closed his lips even more. The Officer could immediately tell that the suspect was using his tongue to retrieve something from his gums. When instructed not to swallow what was in his mouth and spit it out, the suspect again refused and continued to move his tongue around.

At this time, the Officers grabbed the suspect by the jaw to prevent him from swallowing any drugs and pushed him onto the bed, instructing him to spit out what was in his mouth. The suspect then spit a small plastic bag out from his mouth which contained crack-cocaine. The suspect confirmed that it was crack. He was asked if he swallowed anything and he adamantly denied this.

The suspect, a 53 year old Quincy resident, was transported to the station and charged with, "Possession of a Class B Substance (Crack-cocaine). The wife told the Officers afterward that her husband has had a drug addiction to crack-cocaine for years. He had been in and out of drug treatment over the last few weeks and when he came home tonight she told him he could not do drugs in the house. She said that he proceeded to the bathroom anyways and locked himself in, so she called the Police. She added that lately her husband has been asking her for thousands of dollars at a time, which she refuses to give to him as she knows it's to support his drug habit. The victim was advised of her 209A rights and she refused needing an emergency restraining order. She said that he never gets physical or violent, that he is a good man who just has a really bad drug addiction. The children were in good spirits and playing in their bedroom, unaware of what was occurring in the home. Nice Work!

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Personal matters claim a good deal of the Lamb's time in the early part of the week. But by midweek, pragmatic considerations (work, school, job-seeking, etc.) begin to take priority.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) The seasonal shift ignites the Bovine's creative aspects. You could do well if you try to combine your penchant for innovation with the more pragmatic demands of the week.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Ideas come easily to you this week. And never mind that some might suggest they're unworkable and/or impractical. It's your vision that counts. Work them out and see what turns up.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Personal matters continue to dominate the early part of the week. By midweek, more workaday issues once again begin to emerge. Balance your time to give both the attention they need.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A new contact could provide an expanded opportunity. But be sure you get all the facts before you consider signing on. Ask questions, and be wary if you don't get the right answers.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) An unexpected development could cause some supposedly resolved disagreements to reignite. Deal with the situation before it leads to some really serious problems.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A clash of work-linked viewpoints needs to be discussed openly, honestly and calmly by all concerned before it can impede progress on an ongoing project.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) The Scorpion's pragmatic side helps you accept the possibility that a change of plans might be the wise thing to do. Be sure to weigh all your considerations carefully.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Some people might not take no for an answer. Never mind. Keep your resolve if you're sure you don't want to be involved in a potentially sticky situation.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) All other facts and figures aside, it's what you learn about potential colleagues that can be most helpful in assessing any decisions you're likely to make regarding a new project.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You might want to reconsider some of your outside commitments if they continue to demand more time than you can spare. Be honest with yourself when making a decision.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Pay attention to that inner voice of Piscean wisdom counseling you to remove those rose-colored glasses and take an honest look at any decisions you might face this week.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a penchant for persuasion that would make you a fine candidate for a political career.

MOTHERS Club at HN Church Now Seaside Sisters

MOTHERS Club of the Houghs Neck Congregational Church is now the Seaside Sisters.

Club leaders said the name change is more encompassing. Although MOTHERS was an acronym (Members Organized To Help, Educate, Reach out and Socialize), some people thought you had to be a mother, or a young mother to join. That has never been the case.

Also, you do not need to have an affiliation with the HN Congregational Church. The club has included and welcomed women from the wider community and from many faiths for decades.

The Seaside Sisters is a social group of women who meet on the third Tuesday of each month from September through May at 7 p.m. in the church hall at 310 Manet Avenue. Members learn about all types of issues through guest speakers who range from local business owners, public safety officials, community volunteers, and others.

Members also do crafts, cook, sing, play and engage in a variety of activities. Money is raised through dues, special programs and raffles to benefit a number of organizations which support children in some way. The club also donates to the church.

All adult women are welcome to join and men are also invited to attend the programs. Business meetings are held at 7 p.m. and programs begin at 7:30 p.m. each month.

On Sept. 15, the program will feature Spirit Communication with the Rev. Shari Johnson. Rev. Shari will be discussing spiritual communication or what some call "Mediumship" and will answer any questions you may have about communicating with the spirit world. She will also give demonstrations of spirit communication.

Rev Shari has been consciously using her intuition from age 11 and has 25 years of experience using her psychic abilities and 14 years of experience helping people connect to their loved ones in spirit.

Farmers Market At Home In Pageant Field

low key, country fair-style atmosphere.

"I think it's a terrific turnout," said Cassani. "I notice there's a lot more little kids here with their parents. It's a great spot for the kids to run around. This is a great fit for us especially because this time of year, after the softball season, there's a bit of a lull in activity up here. There's a lot of positives to it."

Cassani believes the market could tap into the late afternoon traffic of people driving home from work that use Southern Artery to avoid Quincy Center. "They can pop in real quick here and do their shopping," he said. "There's delicious fruit and all kinds of things being grown around here (Massachusetts). The pork guy raises the hogs not too far from us in Foxboro."

Mohamed Ghobashi, the owner of the Kabob House, travels to farmers markets all over the country and was immediately sold on the Pageant Field location. "This is the greatest environment you could find," said Ghobashi between selling chicken kabobs with 32 spices. "Everybody has a million dollar smile. We have wonderful vendors here and wonderful, fresh products."

Quincy Sun Photos/Robert Bosworth

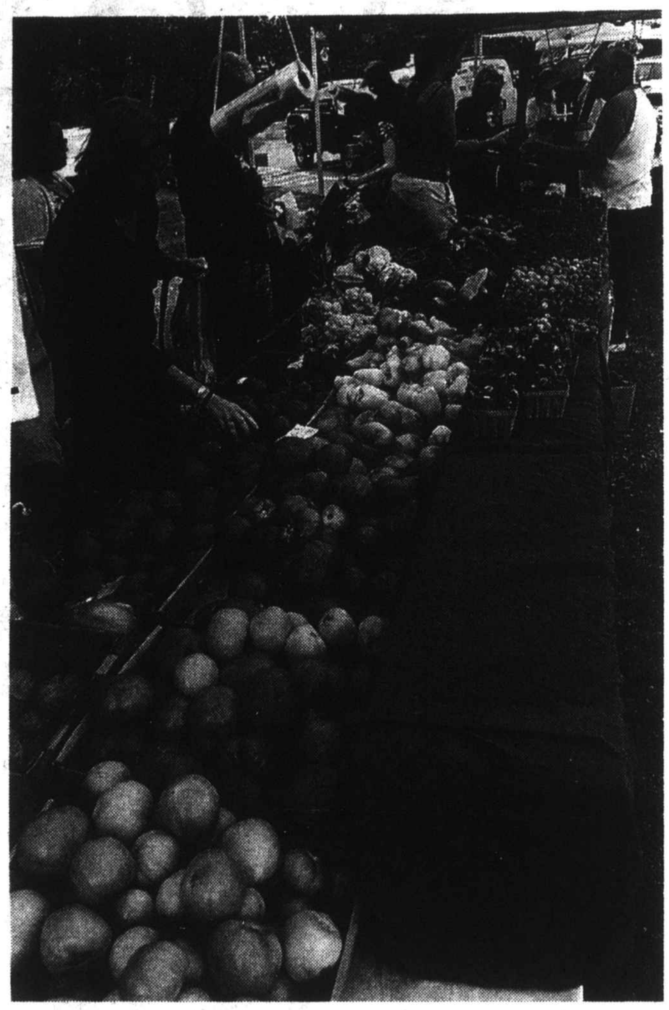
Ian Ackermann made the 3-1/2 hour trip from Cabot VT, to sell products from his maple farm where he makes 1,200 gallons of syrup a year. Bottles of maple syrup were stacked on his table along with maple cotton candy and other goodies produced from the maple trees on the 36 acres of land he bought three years ago. This is Ackermann's second year working at the farmers market.

"I like this more than the parking lot," said Ackermann. "I didn't think there'd be this many people here. There's a lot of people. The one thing I liked about the other place was the foot traffic. Everybody who worked around there went to the market. They may come here too though. Who knows. I like the wind here. It keeps you cool. It's shady too. These trees are going to give us some nice shade on the hot days."

Ackermann said the farmer market community of vendors is a friendly one. "I know all these vendors from last year," he said. "We're like one big family. I see them all over the place."

Darlene Sicard, the owner of D's Lectables out of Seekonk, was selling baked goods including cookies and cakes for her third year at the farmers market. Sicard believes the move was a good one. "I think it's going to be good," she said. "I've seen a lot of new faces and heard a lot of positive remarks. It's a lot nicer venue for a farmers market. I definitely think there's better parking, there's music and it's a great place for children."

Quincy's Caroline Bowes strolled through the area and has been going to farmers markets "forever" was impressed with the new market location and considers it a huge upgrade over the parking lot. "I used to come a lot but I've only been here once or twice this year," she said. "I think it's better at Pageant. I like fresh vegetables and I like seeing that people care. I like the local stuff. I think if they get the advertising out it's going to be a lot better up here."



SHOPPERS CHECK OUT a variety of fresh produce including tomatoes, peppers and other vegetables at the Quincy Farmers Market. The market is open Fridays from 11:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. through Nov. 20 at its new location at Pageant Field in Merrymount Park, 1 Merrymount Parkway (Southern Artery).

Jeff Kasica was busy putting fresh corn on the tables of the Stillman's Farms vendor spot. The farm grows corn on its fields in New Braintree in Western Mass. "The day's going pretty well," said Kasica. "This is nice because it's set up back from the road."

Solar City representative Suzanne Raynes of Quincy echoed the feelings of the vendors. "There's a better atmosphere," she said. "We're in a beautiful park and before we were in a parking lot. It's a better location to bring in people from other neighborhoods in Quincy. There's a lot of room to expand and there's room for people to bring their kids and dogs to run around."

The Quincy Farmers Market is open Fridays through Nov. 20 at Pageant Field in Merrymount Park, 1 Merrymount Parkway (Southern Artery). Hours are 11:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

"Facts Are Stubborn Things"

— John Adams

Others will try to mislead you. Mayor Tom Koch leads with honesty, trust, and the facts. A lot of them.

- Two national studies rank Quincy among the safest and most livable cities in America.
- The City's first track and field facility.
- New Central Middle School, 80% paid for by state.
- The first phase of redevelopment in Quincy Center, after 40 years of waiting, is underway.

Final Season For NQHS Hockey Program?

By BILL GRIFFIN

Although a final decision will not likely be made until next April, there is a strong possibility that the upcoming 2015-2016 season will be the final one for North Quincy's boys hockey team.

"No final decision has been made, but that's the way it is trending right now," said North Quincy Athletic Director Michael Joyce. "Our coach (Matt Gibbons) and I will look at the turnout this winter. Right now, it doesn't look like we'll have enough players to field a JV team. If that's the case, there is a good chance this will be the final year for the program at North."

The issue is one of numbers.

City Receives $4.2M State Grant For Park

By SCOTT JACKSON

Gov. Charlie Baker on Monday announced the state is providing Quincy with a $4.2 million grant, which will pay for infrastructure work necessary before a new public park linking City Hall and the United First Parish Church can be built.

Baker, Lt. Gov. Karyn Polito, and Matthew Beaton, the state's secretary of Energy and Environmental Affairs, joined Mayor Thomas Koch and other local officials at Monday's announcement, which took place at the steps of the United First Parish Church, the final resting place of Presidents John and John Quincy Adams and their wives, First Ladies Abigail and Louisa.

The new park – the Adams Hancock Common, formerly known as Adams Green – will link the two historic buildings that are currently divided by Hancock Street. Baker on Monday said John and Abigail Adams deserve a better final resting place than the middle of a busy intersection.

"John and Abigail Adams were probably two of the most important figures in the early years of American history. Books have been written about them. HBO specials have been done on them. Multiple actors and actresses have had the honor of playing them," Baker said.

"I think it's important we do better. George Washington, Thomas Jefferson and John Adams. He's right up there with the other two and we should never forget that just because he happens to be a little closer to home."

"A truly great state is merely the function of its great communities," the governor added. "This project here today will take a great community like Quincy and make it better while at the same time recognizing the incredibly important and significant role that John Adams and [Abigail] Adams and John Quincy Adams played in this nation's birth."

Koch said the $4.2 million is for subsurface infrastructure work needed before the park itself can be constructed.

"We're an old city with old infrastructure. In order to build out the park we need to deal with that infrastructure," the mayor said. "This grant today allows us to do that to keep the momentum going."

The city in 2012 received a $1 million state grant to

COLOR PLAY

No other gemstone puts on a display of color in the way that opal does. In fact, this birthstone for the month of October can flash spectral colors with an intensity and quality of hue that can even surpass the "fire" of diamond. This ability comes from an orderly network of silica spheres within the stone that diffract light into a display of color that would make a rainbow envious. Because opal is softer than many other gemstones, it is best used in earrings, necklaces, and brooches. Women can use these applications to their advantage by wearing dangling opal earrings that catch the light and throw a firework display of color back into the eyes of dazzled onlookers.

An opal is a classic stone that can add a sense of refinement and allure to your jewelry collection. From necklaces to rings, there are wonderful opal selections from which to choose. Our store at 1402 Hancock St. in Quincy Center carries the finest and most recognized names in jewelry and gifts. Who's It Gonna Be?

Who's it gonna be?

That's the biggest question heading into next week's preliminary election: which two candidates will be nominated for mayor?

Four are on the ballot in the only city-wide preliminary election contest next Thursday, Sept. 24: incumbent Mayor Thomas Koch, Councillor Doug Gutro, School Committeewoman Anne Mahoney and former Mayor William Phelan.

KOCH

MAHONEY

The top two vote getters in the mayoral preliminary election will advance to the final election Tuesday, Nov. 3. For the third and fourth place finishers their mayoral bids will come to an end.

So who will get those two coveted nominations?

Perhaps the better question is: who will join Mayor Koch on the ballot Nov. 3rd?

That's because no incumbent mayor has ever finished "out of the money" in a preliminary election. The incumbent has always secured one of the two nominations. So, history on his side, you can pretty much pencil in Koch as one of the nominees before all the ballots are counted next Thursday evening.

So who grabs that all-important second nomination?

Some think Phelan. Some think Gutro. Some think Mahoney. You can make a strong case for each of them.

Phelan has been elected mayor before and unseated a long-serving incumbent to capture the mayor's seat.

Gutro has won city-wide as a councillor at-large candidate and is the longest serving official – 14 years – amongst the four candidates on the mayoral preliminary ballot.

And Mahoney has topped the school ballot twice and polled more than 8,300 votes when she unsuccessfully challenged Koch for mayor four years ago.

What do some political observers look for in gauging support heading into an election?

Some consider lawn signs as one indication. And driving around the city there seems to be plenty of signs for all four candidates. Drive down Quincy Shore Drive for example and it's hard to spot a house without a sign in front of it. Heck, drive down Sea Street and there's at least one house with multiple mayoral candidate signs on the property.

Another barometer prognosticators use is campaign cash. Who's raising the most? And where is the money coming from.

We looked at the campaign finance reports filed in August for the four mayoral candidates.

Koch raised the most money during August and has the most money heading into the Sept. 24th preliminary election. He also had the most donations from contributors listing a Quincy address.

Phelan raised the second most money during August and had the second highest number of contributors listing a Quincy address.

Only $26 separated the August fundraising totals for Gutro and Mahoney. Gutro had more Quincy donors than Mahoney.

Here are some of the numbers – for what they're worth – if anything.

You can draw your own conclusions.

• Koch ended the month of July with a balance of $212,490. He raised $59,462 and spent $74,419 during the month of August. Koch's balance on Aug. 31 was $197,534.

During the month of August, Koch listed donations from 188 contributors with a Quincy address.

• Phelan ended the month of July with a balance of $21,181. He raised $29,401 and spent $23,074 during the month of August. Phelan's balance on Aug. 31 was $27,507.

During the month of August, Phelan listed donations from 59 contributors with a Quincy address. Phelan also received a $5,000 contribution from the I.U.P.A.T. District Council #35 based in Roslindale.

• Mahoney ended the month of July with a balance of $45,619. She raised $6,315 and spent $7,611 during the month of August. Mahoney's balance on Aug. 31 was $44,323.

During August, Mahoney listed donations from 10 contributors with a Quincy address.

• Gutro ended the month of July with a balance of $66,584. He raised $6,289 and spent $10,485 during the month of August. Gutro's balance on Aug. 31 was $62,387.

During the month of August, Gutro listed donations from 47 contributors with a Quincy address.

We're not suggesting that only well-financed candidates are successful at the ballot box. And we acknowledge that not everyone who intends to support a candidate on Election Day also writes a check to his or her campaign account.

We also know that all four candidates have successfully raised considerable campaign cash since the race began in earnest in January. They are all viable contenders.

In fact, many political observers are in general agreement that the race for that second nomination is close and turnout could very well be the biggest factor on Election Day next Thursday.

Quincy's had some very close elections – including mayoral elections – in its history. It would surprise no one if the order of outcome is determined by just a handful of votes.

Which brings us to our last point.

The candidates who can organize their vote and get their supporters to go to the polls next Thursday stand the best chance of winning nomination.

Typically, preliminary elections – even those with a hotly contested mayor's race – don't draw well at the ballot box.

Many are comparing this year's four-way showdown with the 1989 mayoral election. That year four candidates were on the ballot seeking to succeed Mayor Frank McCauley who had announced in January that year that he would not seek a fifth term.

About 46 percent or 22,331 voters turned out and nominated Ward 4 Councillor James Sheets (35 percent) and political newcomer and Quincy businessman Peter O'Connell (27 percent). Failing to win nomination were Councillor Stephen McGrath (22 percent) and former Mayor Joseph LaRaia (14 percent.)

But the city has changed a lot since 1989 - including demographics. And turnout has been a steady decline over the past few decades.

The last mayoral preliminary election took place six years ago in 2009 and turnout barely reached 30 percent. Incumbent Mayor Tom Koch and former Mayor William Phelan were nominated. Turnout was 29.5 percent.

Koch topped the mayoral field with 7,970 votes that also featured two political newcomers on the ballot. Phelan was second with 7,318 votes. Koch went on to defeat Phelan in the final in a mayoral rematch.

There was also a city-wide preliminary election for school committee in 2009 with eight candidates vying for six nominations. Anne Mahoney, Emily Lebo, Karl Roos, Barbara Isola, Matthew Lockwood Mullaney and Rebecca McWilliams were nominated. Mahoney, Lebo and Isola won election that November.

This year, there are two other preliminary contests but they are for ward council seats, not city-wide posts. Besides the mayoral preliminary election, voters in Ward 2 and Ward 3 will cast ballots for councillor in those two wards. The top two vote-getters in Ward 2 and Ward 3 will advance to the final election.

City Clerk Joseph Shea has forecast a light turnout of 32 percent next Thursday – about 17,352 of the city's 54,226 registered voters. Factors attributed to his prediction: low voter registration in the weeks leading up to Election Day and the low number of voters who have cast absentee ballots.

The unusual Thursday election day will create a change in the way the Sun reports the election results Sept. 24.

Normally, the paper publishes Tuesday election results in Wednesday morning's paper.

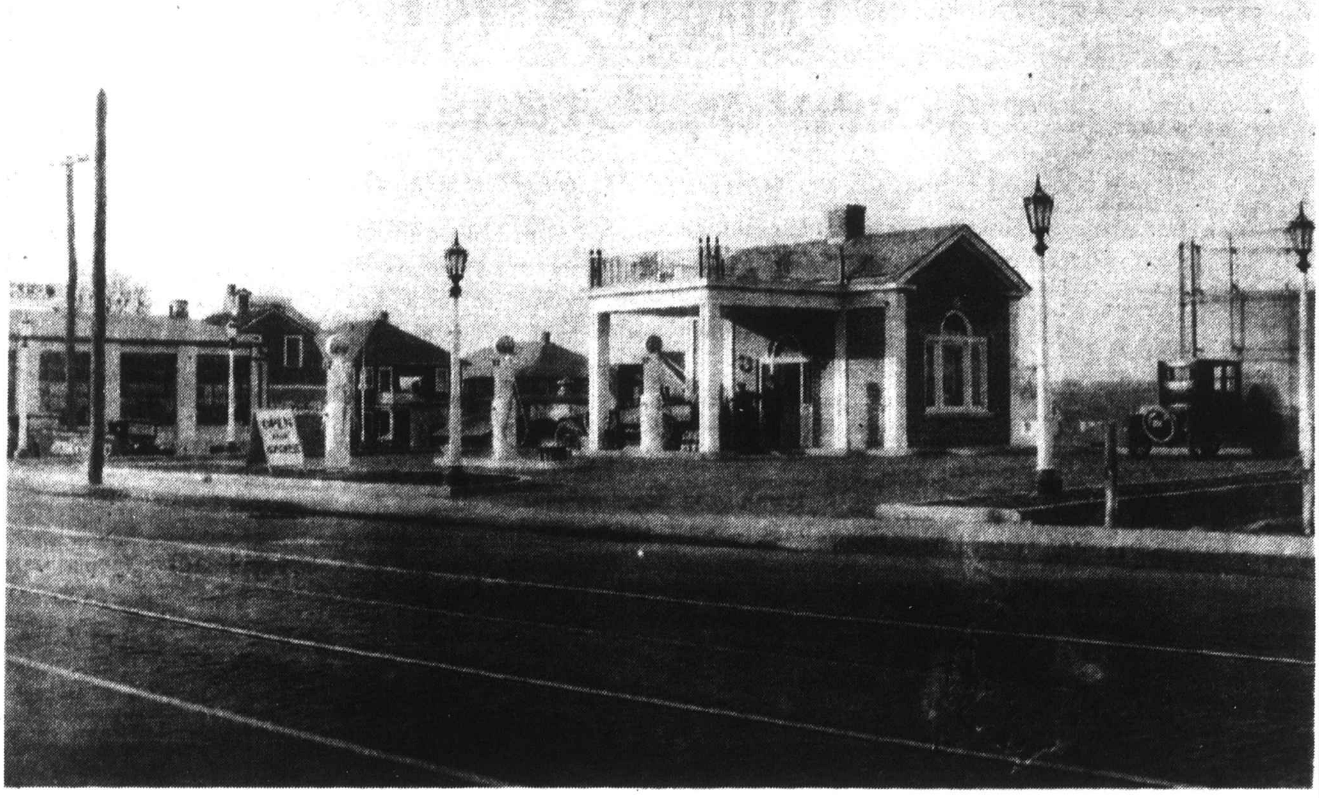
For the Sept. 24 preliminary, we will post results on our website after the ballots are counted that evening. Our website address is: www.thequincysun.com.

Results will also be published in our Oct. 1st edition.

And if you're wondering about the turnout for the Nov. 3 election?

Shea is predicting 44 to 46 percent for the final.

Scenes From Yesterday



IN THE LATE 1920's the Standard Oil Company of New York, SOCONY, had four gasoline filling stations in Quincy. This one at 230 Washington St. in Quincy Point opened in 1927. The large gas tank on the right was erected by the Citizens Gas Light Company which provided the first gas for illumination, cooking and heating in Quincy in the 1890's. It was located on Brackett Street on the banks of the Town River now the site of the Town Brook House. On the far left the commercial building was home to the Washington Street Garage and is now Cagney's Restaurant and Pub. This gas station's corner lot at Raymond Street changed hands many times over the years and is now the site of a Tedeschi's Food Shop. Note that Washington Street was paved with cobblestones and trolley tracks running to the shipyard and beyond. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Action Speaks Louder Than Words

This year – 2015 – evokes special memories for all Americans. This year marks the 70th anniversary of World War II; 65th anniversary of the start of the Korean War and the 50th anniversary of the end of the Vietnam War. The month of September also recalls the 14th anniversary of the infamous 9/11 terrorist attack in New York City.

We all have a lot to remember with these events.

We remember the cost, sacrifices, commitments, the dedications and the results that all of these events have produced. We also need to remember that here in Quincy many of those who fought in these wars still walk among us. Some walk feebly now. Some still walk briskly. Some are here but out of sight and all are indistinguishable from any and every other Quincy citizen.

Most of us would not hesitate to say "Thank you for your service" when and if given the opportunity to do so. It is a small yet meaningful gesture that brings a sense of comfort and satisfaction.

As a veteran myself, I can tell you that I am humbled and appreciative when someone expresses that thanks to me. My reaction is one that is universal among my fellow veterans.

We served our country and our fellow citizens out of a sense of duty and obligation.

We didn't serve so that someone could thank us later.

We served because there was so much in the American way of life to enjoy, to protect and to preserve. If it is in your conscience to truly want to thank a veteran for his or her service, the simplest and most profound way to do so is to remember the old adage that says "actions speak louder than words."

We, as veterans, took the "actions" of sacrificing part of our lives to defend the rights and freedoms we, our families and our fellow citizens enjoy.

The simplest, yet most profound, way that you can truly thank a veteran is to take the "action," as a citizen, of exercising those rights we fought to preserve.

Election time is upon us again in the City of Quincy. If you make the simple effort to get out and vote, you will have vindicated, validated and acknowledged the service and sacrifice made by a veteran.

Exercising your right to vote is a simple yet profound expression of gratitude to veterans. Casting your vote is an "action" that demonstrates a much louder and more significant "Thank you for your service" to every veteran than words alone could ever match.

On behalf of all the veterans in the city of Quincy I urge you to get out and vote – and allow all of we veterans to thank YOU for doing so.

Your Home

This year's Quincy's preliminary elections are on Thursday, Sept. 24th.

One is the mayoral election, and the elected mayor will be elected for 4, not 2, years for the first time.

If you are satisfied with the current mayor, vote him again.

But if you are not, and want change and new and fresh ideas, vote for the other worthwhile candidates.

Just VOTE. We are fortunate to have the right to vote, but it's useless if we don't apply it.

Public officials serve us, not the other way around.

VOTE. Quincy is your city. And your home.

Plan To Borrow For Parking Areas Stymied

The plan to borrow money this year for the purchase of off-street parking areas for Wollaston and Norfolk Downs was stymied when Alexander Smith, city auditor, advised that such a borrowing was impossible because the city had provided no qualifying fee for such takings.

Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa said he would discuss with councillors that possibility of using parking meter receipts and the possibility of other reserve funds to proceed with the proposal.

In a recent public hearing, North Quincy merchants and the Chamber of Commerce urged the council to make the takings.

BETHELEM STEEL HAS 49 PERCENT OF U.S. MERCHANT SHIP WORK

Bethelem Steel Corporation's shipbuilding division holds contracts for nearly half – 49.6 percent – of the new deadweight tonnage of merchant ships being built in American shipyards.

Of this total, 1,073,550 tons or 26.7 % will be built at the Fore River Shipyard. Fore River will build 19 tankers ranging in size from 16,000 to 105,000 deadweight tons.

A keel was laid this week for the first of five 46,000-deadweight ton tankers that the Fore River Shipyard will build for the Onassis' interests.

The Quincy shipyard has six other ships in various stages of construction.

Eastern Nazarene College To Present Rodgers & Hammerstein's 'Oklahoma!'

Eastern Nazarene College Theatre Department will presents its production of Rodgers and Hammerstein's musical Oklahoma! next month in the Cove Fine Arts Center on the college's main Quincy campus.

Performances are scheduled Oct. 15 at 7:30 p.m.; Oct. 17 at 3 p.m. and 7:30 p.m.; and Oct. 22-24 at 7:30 p.m.

Director Tara Brooke Watkins noted the famed musical has special significance for her. "I'm an Oklahoma native, so I grew up with this show – it has a special place in my heart," she said. "To me, Oklahoma! exudes warmth and family, and especially community."

ENC's production will feature teens and adults from the community as well as ENC students in the cast, all performing such classic Broadway show tunes as "Surrey with the Fringe on Top," "I Cain't Say No" and of course, the title song.

"It's been exciting to see students, professors, pastors and community members all come together to sing the music from this iconic musical," Watkins said. "We will be making this as realistic as possible for a musical: The set will appear as an open Oklahoma prairie, with farmhouse and the surrey with the fringe on top."

Set in a Western Indian territory at the turn of the last century, Oklahoma! recounts the romance between cowboy Curly and farm girl Laurey set against the backdrop of the local rivalry between farmers and cowboys.

When Oklahoma! first premiered in 1943, it was considered to be a groundbreaking musical for the way in which the songs were fully integrated into the story line. The show also marked the first collaboration between Rodgers and Hammerstein, earning the duo a special Pulitzer Prize.

Oklahoma! also broke new theatrical ground for its inclusion of a ballet dream sequence within the more conventional Broadway musical numbers and story line.

Eastern Nazarene College is located at 23 E. Elm Ave. in Quincy. Tickets for Oklahoma! are $15 general admission, $10 students and seniors, $5 children 12 and under.

For tickets or more information, call the ENC box office at 617-745-3715 or visit www.brownpapertickets.com.

Nancy's Split Pea Soup

By MARIE

When one thinks of split pea soup, they usually think of a ham bone in order to make it.

But not so, as we tasted a delicious pea soup that my daughter Nancy made last week.

She decided to try making it with bacon and what a great flavor it had. We didn't miss the ham at all.

SPLIT PEA SOUP

1/2 pound bacon (she used uncured) (cut in pieces)
3-4 cups stock (beef or chicken)
1 package split peas
1 cup frozen peas

Saute the bacon. Add the stock and the package of split peas, and follow the directions on the package. Cook until done.

At the end, add the frozen peas for an extra zing.

She served it with croutons or oyster crackers. She also had a little extra bacon pieces over the top. It was enjoyed by all.

Pasta With Summer Squash And Arugula Pesto

By SUZIE

Pesto is a great source of nutrients. Pesto's origin actually comes from sailors who were getting ill from scurvy due to long voyages and poor diet. Utilizing fresh green herbs and combined with olive oil and flavorings provided not only terrific health benefits for the sailors but also great taste and variety as well.

Here is an arugula pesto recipe that you can toss with pasta and summer squash "ribbons" for a delicious and healthy meal. Arugula is a nutrient rich vegetable (sometimes called the garden rocket) since it is a cruciferous vegetable, it is associated with reduced risk of cancer in many studies. It is high in vitamin C, K, and A which offer great immune system support.

Arugula is also a great source of calcium, iron, potassium, manganese and phosphorus. You can freeze pesto in ice cube containers and just pop them out when frozen and transferred to a freezer baggie.

PASTA WITH SUMMER SQUASH AND ARUGULA PESTO

¾ cup walnut halves

4 cups packed arugula leaves (TWO cups for the pesto, the other two you will save to toss)

¾ cup of extra virgin olive oil

1 teaspoon minced garlic

½ cup freshly grated sheep's milk pecorino Romano cheese

12 ounces pasta of choice

3 firm medium zucchini or other summer squash very thinly sliced with mandolin or you can also use a vegetable peeler. Just be careful you don't cut yourself!

3 tablespoons lemon juice

Mix in food processor your pesto ingredients using just the 2 cups of arugula. Season with sea salt and pepper if desired.

Cook the pasta according to directions. Drain and place in bowl. Add the UNCOOKED zucchini (it will wilt from the heat) Toss with the pesto, lemon, and extra 2 cups of arugula.

Toss well and season to taste. ENJOY! Drizzle with extra olive oil and garnish with fresh basil if desired.

Fafale (Bow Tie) Salad

By SUZIE

Today's recipe for pasta salad was given to me by my son Dom, who was inspired by Chef David, Culinary Arts Director for the company my son works for.

It can be made early in the day and then enjoyed for dinner especially for busy mothers now that school is open.

This one was made by my son Dom when he brought it over recently to add to a summer buffet.

But this dish can be enjoyed at anytime as an entree.

FAFALE (BOW TIE) SALAD

1 pound bow ties
8 cherry tomatoes (cut in half)
1/2 pound asparagus (steamed or grilled-cut)
1 small jar Calamata olives
1 can cannolini beans
1 pound cooked shrimp (cut)
Dressing
1/4 cup Balsamic vinegar
1/4 cup red wine vinegar
3 tablespoons olive oil

Cook the pasta according to directions.

In a bowl add the tomatoes. Cut the asparagus on the bias and only use the first two cuts so they will be tender.

Add the olives, beans and the shrimp and blend them well.

Add the dressing and mix altogether. The colors were beautiful and the taste even better.

18th Annual Quincy ArtsFest Saturday, Sunday At Adams Field

The City of Quincy and the Quincy Art Association announce the 18th annual Quincy ArtsFest will take place Saturday, Sept. 19 and Sunday, Sept. 20.

For the first time in 18 years, ArtsFest will be moving from the grounds of the Richard J. Koch Park and Recreation Complex over to Adams Field. The historic baseball field will transform from an athletic field into a center for the arts.

The event will feature artwork, live entertainment, crafters and children's activities that has become an autumn highlight for many Quincy families.

"We are fortunate to have such passionate citizens taking an active role in their community promoting the arts" said Mayor Thomas P. Koch. "Doing so is incredibly important, especially in this day and age."

As ArtsFest moves to a larger location, the City of Quincy and Quincy Art Association were able to expand the event in a special way for the 18th year. On Saturday night, the Quincy Symphony Orchestra will perform a free concert under the lights at Adams Field.

Concert goers are welcome to bring lawn chairs and blankets to sit on the field with friends and family. The bleachers will also be accessible to all spectators.

The concert will begin at 7 p.m., and all art will be able to be viewed before, during, and after the concert.

"We are excited about participating in the ArtsFest and look forward to it very much," says symphony conductor Yoichi Udagawa. "We've put together a program of gorgeous classical music as well as much beloved selections from Broadway and the movies, and coupled with the setting, we think this will be a spectacular night for the arts."

Sponsored by the Quincy Art Association and the Quincy Park & Recreation Departments, ArtsFest features a Juried Art show, Juried Photography show, Quincy Art Association Members' show and a Young Artists' show. Last year's show displayed over four hundred entries from some of the finest artists across the South Shore and Greater Boston area.

Along with incredible art work, Quincy ArtsFest includes a variety of live entertainment by exceptionally talented performers. This year, the ArtsFest live entertainment includes performances ranging from magic shows and caricature artists, to traditional dance and professional bands.

Mayor's Race Headlines Preliminary Election Sept. 24

"I think the mayor's race is beginning to heat up," Shea said Friday when asked about the interest in the preliminary election. "It's starting to come together."

The four-way race for two mayoral nominations is the only city-wide race on the Sept. 24th preliminary election. Voters in Wards 2 and 3 will also vote to nominate two candidates for councillor in those wards. Those nominated Sept. 24 will advance to the final election Nov. 3.

Polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. next Thursday, Sept. 24. A list of the polling precinct locations appears on Pages 9, 10 and 11.

Gathering most of the attention in the weeks leading up to the Sept. 24th preliminary election has been the mayor's race. Incumbent Mayor Thomas Koch – who is seeking a fifth term – is challenged by former Mayor William Phelan, School Committeewoman Anne Mahoney and Councillor Doug Gutro.

The top two vote-getters Sept. 24 will be nominated and square off Nov. 3. The winner Nov. 3 will serve the city for the next four years beginning in January. Two years ago, voters approved an initiative petition doubling the term for mayor from two to four years.

All four candidates for mayor are well-known political veterans who have held city-wide office.

Koch won the mayor's seat in 2007 unseating Phelan who had served for six years. Koch defeated Phelan in a mayoral rematch in 2009 and turned aside a challenge from Mahoney in 2011. He was unopposed winning a fourth term in 2013.

Two years after winning a School Committee seat in 1999, Phelan also defeated an incumbent mayor to win the mayor's seat. In 2001, he upset six-term incumbent Mayor James Sheets in one of the closest elections in city history. The margin of victory – after a recount – was 17 votes. Phelan was re-elected in 2003 defeating Ward 6 Councillor Joseph Newton and won a third term without opposition in 2005.

Mahoney is mid-way through her third four-year term on the School Committee. This is her second run for mayor bowing to Koch in 2011. She topped the School Committee ballot in 2005 and 2009 and finished second two years ago winning her third term.

Gutro – a seven-term councillor – began his political career winning the Ward 5 council seat in 2001. He served as ward councillor for 10 years before winning a councillor at-large seat four years ago. Gutro is vacating his councillor at-large seat to seek the city's highest elective office.

Besides the mayor's race, there are preliminary contests in Wards 2 and 3 with three candidates in each of those wards vying for two nominations.

In Ward 2, incumbent Councillor Brad Croall of 65 Gay St. is being challenged by two political newcomers: James M. Connors of 124 Martensen St. and Gulistan Malik of 109 Curtis Ave.

In Ward 3, there are three candidates running to succeed longtime Councillor Kevin Coughlin who is not seeking re-election this year. Running in Ward 3 are Karl Roos, 9 Park St.; Sandra Verhault, 183 Highland Ave. and Ian Cain, 192 South Central Ave.

Mayor, Ward 2, Ward 3 Races On Preliminary Ballot

Shea said the council races in Wards 2 and 3 could boost turnout in those areas of the city Sept. 24.

"The ward races in 2 and 3 could help turnout. In (Wards) 1, 4, 5 and 6 only the mayor's race will be on the ballot," the clerk noted.

In forecasting the turnout Sept. 24, Shea said he considered the last mayoral preliminary in 2009 as well as the 1989 contest that featured another cast of four well-known candidates.

Six years ago, Koch and Phelan were joined on the mayoral preliminary ballot by two political long shots. Turnout for that election was 29.5 percent. Koch finished first and Phelan second in that preliminary contest.

Turnout was considerably higher – 46 percent – for the 1989 mayoral preliminary election that featured four candidates vying for an open seat after Mayor Francis McCauley decided he would not seek re-election. Ward 4 Councillor James Sheets and Quincy businessman Peter O'Connell were nominated finishing ahead of Councillor Stephen McGrath and former Mayor Joseph LaRaia.

However, unlike this year, there was also another city-wide contest in the 1989 preliminary. Nine candidates sought six nominations for school committee and helped generate interest at the polls, Shea said.

Another factor in gauging interest for this preliminary election is absentee ballots. As of Friday, 478 absentee ballots had been cast. In the 2009 preliminary election, 530 absentee ballots were cast.

By comparison, in a state or presidential election, an average of 900 voters cast absentee ballots, Shea noted.

Those nominated Sept. 24 will advance to the final ballot that features contested races for councillor at-large and five out of six ward seats. Only incumbent Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci is unopposed on the city council.

Because of the city council races and the hotly contested mayor's race, Shea is predicting turnout for the Nov. 3 election will be between 44 and 46 percent.

Quincy's preliminary election date had been scheduled for Sept. 22 but was moved to Sept. 24 due to Yom Kippur, a solemn Jewish holiday. The Thursday election date is unusual but not unheard of in Quincy. Voters here went to the polls for the state primary Thursday, Sept. 6, 2012. The date was moved from a Tuesday as to not conflict with the Rosh Hashanah holiday.

Shea said moving the preliminary date to Sept. 24 was the right decision.

"I don't think it will affect turnout. There might be a little confusion because the election is on a Thursday instead of the traditional Tuesday but I hope not. We moved the date to allow everyone the opportunity to vote," Shea said.

The change in the preliminary election date has been reported by the local media and signs for the election appear throughout the city.

Election workers have been testing ballot machines in final preparations for the Sept. 24th preliminary, Shea said he anticipates results by 9:30 p.m. next Thursday evening.

Next Thursday's election will mark the first time poll workers will return ballot boxes to the Board of Registrars office located on the second floor of the glass annex building of City Hall. That office along with the City Clerk, License Board and Vital Statistics relocated to the second floor last month.

Many political observers are predicting a close finish for the mayoral nominations. Shea said the city does not have an automatic recount provision in the city charter.

To file a recount in a city-wide race, a candidate would have to collect at least 10 signatures from registered voters in each ward that a recount is requested.

In a ward race, at least 10 signatures are required in each precinct in that ward that a recount is requested.

The signatures would have to be filed with the City Clerk by Tuesday, Sept. 29 at 5 p.m.

Shea said the city's voting machines are "very accurate" in tabulating results."

"We have tested all the ballot machines and everything is ready to go for next Thursday," Shea said Monday.

City To Participate In 2nd Annual Park(ing) Day Friday

For the second year in a row, the City of Quincy will be participating in international Park(ing) Day on Friday, Sept. 18th.

The event is being sponsored by Ward 5 Councilor Kirsten Hughes, Mayor Thomas Koch, the Quincy Chamber of Commerce, and the Department of Planning and Community Development (PCD).

This year's theme, "Re(Cycle) Park," will center upon Hancock Street as the hub of the new Quincy Center and highlight recycling and the city's Bicycle and Pedestrian Network Plan by featuring interactive games and way-finding directions for the myriad people, places and things that one can easily access by bike or on foot in Quincy.

Park(ing) Day is a worldwide annual open source event where citizens, artists, and community groups convert street parking spaces into 'PARK(ing)' spaces, or temporary public spaces.

This conversation-generating public intervention began in 2005 when design studio Rebar, of San Francisco, transformed a single street parking space into a tiny temporary public park. In the last nine years, Park(ing) Day has spread across the world and has created opportunities for citizens to collectively reimagine and reinvent public space as the heart of their community.

PCD has identified two parking spaces at 1468-1476 Hancock St. in Quincy Center as the site for this year's project. The proximity to recent urban redevelopment projects such as Adams Green and the Town Brook Enhancement serves to underscore how Quincy is working to cultivate a vibrant and rich urban environment where all neighborhoods can share a strengthened connection to the City center, city leaders said.

The public is invited to stop by between 7 a.m. and 4 p.m. to take part in fun activities, share thoughts and join the conversation by tweeting @QCParkIn and #QCParkIn.

Thanks Police For Car Seat Installations

I would like to call attention to a service provided by the Quincy Police Department that deserves praise. It is the department's policy of installation of car seats.

I have had the occasion of utilizing this service the past two summers when my grandchildren visited and I needed car seats for their safety. On both visits, Office John Leuchte, a parent himself, could not have been more considerate and diligent in his installation!

This is a time consuming service whose value cannot be underscored. Thank you QPD for placing a value on car seat safety.

Suggests Luring Deers To Designated Areas

The Department of Conservation and Recreation plans to cull the overly dense population of deer in the Blue Hills Reservation.

The proposal is to let loose 250 amateur hunters in the Reservation armed with shotguns in a limited hunting season of four days.

What could go wrong?

A far safer means to achieve this goal is to lure the deer to designated stations where they can be put down. A limited number of carefully vetted hunters should be designated to carry out the work, paid professionals if necessary.

As this is not hunting for sport, but for restoring the balance of nature, the usual limitations should be suspended. Rather than an open season of four days, extend it to the three winter months only for those designated hunters.

Lures such as sound, scent, salt licks, and water and feed troughs could be used to attract deer to the designated areas. When deer come at night, light sources can be used to immobilize the deer.

Will this work?

I don't know but it seems far safer than that being currently be proposed. This and other methodologies should be investigated before turning the Blue Hills Reservation into a free fire zone.

Public Meeting Sought On Deer Hunting Plan

manages the 7,000-acre park, which covers parts of Quincy, Milton, Braintree, Randolph, Canton and Dedham.

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci, whose West Quincy district includes the Quincy portions of the reservation, introduced a resolution at the council's Sept. 8 meeting asking the DCR to hold a meeting in Quincy at a time and location convenient for the city's residents. If such a meeting doesn't take place, Palmucci's resolution asks that Gov. Charlie Baker and DCR officials not allow hunting in the park.

The resolution was approved by the council in a unanimous vote. A copy of the resolution was forwarded to members of Quincy's state delegation, the DCR and officials in neighboring communities.

"DCR really has to have some sort of public hearing before they allow deer hunting in the Blue Hills. It's almost laughable it would require a resolution to bring them here, but apparently that's the way the DCR works," Palmucci said.

"I wasn't aware the DCR had a deer management plan or that they were contemplating allowing shotgun or rifle hunting in the Blue Hills area. Obviously representing West Quincy, there is a significant amount of folks whose houses abut the Blue Hills and I think they would want to know publically from the DCR before they see folks walking around with shotguns what they heck is going on.

"It seems to me like there might be a reasonable plan the DCR is contemplating, but certainly there has been no effort publicly that I'm aware of to bring this to Quincy residents, get their feedback, their input and notify them about this deer management plan that includes culling the herd by allowing deer hunting on the Blue Hills Reservation."

IT'S TIME FOR A NEW DAY FOR QUINCY

Dear Voter:

For some time now, I've been concerned about the direction our city is headed. Nearly two years ago I began meeting with residents across Quincy to listen and learn what they wanted from our city. From these conversations, I developed a detailed plan for Quincy's future and released it the day I announced my candidacy last January. That's your plan, the city of Quincy's plan for smarter government, financial discipline, and true leadership in City Hall.

Quincy is a great city – and it deserves a city government that is every bit as great as the people who call Quincy home. With your support, we can help our city reach its full potential and create a new day for Quincy.

Sincerely,

Anne

Mayoral Hopefuls Clash In Televised Debate

By SCOTT JACKSON

The four candidates vying for the first four-year mayoral term in Quincy's history clashed on several issues during a televised debate as the preliminary election closes in.

Incumbent Mayor Thomas Koch, Councillor Doug Gutro, former Mayor William Phelan and School Committee member Anne Mahoney all appeared in the 80-minute debate, which first aired on Quincy Access Television on Sept. 10. The debate can be viewed in its entirety online at qatv.org.

QATV's Mark Crosby moderated the debate, which was cosponsored by the cable network, The Quincy Sun and The Patriot Ledger.

Voters will head to the polls Thursday, Sept. 24, to whittle the field of four candidates down to two. Those two candidates will go head-to-head in the final election on Nov. 3.

Gutro, who has criticized Koch for spending $13.5 million on snow and ice removal during the past winter, was asked what he would have done differently. Gutro said he would have had emergency's plans in place, and faulted Koch for not having one for snow hauling, which the city spent $7 million on.

"The time to prepare for an emergency is not in the middle of the emergency. Emergency planning takes place months in advance. It's no secret the types of emergencies we have to plan for. It could be hurricanes, it could be a tidal surge, it could be flooding, it could be excessive snowfall, it could be an intense rain events. These are the things you plan for," Gutro said.

"There was no plan for snow hauling. It happened on a day-to-day, week-to-week basis in the city of Quincy. We bled $2 million a week."

Koch defended the city's efforts, saying no manual could plan for nine feet of snow in such a short time. He also noted his administration has increased the amount budgeted for snow and ice removal and set up a separate account for inclement weather.

"That was awesome. Spoken like a true federal bureaucrat," Koch said responding to Gutro's answer. "We have plenty of manuals but it's on the job, it's making the decision at the time. We had nine feet of snow in five weeks. There is no manual that predicts that. We attacked it every single day with priorities in place and we dealt with it.

"In fact, since I've been mayor we have increased our snow budget incrementally each year. It was $300,000 when I took office – it was that way for 20 years. We've incrementally increased it to $2 million. We set up a separate account for storms."

Phelan criticized Koch for appointing Daniel Raymondi, a longtime city councillor, the city's commissioner of public works in 2011. Phelan also said the city needs to do a better job plowing streets than it did this past winter.

"I wouldn't hire a DPW commissioner that was a former city councillor and had no experience whatsoever in the Department of Public Works field. That's number one. Number two: I wouldn't go down the center of every single street – with the exception of Hancock Street, maybe – one strip and think that I was going to be able to come back and clean it up later, because that's what happened," Phelan said.

"You had one strip right down the middle and that's where the decision was made and that's where the mistake was made. It's poor management. We're paying contractors. We have to make sure their plows are on the ground."

Mahoney likewise said Raymondi was unqualified, adding that he was absent during the winter's snowstorms.

"I have to agree with Bill on this, it is management. When we hire people we have to make sure people are qualified. Unfortunately, our DPW director was not qualified for this job and he missed his mark every step of the way. In fact, we never even saw him. No one even knew where he was when this was going on," Mahoney said.

"We need to be able to get better at what we do, especially when we do a poor job and actually admit when we do a poor job so we can do it better. This is an administration that never admits its faults."

The candidates were also asked about development going on across the city as it relates to traffic and whether Quincy is growing too much, too fast.

Mahoney said development is happening for development's sake in Quincy. She added that residential projects need adequate parking.

"I think with the dismantling of the downtown and the falling apart of it, what we have done is seen development for the sake of development. Because it's an election year, we're saying yes to everything that's coming into that Planning Board, not for the sake of smart development but for the sake of just having development," Mahoney said.

"We're also seeing just projects after projects happening at the same time. Mismanaged projects happen if you don't actually time things correctly. Plus, on top of it we're building things and we're saying people are not going to have cars when they move into it. That's just not realistic. We don't have a walkable community right now."

Gutro said development is being done backwards in the city and faulted Koch for not completing a citywide traffic survey or a parking plan for Quincy Center.

"Traffic is happening all over the city because we have development exactly backwards. You pick a neighborhood, it's happening out there. Credible, quality development isn't happening in the downtown. Eight years ago, Tom Koch promised a citywide traffic plan we don't have – promised a downtown parking plan, we don't have it," Gutro said.

"This is all about zoning and right now we grow as a city by variance. What does that mean? That means every time you see something coming up it's not because it's permissible by right. More often than not, the mayor's Zoning Board of Appeals is granting people forgiveness from existing zoning so you can wedge in these 10-, 20-, 30-unit developments that are happening all across the city. "

Koch said his administration pressed the City Council to update Quincy's zoning code; those changes were approved in 2011. The administration, he added, has also protected Residential A neighborhoods from development.

"This administration put before the City Council major zoning recodification and changes that hadn't happened in many, many years. The councillor sat for 14 years on the council but never initiated major zoning changes to affect change," Koch said.

"We have development all around the city. It's a hot city. There is a lot of interest in the city right now. We have designs to protect those neighborhoods, those Residential A, single-family neighborhoods from such. We have four T stations and there is tremendous interest within walking distance of those four T stations… The center is moving – 169 units, 14,000 square feet of retail space. The next phase is 56 condominium units with 8,000 square feet of retail space."

Phelan said developers shouldn't be allowed to control Quincy's destiny. He refered to a woman he met on Robertson Street who had to take a developer to court to stop a new building from going up next to her property.

"We're bending over backwards for the developers. We have it backwards; we shouldn't allow the developers to control our destiny and that's just what's happening," Phelan said.

"Let me tell a quick story of a woman I met knocking doors [on] Robertson Street in West Quincy. There was a little bit of a yard next to her and a developer bought a house next to her, had an oversized lot but not big enough to build on…Fellow went to the zoning board. Despite the fact that she went with a petition asking from all her neighbors not to grant the variance, the variance was granted. She had to pay $5,000 to hire a lawyer, go to Superior Court, and beat that proposed development."

The candidates were also asked about steps the school system may have to take to address concerns about overcrowding – particularly in West Quincy and Quincy Point schools – as new development comes online in the city.

Koch said the construction of a new Sterling Middle School should help address the problem. The School Committee may also have to look at redistricting.

"We're going through the process now of designing a brand new Sterling Middle School that's going to be paid for, 75 to 80 percent, by the state. That's going to help us a little bit. We're looking closely at the numbers and watching it. As a School Committee, we may have to make some adjustments on the districts because not all the elementaries are busting at the seems. Some are busier than others and we might have to deal with that. Nobody likes to talk about redistricting, but that's a possibility," Koch said.

"The next building after Sterling is done is a replacement of Squantum Elementary School…that may be an opportune time to build in a little more space as potential redistricting may be needed."

Phelan said he built the city budget around school spending when he was in office. To be a strong city, he added, you need a strong school system.

"As a percentage of the overall budget, spending on education under this mayor is negative 15 percent. Under my administration, we increased it by 31 percent as a percentage of the overall budget. We averaged an increase of school spending of 4.4 percent. Under this mayor, approximately 2.5 percent," Phelan said.

"It's my firm belief that to have a strong city, you need a strong or event the best school system in the state of Massachusetts and that is what my goal was. I built my budget around the school budget to make sure our educational system would thrive and we would attract the bright people to come to the city and grow in strength as a city."

Mahoney said mayors have stated new development would not impact schools. Developments like apartments at Quarry Hills, however, have had an impact she said and led to school officials to consider placing fourth graders at the new Sterling, a plan state officials opted not to accept.

"We shouldn't be coming to these conclusions the day we put our paperwork into the state. What we should do is have a facility management plan for the whole city – for our schools and for all of our buildings – and start managing our space so we know when we're going to be overcrowded and where we're going to be overcrowded," Mahoney said.

"We can do that with redistricting but also with forethought and forecasting and that's what we need to do in the city of Quincy – both in our schools and in our budget."

Gutro said the city needs to have a growth plan, which would focus on where the city will grow over the next 10 or 20 years. That plan could be used to predict potential class size issues ahead of time.

"School overcrowding is not simply a matter of who is in the system today. It's a matter of where do we see these folks moving in the years ahead. It gets to the heart of the fact that we don't have a growth plan here in the city," Gutro said.

"Where are we going to grow as a city over the next decade or two, and let's do a little bit of education planning based on that. The most important thing we can do is deal with class size and we can do that strategically when we think about where we as a city are going to grow and where the school needs will be moving forward."

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

BRUX OF THE MATTER

Grinding one's teeth at night ("bruxism") not only produces a disconcerting noise for anyone within earshot, but it also wears down tooth enamel. On top of that, bruxism may lead to shifting of teeth and weakening of underlying bone to the point where it can contribute to periodontal (gum) disease. To prevent these adverse effects, the dentist can fabricate a custom-fitted mouth guard, which prevents teeth in the upper and lower jaws from contacting one another. As effective as mouth guards are in protecting teeth, patients who grind their teeth should also look into stress-reducing techniques (such as meditation) that reduce the anxiety that so often leads to teeth grinding. Relaxation is essential to breaking this potentially harmful habit.

If you suspect that you or any member of your family suffers from bruxism see your dentist. We can tell you if your symptoms are in fact due to bruxism. We provide gentle, compassionate dental care of the highest quality. If you would like to schedule an appointment, please call 617 479-6220. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we're currently accepting new patients. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Because teeth grinding often occurs at night, many patients are unaware that they grind their teeth until a dental examination reveals enamel wear consistent with the problem.

REMEMBERING 9-11 – Quincy Fire Department observed the 14th anniversary of the 9-11 terrorist attacks Sept. 11 at Fire Headquarters on Quincy Avenue. Here Firefighter Chris Murphy lowers the American Flag to half-staff as fellow firefighters and EMTs from Brewster Ambulance offer a solemn salute in memory of the nearly 3,000 lives that were lost Sept. 11, 2001. Fourteen years on that tragic day, four planes were hijacked and deliberately crashed into the World Trade Center in New York, the Pentagon in Washington, D.C. and a field in Pennsylvania. Terrorists who hijacked the plane that crashed in Pennsylvania - United Airlines Flight 93 - had planned to crash the San Francisco-bound commercial airliner into the Capitol building or the White House in Washington, D.C. Because of heroic actions of the 40 passengers and crew aboard Flight 93, the attack on the Washington, D.C. target was thwarted. All 44 people on Flight 93 were killed in the crash in Stonycreek Township, Pennsylvania. No one on the ground was injured. Dozens of Quincy firefighters and police traveled to New York City to attend funeral services for comrades who lost their lives responding to the terrorist attacks. Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Bosworth

Red Raiders Seek First Win Against B. Latin

Visit Boston Latin Saturday After Bowing To Bedford

By BILL GRIFFIN

It was a disappointing opener, but when all the games have been played and final records have been posted, it is likely that one fact will come clear: Bedford is an excellent football team.

The strong and swift Buccaneers scored four times in the first half to drop North Quincy, 28-0, in the non-league opener for both teams despite the fact the Red Raiders settled down and played a solid second half at Veterans' Memorial Stadium Friday night.

"The key was the line. They just beat us up front. They controlled us and ran the football right at us," said North coach Mark Nutley after the first-ever meeting between the two clubs.

With junior tailback Jake Eliason (26 carries, 126 yards in the first half) leading the offense, Bedford ran initially to the outside to avoid North's size in the middle, but also later had success moving between the tackles. The Buccaneers scored once in the first period and three touchdowns in the second quarter to gain early command of the game.

NORTH QUINCY'S Aidan Brown breaks a tackle for some of his 65 second-half yards against Bedford last Friday night. The Red Raiders are hoping to bounce back from a 28-0 loss to the Buccaneers when they play Boston Latin Saturday at 10 a.m. at West Roxbury High School.

clogged all running holes. The Bucs gave North's talented tailback Aidan Brown little room to run and held the Red Raiders without a first down in the first half en route to a 28-0 halftime lead.

"Hats off to them. They are a good football team. They moved off the ball well and they have a good running back," said Nutley.

North played better in all phases of the game and battled Bedford evenly in the second half. First, the Red Raiders gave Brown a bit of room to run, and Brown showed the speed, instincts and toughness of a good back. He hit the holes hard, ran through tackles, and needed only a crease to flash his 4.6 speed in the 40.

He had good success running to the left behind Seamus Broughton and Jake Brady. He had four runs of nine yards or better in the second half including a 24-yard beauty midway through the forth period to the Bedford 32 on which he busted four or five tackles. He had 65 yards on nine carries in the second half. Despite the fact that his team was down by four touchdowns, he ran hard.

"We can't expect him to dodge three players every time he gets the ball, but when we gave him a few holes, he showed what he can do. I thought he ran well. He can be be a real good back for us. We just need to block better," said Nutley.

Senior quarterback Joe Fallon also played a good second half. He bought time for himself in the pocket and threw a good, accurate ball for four completions and 65 yards in the second half. He had three completions to Grady and one for 11 yards to Brown.

He found Grady streaking for 27 yards over the middle in the fourth period. The completion brought the Red Raiders to the Bedford two, but a fumble ended the drive.

"Joe threw well in the second half. It would have been good to punch one in late in the game," said Nutley.

Defensively, North was much better. The Red Raiders held Bedford scoreless in the second half and permitted just one sustained drive. Senior Tom Whooley ended the threat by recovering a fumble in the end zone caused by a Jake Petersen hit in the third period. Whooley and John Le each deflected away pass attempts and had good games in the secondary for North.

Broughton, Conor Pound and Brady had strong second halves up front for the Red Raiders. Alex Pham and Tom Koch did a good job backing the line of scrimmage over the final two periods.

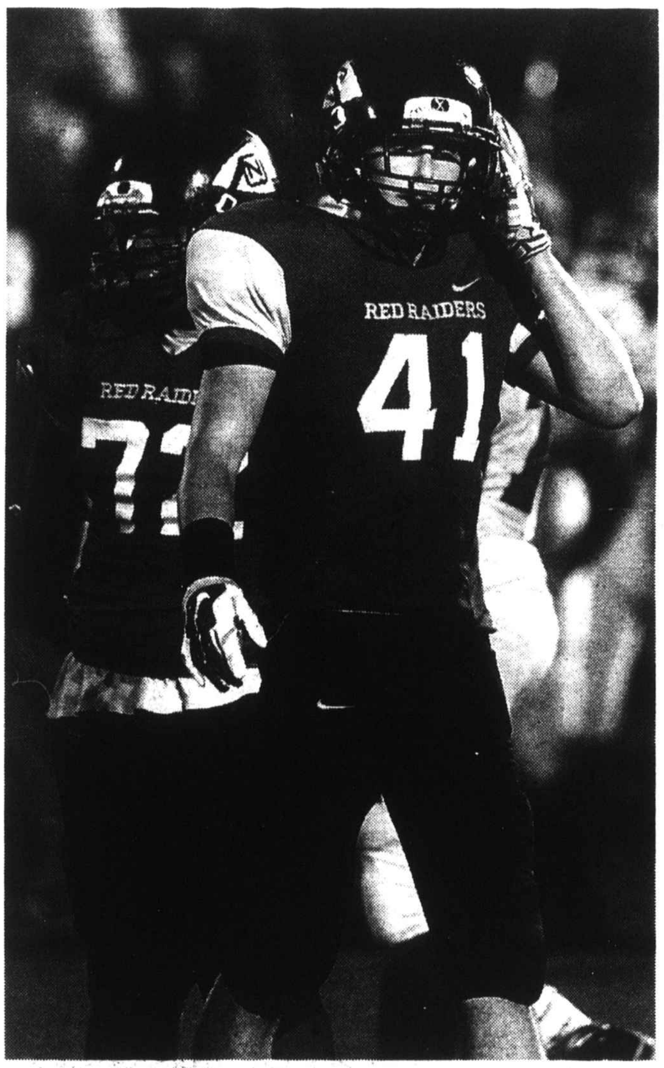
"I thought our tackling improved in the second half, but you can't spot a team 28 points and expect to win," said Nutley.

The first half belonged to Bedford. The Bucs had 157 yards total offense before intermission, all but 19 of it on the ground. Eliason scored on runs of 15 and 10 yards. Aaron Cook and Thomas Greaney each had one-yard scoring runs.

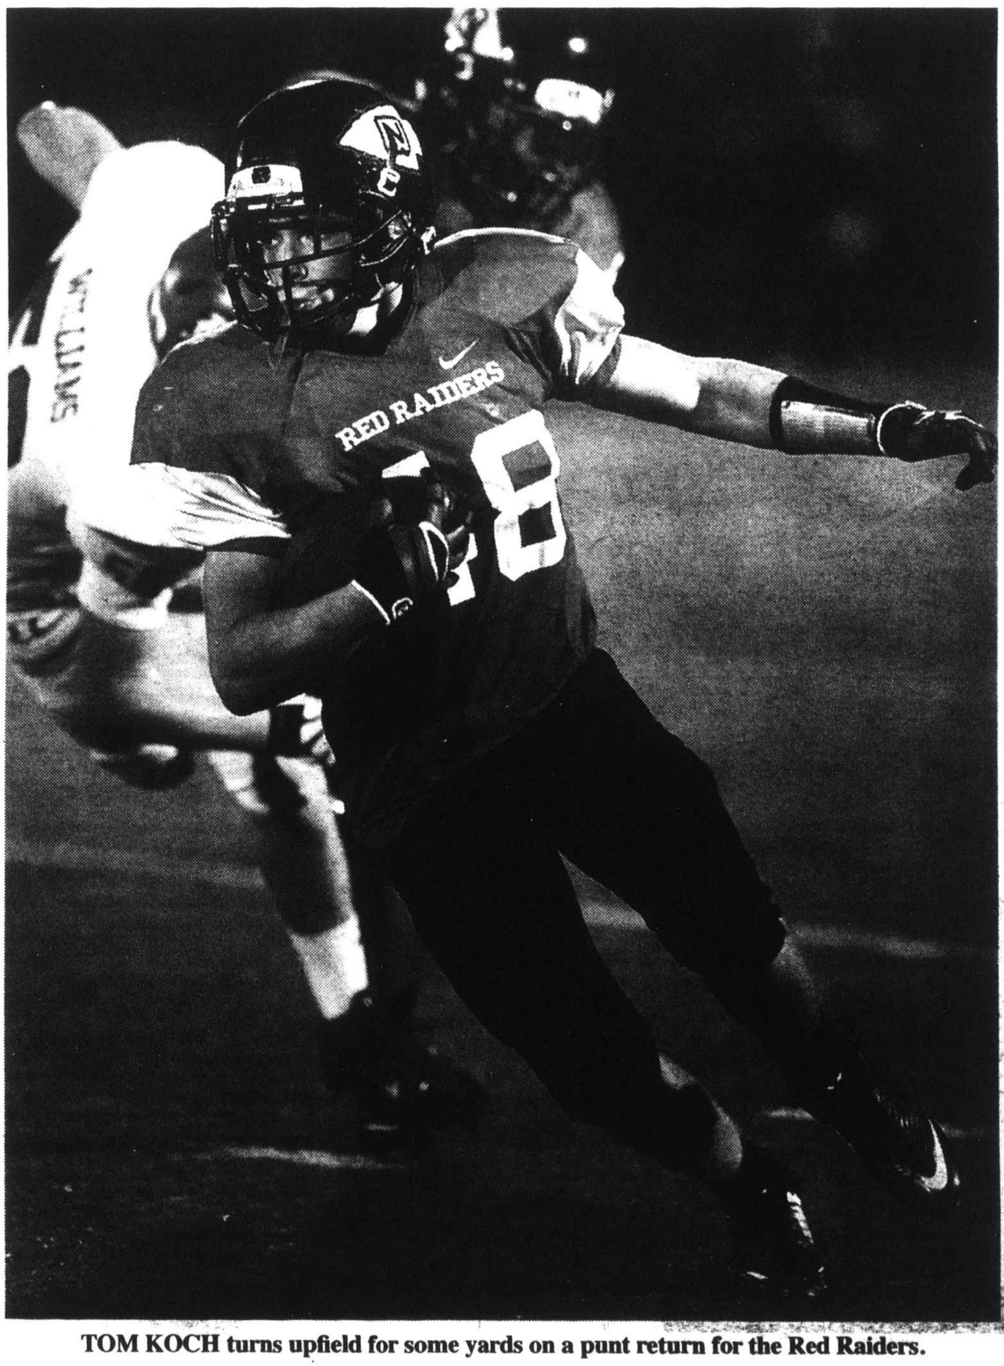
"I thought we we ready," said Nutley. "We played pretty well in the scrimmages. We moved the ball, and we played good defense, but Bedford was too much for us up front tonight."

North travels to West Roxbury High School to play Boston Latin Saturday at 10:00 a.m.

"We need to improve in all phases of the game, or we will be in trouble against Latin," said Nutley.



JAKE GRADY (#41) caught three passes thrown by Quarterback Joe Fallon including a 27-yard reception in the fourth quarter.



TOM KOCH turns upfield for some yards on a punt return for the Red Raiders.

Presidents Seek Second Win In Home Opener

Defeat Braintree, 8-6 • Host Milton Friday At 7 P.M.

By JOE REARDON

Jahvae Handsom-Fields has made his bones as a punishing back capable of breaking a big run with every hand off. That's how he's viewed first and foremost by teams who have gone up against the elusive back.

But there is much more to Handsom-Fields on the gridiron as he prides himself on being a complete football player on both sides of the ball and puts in as much work at improving on his game at defensive back.

So when the face of Quincy High football was having problems picking up yardage (39 yards) in last Friday's nonleague opener against Braintree, he made his impact felt on the other side of the ball.

Handsom-Fields leaped high to intercept a pass by Wamps quarterback Mitchell Nevins in a desperation throw in the closing seconds to preserve the Presidents' enormously satisfying 8-6 season-opening win.

"I wasn't sure if he was going to throw it to my side or not, but I was going to make sure I went everywhere the ball went," said Handsom-Fields, who had a huge season last fall, gaining more than 1,100 rushing yards for the Presidents. "The ball came to my side and I made sure I made the best play I could for my team. I had a couple of big runs but I didn't do much on offense today. I did what I had to do on defense and we came away with the W."

The interception was Handsom-Fields' second of the game, his first coming with 32 seconds left when Nevins was flushed out of the pocket by the Quincy defense.

Quincy head coach Bill Reardon knows just how valuable Handsom-Fields is to the Presidents, no matter what side of the line he is on and takes full advantage of his talents. "A lot of teams go with one-way players, but I just can't take him off the field," he said. "We had a hard time blocking them up front and our line struggled to maintain their blocks. We really couldn't shake Jahvae loose."

Reardon was as relieved as satisfied that the Presidents escaped with a win across the town line against a very physical Wamps team. "The first thing in order is that Braintree team is pretty tough man," said Reardon. "They played very hard tonight. Coach (Brian) Chamberlain has got them doing some good things. I feel like the police are coming because we stole this one tonight.

"We didn't make it easy on ourselves. We have a ton of kinks we have to work out. This was not a very clean game for us. We've got to get better. We expected some mistakes but this was too many."

Braintree got its fans into the game after 33 scoreless minutes with its first possession of the fourth quarter as Nevins scampered into the end zone on a 1-yard keep to cap a 48-yard, 12-play drive for the 6-0 advantage.

The lead didn't stand for long as Quincy quarterback Cody Desmond, who led the Presidents with 78 yards on the ground, connected with Dyreke Johnson (three catches, 59 yards) for a 26-yard score. Desmond rolled out on the conversion play and hit Garrett Cronin at the left front pylon to give Quincy the 8-6 advantage with time running out.

Johnson, who hadn't played since his freshman year, is expected to only get better. "He's back out this year as a senior," said Reardon. "He's still learning. There's a lot of nuances to the game that he's trying to pick up. He's big and he can run and catch so we're going to use him."

Reardon was pleased with Desmond's poise in throwing the ball. "Cody's got some big shoes to fill with James (Lam) and he did pretty good tonight," said Reardon. "We survived by the pass and that's something I didn't think would be our MO."

Mike Munroe set the tone for Quincy's defense through the scoreless first half, bringing down a Braintree back for a loss of six as the Wamps threatened at the Quincy 35 in the first series of the second quarter. "He was immense on the defensive line tonight," said Reardon.

Quincy had its chances to get on the board in the second quarter, marching across midfield after starting from its own 8-yard line, only to have consecutive penalties stall the drive at Braintree's 43-yard line. D.J. Starks also pulled down a Desmond pass for an interception to snuff out a Quincy threat early in the first half.

"It was a good team effort defensively," said Reardon. "We had different kids making tackles at different times. I'm proud of my kids. Football is just such a tough game. You can't quit and you can't give up. You just have to keep fighting and making plays and keep going until the end. They turned the ball over but not once did they get down on themselves. They picked themselves up, they found a way and got it done."

The Presidents take on another Bay State Conference opponent Friday night when they meet Milton at home beginning at 7 p.m.

"Their coach (Steve) Dombrowski was at Swampscott so I'm expecting it to be a no huddle, hurry-up offense," said Reardon. "They'll go, go, go and throw the ball all over the place."

Quincy Boys Soccer Blanks Norwood In Opener

By JOE REARDON

To get an idea of just how deep the Quincy boys soccer team is this season one only has to take a look at sophomore Kevin O'Shea.

The Presidents' talented sophomore scored the first goal of Monday's 2-0 nonleague win over Norwood, alertly racing after a loose ball that Mustang goaltender Steve Tribuna hadn't yet gotten to and drilling it in the short corner for a 1-0 lead in the eighth minute of the first half.

After that heads up play, O'Shea was nowhere to be found on Veterans Memorial Field until almost midway through the fourth quarter. The reason? It was nothing sinister against the heady O'Shea. Head coach Mark Spendlove simply has so much depth this season than he's ever had over the past six seasons he simply wanted to spread out the playing time for his talented bench.

"For the first time since I've been here we have a deep bench and it's nice that we can get people in and out," said Spendlove. "Usually we'd have to run our key players into the ground. We're not in that position this year so it's kind of nice. I have 24 kids who can all do the job. Usually it's been a good seven or eight. I told them they have to be patient."

The season opener was a solid one for the Presidents, whose original opener against Patriot League opponent Pembroke last Thursday was cancelled because of rain and lightning.

Quincy did its job controlling play away from goaltender Robert Smith. The senior captain, though, had his moments in the box, the best stop coming early on when he stretched high to knock an Adam Gold bid from 10-yards out over the crossbar.

"Rob's a good lad," said Spendlove. "He's a senior and has got some experience. He's steady and he'll do the job for us."

Offensively, Quincy had plenty of firepower with fleet-footed Derek Andrade, Hashim Hamdi, Paulo Soares, Tristan McCormick, Antonio Barbosa, Ben Morse and Benito Carvalho keeping the ball past midfield for the majority of of the 80 minutes.

Tribuna looked sharper in the second half and it showed when he robbed Soares and O'Shea on high percentage scoring chances. Quincy didn't have many chances beyond that but didn't need them.

Being the first game of the fall, Quincy obviously had some ticks in their play that Spendlove no doubt believes will work themselves out. "We never really got into a good flow," he said. "We had a little better rhythmn in the preseason games we played, but I was happy with aspects of it. We have the potential this year if we can mesh it all together. The talent's there, we just have to put it together.

"We need to release the ball a little quicker. There's a lot of ability there. We need to let the ball do the work and teams will find it difficult to play against us if we can do that."

The Presidents had their share of bids, one of the best coming with 27:35 remaining in the first half when Batista settled a quick pass from Andrade and unleashed a hard shot from the right side that was just wide of the far post. Hamdi also had a bid with 16:23 left until the break that ended up wide.

Quincy's consistent attack paid off five minutes later when McCormick picked up the rebound from a Hamdi shot in a scrum in front of Tribuna and drilled it home for the 2-0 advantage. Barbosa very nearly put the Presidents up by three in the closing seconds of the half, but Tribuna was right there to scoop up the low, hard shot.

Spendlove especially likes the potential Quincy has to control play not just offensively, but all over the field. With the talent the Presidents have, they could make it very difficult for opposing teams, especially those without much depth. After missing the tournament last year and in 2013 by one agonizing point, the Presidents have a monumental chance to have a special season.

Spendlove hasn't talked about long term goals with the team. He's kept what he expects from the Presidents very simple. "It's been very cliche - just one game at a time," he said. "I told the boys to have some fun with it, enjoy it. I think they have the potential to be an attractive team to watch. We're going to have a go at teams. We're not going to fear teams. We'll have a go and see what happens."

Quincy Downs North For 4th Straight Win

By BILL GRIFFIN

They are a deep, talented, and skilled team. They have balance, a high volleyball IQ, experience forged from two years of playing in important games, and they have the promise of an exciting, successful season stretched out in front of them.

It begins in the front line for Quincy's girls volleyball team. They block, keep points alive and put away winners with both smashes and soft accurate placements. The Presidents boost a terrific defender in junior Jessie Lei. They have two setters with touch and instinct. They have the ability to rattle off a string of points on serve and rescue a game which might be slipping away from them.

They could be very good.

Quincy put all its talents on display in a 25-15, 25-17,

Final Season For NQHS Hockey Program?

Last year, North had 18 players try out for the hockey team. If the trend continues, there will simply not be enough players to field a team.

"We had four freshmen come out last year, but it was their first year experience playing organized hockey, so we struggled with numbers. We were unable to have a JV team last year. The four freshmen played with Quincy's JVs," said Joyce.

"Right now, we have 21 kids that I know of coming out," said Gibbons. "Two are goalies. That leaves 19 skaters and 10 of them are seniors."

Quincy Youth Hockey is one of the strongest programs in the state. Youth hockey teams from Quincy have regularly won state titles and competed in national tournaments.

The problem is many of the best players are choosing private schools. BC High, Catholic Memorial, and Archbishop Williams all have programs for grades 7-8. Instead of continuing with Quincy's middle school program and then moving to the high schools, players in increasing numbers are choosing to play for private schools.

"There's nothing we can do about that," said Joyce. "I can't say enough about Quincy Youth Hockey. The facility is second to none and the program is outstanding. We have a great connection to the youth hockey program. Matt is President of Quincy Youth Hockey. Matt really is youth hockey in the city. The numbers just aren't working out."

"The new Quincy High has been a factor as well in attracting players," said Gibbons.

If this is the final year for the hockey program, North and Quincy will, in all probability, form a co-op teams including players from both schools. Co-op programs in indoor track, cross country, swimming, and girls golf involving players from North and Quincy have worked out well.

"I want to make it clear that there will be a place for hockey players from North Quincy to play their sport," said Joyce. "The success of the co-op programs has been phenomenal. They give kids a chance to play, and it's given them exposure to colleges who might be interested in them. The Bryson twins (Emily and Julia) are a great example in track and cross country."

Joyce said the final decision will probably be made at the Patriot League meeting in April. If there is any outside resistance to the idea of a co-op team, Joyce said the city will do whatever is necessary to provide an opportunity for players from North to play hockey.

"We'll take it to the highest levels if necessary. Our superintendent (Richard DeCristafaro) has assured me that we will have his full support," said Joyce.

It is difficult situation for a school with a rich hockey history.

"When I first realized that it was a possibility, it was like a nightmare," said Joyce. "I couldn't wrap my mind around it. I grew up playing Quincy Youth Hockey and I know what the sport has meant to North. The rivalry games between North and Quincy are just out-of-this-world experiences. Matt is one of the best coaches in the state. We have a former player (Nolan Greene) playing goalie in a junior league in Florida. No team plays harder than North. That's a credit to the kids and Matt."

In Gibbons' six years at North, the Red Raiders made the tournament four times and won or shared three Patriot League titles. In 2012, the Red Raiders advanced to the sectional semifinals against Mansfield.

"We were up by a goal with a couple of minutes left and a kid who ended up being drafted by the NHL scored twice to beat us," said Gibbons. "The following year we made the quarterfinals and lost in a shootout to Mansfield. We are 4-4 in tournament play which is something I am proud of."

North Quincy began its hockey program in 1947. Former Mayor Walter Hannon and a group of students petitioned the school committee to start a team.

"I'm sad to hear that the program may be on its way out," said Hannon. "I loved playing hockey. I played in the South Shore League after I graduated. North has had some great teams over the years, but with numbers like 18 kids going out, it's better to give it up rather than see someone get injured.

"What they should do is combine North and Quincy into one team."

North won a sectional tournament title in 1994. The Red Raiders won league titles in 1951, 1952, 1953, 1974, 2011, 2012, and 2014.

25-19 decision over North Quincy in a Patriot League match for its fourth straight win without a loss Monday afternoon before a large crowd at the Quincy High gym.

"I liked the way we played. We were aggressive and I thought we were good in all phases of the game," said coach Jacqui Niosi. "We have 12 seniors back from a team that went to the tournament the last two years. They've played in big games, and they're not afraid to step up and face the challenge of an important point."

For North, there was the wonderful play of junior Izzy Flaherty who was the best player on the court. She put away smashes, made a soft, spot-on passes, defended against drives and serves, and kept alive several points with acrobatic saves on volleyballs that seemed destined to hit the floor.

"Izzy is amazing. Just when you're certain that a ball is going to hit the floor, she gets it," said Niosi.

"She is a great player. She is our best passer, or best hitter and our best defender. As the season goes on, we want to get her the ball more often in the spots where she likes it," said North coach Kerry Ginty whose team went to 2-2 with the loss.

Inside hitters sophomore Julia Klincewicz (four kills) and junior Becka Thorne (four kills) had strong matches up front for North. Setter Sammie Caldwell moved the ball around well and had eight assists.

"Julia and Becka are both good, up-and-coming hitters. Sammie passed the ball well," said Ginty.

Niosi has stressed defense in the early part of the season, but the strength of Quincy is at the net. Four-year starter Nicole Jorgensen (six kills) can be devastating, but Quincy has much more. Anhexla Hoti (six aces, five kills), Sarah Gibbons (five kills) and Maggie Parker (four kills) are all experienced players who not only can hit, but move as one to set up openings.

"Quincy's front line is excellent. They have depth and talent," said Ginty.

Lei had six digs for the Presidents. She defended against serves and smashes, and she moved the ball well to the front line for the setters to find the hitters in good position.

"Jesse is very fast, and she has good instincts," said Niosi. "She was a little shy, but she's getting more vocal. She is beginning to take charge back there."

Hoti and senior Alicia Walker (four aces) served brilliantly, and it was the serve which turned around each of the three games. In the first game, Walker (four aces) ran eight straight winning points off serve to change an 8-8 tie into a 16-8 Quincy lead. In the second game, Hoti ran seven straight to open an 8-7 Quincy lead to a 15-7 advantage.

In the third game, when North was in control of much of the action, Hoti strung together 10 consecutive winning points on serve to rally Quincy from down, 10-4 to a 14-10 lead.

They served with pace, accuracy and touch.

"I thought we served well the entire match, but Anhexla pulled us out of a big hole in the third game," said Niosi.

Quincy's biggest challenge this season was replacing all-league setter Emma Kelly who graduated. Walker (nine assists) and junior Danielle Parry (12 assists) have each set up the front line well in the early matches of the season.

"They both mix it up well and know where the hitters like the ball. They give us flexibility with two players who can set for us," said Niosi.

"One of the reasons Quincy can run an offense to the people at the net is they pass they ball well," said Ginty.

North improved as the match went on, and played its best volleyball in the third game. Junior Remy Aucoin served well early in the game, and Flaherty, Klincewicz, and Thorne took back the net. North was up, 10-5 and was within, 19-18, but Parker split the defense with a smash and forced an error. Gibbons finished it with a kill, but Ginty saw good things from her team in the final game.

"I think the biggest factor was we cut down on unforced mistakes and kept the ball in play. We did better moving the ball to our hitters, and that's something we want to keep improving," she said.

Quincy hosts Hingham Friday at 5:30 p.m. North is at home against Fontbonne Monday at 5:30 p.m.

NQ Girls Soccer Cruise Over Fontbonne

The North Quincy girls soccer team needed a late first half goal to propel them past the Fontbonne Academy Ducks, 9-0.

Senior forward Charlotte Chretien got the Raiders on the board with 11 minutes left in the first half, converting a cross by senior captain, Molly Donahue, heading the ball past Madison Ramsey, the Ducks keeper. But it was a goal with three seconds left in the half by Mandy Hazelton that provided the spark the home team needed.

Hazelton, a junior midfielder, scored her first varsity goal hitting a half-volley out of the air in a cross by senior captain Hailey Houlihan.

Three minutes into the seond half, Donohue converted the first of her two goals of the afternoon, taking a Jillian Hallisey feed for a 3-0 lead.

Three minutes later, Chretian scored her second, driving a ball from 18 yards out with the helper going to Hallisey. Sinead Hanley then found senior captain Marissa McCue with a cross. McGue beaded the ball in from 8 yards out. Hanley then found the back of the net with the assist going to Abbie Koch. Transfer student, Emily Butruccio scored on a great run down the left sideline and beat the keeper to the top corner from 15 yards out.

Emily Anglehart notched her first of the year with the assist going to Ali Coleman. Donahue also added a goal with junior defender Devan Yilgor credited with the assist.

"Our offense was clicking in the second half. It didn't matter who we had in there, they all played well together. I thought Fontbonne was a much improved team from last year, but I thought they may have tired in the second half," North Quincy coach, Paul Bregoli noted. For the Ducks, playing well were juniors Colleen Stravin and Caroline Butts, while freshman Abigail Kraunelis also played well.

Shannan Kennedy had 4 saves for the shutout.

The Red Raiders hosted Boston Latin Tuesday and travels to Plymouth South on Wednesday and Hanover on Friday. Both games begin at 4 p.m.

Apaches Ride Down Mustangs In QFYL Opener

By SEAN HALPIN

The Apaches opened the Quincy Youth Football League varsity season with a hard fought victory over the Milton Mustangs.

The Mustangs took an early lead when QB Liam Reagan rushed for a 9-yard TD. The conversion rush failed but, Milton went ahead 6-0 early in the first quarter.

Both defenses were stifling throughout most of the first half. The Apaches mounted a long drive late in the second quarter with some fine running by Tyler Le, Coleman Flaherty and Andrew Bradley. The Apaches drive was halted when Mustang DB Regan intercepted the ball in the end zone. The Mustangs entered the locker room at halftime ahead 6-0.

The Apaches' defense came up big in the third quarter. Apaches DT, Mikey Levine partially blocked a Mustang punt and gave the Apaches' offense the ball on the 32-yard line. Apaches QB, Danny Scolaro drove design the park from the administration of then-Gov. Deval Patrick; Halvorson Design was subsequently awarded the contract to design it. Baker said the $1 million grant was the largest one awarded by the Executive Office of Energy and Environmental Affairs' urban park program.

"Efforts like this – like the revitalization of Quincy – require partnerships and shared investment on the part of the citizens of the commonwealth and the city of Quincy to bring about a better vision and a better future," Baker said.

"It's very appropriate for the state to invest in this project," Polito said. "We should partner with you to make this asset available and attractive for people that come to visit our state and come to visit this great city of Quincy."

"This is just long overdue," Sen. John Keenan said. "To have two presidents buried here in this type of traffic…I think is an injustice to what they represent to this country."

ADAMS HANCOCK COMMON designs were shown Monday as Gov. Charlie Baker announced a $4.2 million grant had been awarded to the city for utility work related to the park's construction. The new park will link City Hall and the United First Parish Church, which will require the closure of a portion of Hancock Street. The park will cost up to $20 million to build. The designs shown Monday include (clockwise, from top left) a rendering of the park's promenade, which will sit where Hancock Street is currently located; a rendering showing an aerial view of the park from the Quincy Center MBTA station; a pergola, which will be located in the vicinity of the glass city hall annex; and the park's design.

A $7 million federal earmark is being used to finance related roadway work currently underway in Quincy Center, which is being overseen by the state. The underground infrastructure work will not begin until the roadway project is completed later this year. With the $4.2 million in place, Koch said the city would be able to put specifications for the work together and go out to bid, a process that will take several months.

Construction of the park itself is expected to cost between $10 and $20 million, Koch said. The city plans to use the state's Infrastructure Investment Incentive (I-Cubed) program to finance construction of the park. The city received preliminary approval to use $40 million in I-Cubed funds for two downtown projects – the new park and a bridge at Cliveden Street – and the deadline for final approval has been extended to 2017. The city will be eligible to receive funds from the I-Cubed program once new development in Quincy Center meets certain thresholds for new state tax revenue.

Cliveden Place Gets Planning Board Approval

Construction Of Second Redevelopment Project In Quincy Center Expected To Take 18 Months

By SCOTT JACKSON

Construction of the second redevelopment project in Quincy Center – featuring a combined 56 condominium units and 7,500 square feet of ground floor retail – is expected to take 18 months.

The Planning Board on Sept. 9 signed off on Galvcon Development's proposal to construct Cliveden Place, which will be located at 1545 - 1563 Hancock St. and 64 Ross Way. The project was approved nearly six months after the West of Chestnut project – backed by Quincy Mutual and Gate Residential – received its approval from the Planning Board. Both projects received certificates of consistency (COCs) from the board, which certifies they meet the city's guidelines for Quincy Center redevelopment.

"We are one of the first to take a leap of faith, to make a major investment in Quincy's new downtown. We can only pray that others will follow us so that we're not the only ones there. This is the second COC. Hopefully there are many more that follow," developer Sean Galvin, who runs Galvcon with his brother Scott, told the Planning Board.

The project site is currently home to two buildings, including a former Woolworth's, that were built in the 1950s, according to Galvin. He previously told The Sun demolition on site could commence as soon as October. The project will provide additional revenue to the city, Galvin said, including new revenue to pay off District Improvement Financing bonds.

"We want to maximize the site's value and maximize the DIF revenue by constructing the two large residential buildings in the place of the underutilized buildings that are there," he said at the Planning Board meeting.

It will take 18 months to complete the project, Galvin stated at the Sept. 9 meeting, during which time the company plans to close Cliveden Street to traffic; that requires further approval from the city. The sidewalk on the opposite side of Cliveden Street, adjacent to the building at 1515 Hancock St., will remain open to pedestrians.

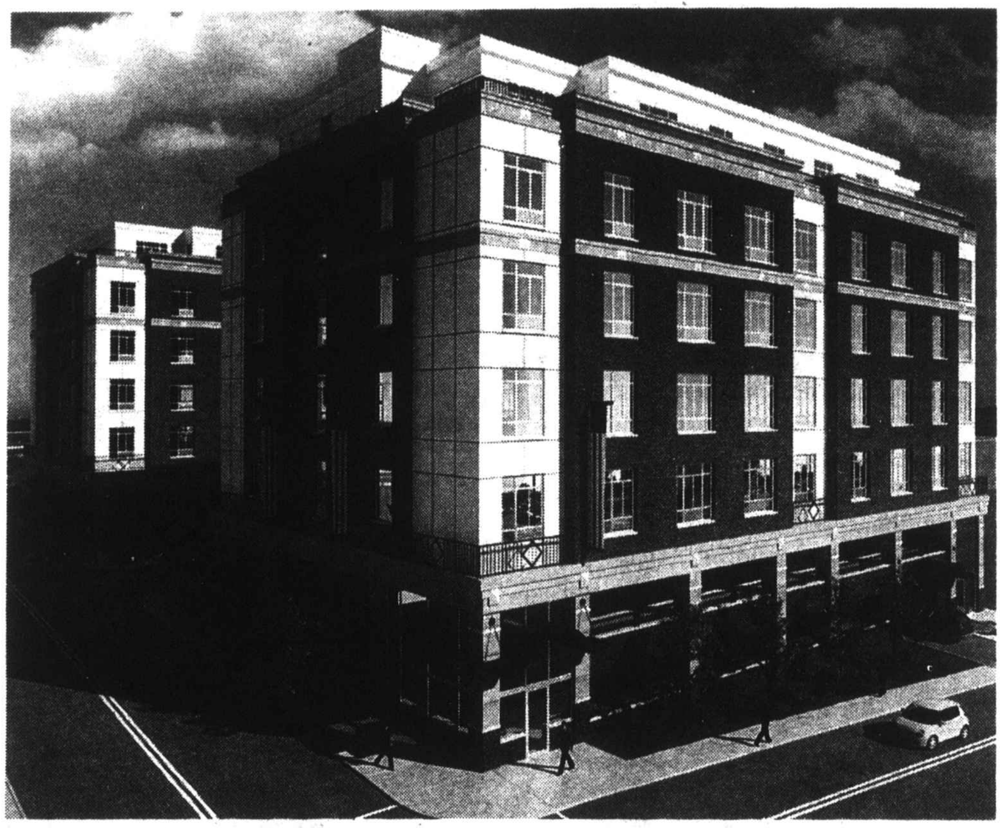
The project's east tower, located on the corner of Hancock and Cliveden Streets, will include 7,500 square feet of ground level retail, which Galvin said will likely be split between two tenants. A 120-foot-long colonnade will run along the front of the building, with a 22-foot-wide sidewalk, which could be utilized for outside seating and dining. The building's top five floors will include 28 condos – 22 units with two bedrooms and six three-bedroom units.

The west tower, on the corner of Ross Way and Cliveden Street, will have room for 36 vehicles in its basement and on the first floor. Twenty-eight condos will be located in the five floors above; like the east tower, 22 of those units will have two bedrooms and six will have three bedrooms.

"The building design is very traditional," Galvin said. "It features brick facades, detailed cornices, large windows and in keeping with the downtown design guidelines, the first floors are designed to be transparent and pedestrian friendly."

Located between the two buildings will be a surface level parking lot with room for an additional 22 vehicles. Spaces in that lot will be shared spaces, meaning they will be used by residents of the condos overnight and by customers of the retail tenants during the day.

"Our anticipation is those are primarily going to be daytime businesses. For them to get along with the neighbors, we're going to make sure that's the mix when they're done," Galvin said.



WEST TOWER at Cliveden Place, on the corner of Ross Way and Cliveden Street, will include 36 parking spaces on its basement and first floor. An additional 22 spaces will be located between the west tower (foreground) and east tower (background). Demolition on site could begin in October and construction is expected to take 18 months.

Artist Rendering Courtesy Galvcon Development

The 36 spaces in the west tower are reserved for residents of the buildings.

As part of the project, Galvcon will install new water and sewer lines to connect with the buildings, a stormwater system that will capture all runoff on site, and remove an outdated electrical substation located in the basement of 1563 Hancock St. and replace it with surface mounted transformers between the buildings. The company will also construct new sidewalks around the project site.

"The city doesn't plan to do the Hancock Street corridor soon enough for our time schedule, so we agreed to take on the expense of taking on all the new infrastructure and sidewalks around the property," Galvin said. "This creates handicap access for the public and provides landscaping and new surfacing."

During the public hearing on the proposal, the Rev. Sheldon Bennett urged the Planning Board to reject the project because the urban renewal covenant reached between the city and the developer does not contain any provision regarding affordable housing; he did, however, say the project was an "excellent" one, adding that he has great respect for the Galvins.

"I do urge rejection of this current application as it currently stands for a certificate of [consistency] on the grounds that the urban redevelopment covenant, as it is currently written, between the applicant of the city for this project is not consistent with the URDP, which explicitly included affordable housing as an objective for the downtown," Bennett said.

Bennett said affordable housing in the downtown is a goal of the Urban Revitalization and Development Plan for Quincy Center, but conceded the city's Inclusionary Zoning Ordinance exempts urban renewal projects from affordable housing requirements.

William Geary, the board's chairman, then read a letter from Assistant City Solicitor Paul Hines, which said the project was exempt from affordable housing requirements under the city's zoning code.

Robert Stevens, the urban renewal planner for the Planning Department, noted the department is updating Quincy's housing production plan. One aspect of that five-year plan is affordable housing.

"That will be another tool as move forward to encourage more affordable housing here in our city," Stevens said.

his offense down to the goal line and RB Tyler Le rushed the ball in from 1-yard out. The conversion attempt failed and the Apaches faced a tie ballgame entering the fourth quarter.

The Apaches' defense came up big again when DT Declan Geary sacked the Mustang QB on third down, forcing Milton to punt from their own 5-yard line. The Apaches took the ball on the Mustang 42-yard line with 2:50 left to go. The Apaches drove the ball down inside the 10-yard line.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

LT. DAN MINTON

On Tuesday, September 8, 2015, at approximately 10:35 p.m., Officers Mark Millane and Mike Kelly were dispatched to a Wollaston area home for a family trouble call.

Upon their arrival, the Officers were met by a male at the door, who said that his 21 year old daughter was out with her boyfriend and when she came home he and his wife could tell that she had been drinking alcohol. They both told their daughter it would be best if she went directly to bed. The daughter then became upset and started swearing at her parents. This escalated to their daughter swinging her arms and hands at her mother, with many blows missing her. The daughter then grabbed her mother by the arms and started to wrestle with her. After letting her mother go, the daughter picked up a kitchen knife and threw it into a kitchen cabinet causing a gouge. The knife was not thrown in the direction of either parent.

The Officers then spoke with the daughter sitting on the couch in the living room. When asked if she was having a problem with her parents, the daughter said, "No". Asked if she had been drinking, she said, "Yes, I had one drink at the Outback in Randolph with my boyfriend."

Officer Millane went into the kitchen to speak with the parents again. He observed the silver blade of a knife on the floor in the kitchen with a blue handle which was broken off from the blade.

The mother then said that she heard what her daughter said and stated, "I know her. She had more than one drink." The mother added to the account of what occurred by saying that after detecting that her daughter had been drinking, she told her daughter that it is around 10:00 p.m. and that she should go to bed because she has to go to work tomorrow morning. She said that her daughter started swearing at her over and over and then grabbed her by the arms and started to push and pull at her very aggressively, but she was able to break away. The mother said she and her husband then went in the living room and it was at this time their daughter threw a knife into a cabinet in the kitchen and said, "So what, you're having the kitchen done over anyway."

The daughter, a 21 year old Quincy resident, was placed under arrest for, "Domestic Assault and Battery" against her mother. After being advised of their rights under the domestic violence laws, the parents said that they did not wish to seek a restraining order at this time. Nice Work!

Registry Of Deeds Offers Online Consumer Notification Service

Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell reminds residents about the availability of a free on-line Consumer Notification Service offered by the Registry to protect Norfolk County property owners against potential property fraud.

"The F.B.I. has reported that property and mortgage fraud is one of the fastest growing white collar crimes in the United States. Many jurisdictions across the country have reported individuals recording fraudulent documents and making it appear like they own another person's home or property. While we have been fortunate that this problem has not manifested itself in Norfolk County, I want to make sure my office is proactively and vigorously protecting consumers," O'Donnell said.

Any owner of real property in any of the twenty-eight communities comprising Norfolk County can sign-up for the Consumer Notification Service free of charge by doing the following: From the Registry's website, www.norfolkdeeds.org, click on the button Consumer Notification Alerts to complete initial registration. From there, follow the remaining sign-up instructions. Once you have signed up for the service, each subscriber will be able to input two names, individual or business, and the corresponding city or town in Norfolk County for monitoring. They can monitor their real estate for changes in liens, deeds, homesteads or other land documents that might be recorded against the property.

If a document is recorded against one of the names inputted for monitoring, the subscriber will be alerted via email, usually within 24 hours. If a subscriber believes a fraudulent land record has been recorded against their property, they would then immediately contact the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds Customer Service Center at (781) 461-6101. Another option available to those who receive a notification is to consult the Registry's on-line land research records at www.norfolkresearch.org. The subscriber would also be given a list of public safety referrals by the Registry.

"Part of my job as Register is to provide secure, accurate and accessible land records for all Norfolk County communities," O'Donnell said. "I also want to be proactive in ensuring there is no fraudulent activity related to land document recordings.

"By offering the Consumer Notification Service, we will be able to provide a level of protection to the program's subscribers against unscrupulous individuals who would attempt to commit property and mortgage fraud."

492 Apartments Proposed At Crown Colony

off of Marriott Drive. Garry Gardner, vice president and principal of Quincy-based Sheskey Architects, said the new apartments would appeal to the 4,000 workers currently employed in Crown Colony.

"If you work there, you could possibly live here. That's the big idea here," Gardner said. "It's been tried before successfully in another project Mr. Flatley has done – similar scale and size, similar proximity to the office. It turns out that 25 to 30 percent of the people who live in that community work in the office park."

Additionally, Gardner noted the site is close both to major highways – Interstates 93 and 95 as well as Route 3 – and the Quincy Adams MBTA station; shuttle service presently provided between the office park and train station could be expanded if the apartment complex is constructed. The site, which sits about 60 feet above Burgin Parkway, will also provide residents living there with views of Boston, Quincy Bay and the Blue Hills.

"We came up with a layout of buildings on the site that focuses both inwards and outwards," Gardner said. "Inwards to what will be a landscaped park with a clubhouse, a pool, a skating pond and nicely landscaped area. Focusing outwards to the views...certainly the upper units will have tremendous views of the locations I just mentioned."

Two of the six residential buildings will reach six stories high and remaining four buildings five stories high. Garages in the first floor of each building will have a combined 319 parking spaces; 542 surface spaces will be available as well, for a total of 861 parking spots.

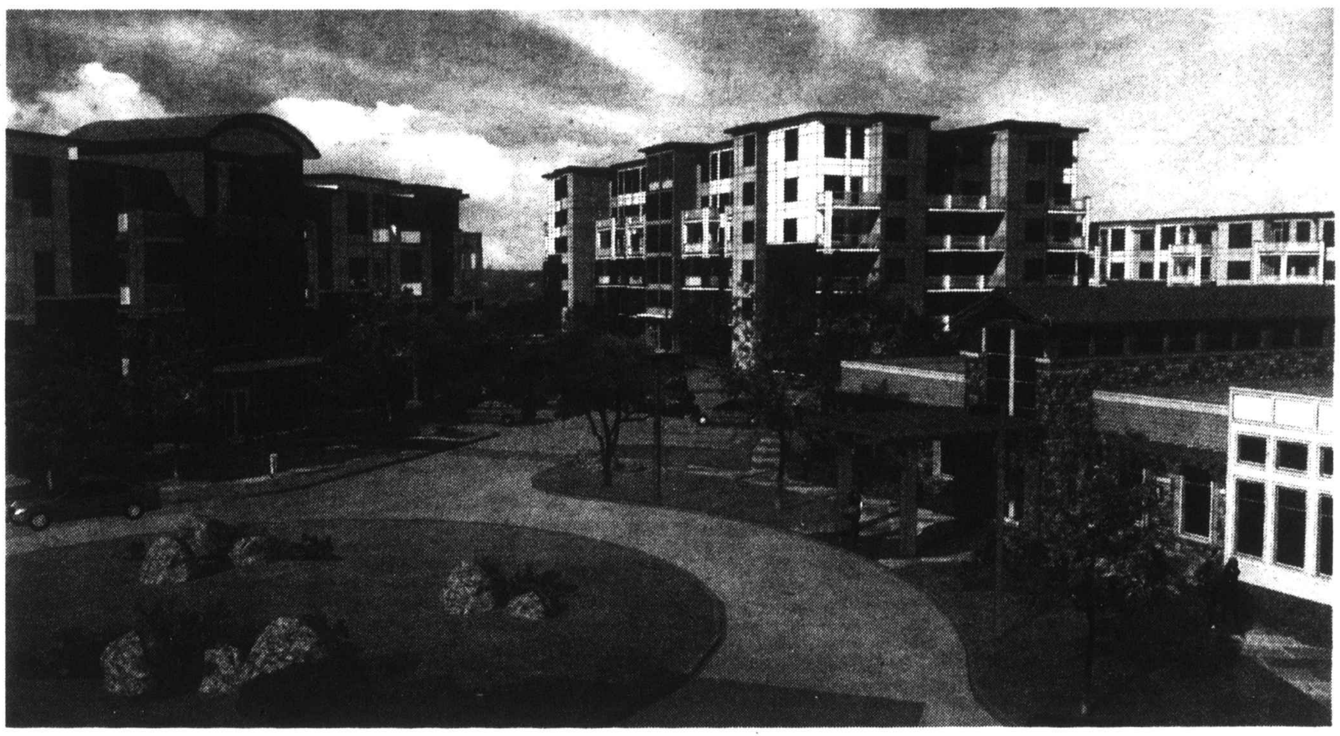
The complex will include a mix of one- and two-bedroom units. Ed Fleming, the attorney for the applicant, said those units would primarily appeal to young professionals and empty nesters.

Giles Ham, managing principal of Vanasse & Associates, said the new apartment would create 2,600 daily vehicle trips and 200 to 230 trips during peak hours. He said that would be "significantly less" traffic than a similar size office development would create. The flow of vehicles in and out of the new apartments, Ham added, would be opposite that of vehicles entering the offices at Crown Colony.

"Everybody is coming in in the morning to the office use and our traffic is exiting and likewise the reverse commute in the afternoon," Ham said. "So it's really compatible and there is less traffic on top of that."

Ham said the developer would improve pedestrian access by making upgrades at intersections near the site – including Centre Street and Burgin Parkway, Centre Street and Crown Colony Drive and Centre Street and Copeland Street – as part of mitigation for the project.

The developer would tap into the existing 12-inch water main and eight-inch sewer line on Marriott Drive to provide service to the apartment complex, according to Fred Keylor of H.W. Moore Associates.



CROWN COLONY apartment proposal includes 492 one- and two-bedroom units in six five- and six-story buildings. The proposal also includes a clubhouse (pictured at right), tennis court, skating pond, pool and a perimeter walking path as well as 861 parking spaces. The applicant presented plans for the 21-acre site at the Planning Board's Sept. 9 meeting and the board could vote on the project as soon as Oct. 14.

Ask Barbara Graceffa: Secretary Of The Interior

My 6 x 9-foot breezeway opens to my very small kitchen which has a wide opening to my dining room. I have decided on three shades of grey for those two rooms but I wonder if there would be too much grey if I add it to the breezeway as well. Also, all four walls have doors: three regular paneled doors, an open arch to the kitchen, plus double French doors to my yard. It also has a vaulted ceiling. Rosemary

P.S. My go-to color has always been green but my family thinks it's time for a change.

BARBARA GRACEFFA

There would not be too many greys if you choose one of the three existing greys from your kitchen and living room – especially since the rooms are small. However, because greys are neutral colors, the sky is the limit when it comes to paint choices.

Because of all the doors, I'd recommend the lightest grey from your current palette for walls, doors, woodwork, and ceiling. By painting them all the same, your eye is tricked into thinking the room is larger; if you painted the doors and walls in different colors, it might look too choppy in the small room. However, you can still choose a focal wall and paint it a different color. Assuming one wall has only one paneled door, choose one of the taller walls than rise up to the ceiling's high point for the accent wall.

Try a dusty plum color. On this wall, paint the doors and trim, baseboards, and wall the same plum color so it blends to appear as one large wall. If you have artwork or other existing green accessories to hang on that wall, they will look terrific together.

Go to the paint store and see what first catches your eye. Perhaps it's a rose, soft blue or yellow, or peach or apricot hue. If it is a green like sage or a pale greenish teal, embrace it!

Hearing On Quarry Hills Proposal Delayed

By SCOTT JACKSON

A scheduled hearing on a proposal to construct two six-story buildings with 269 one- and two-bedroom apartments and 430 parking spaces at Quarry Hills was postponed to Oct. 5,

The City Council, acting in its capacity as Quincy's special permit granting authority, had scheduled a hearing on the proposal for Sept. 8. The hearing was rescheduled to Oct. 5, however, so the council could first address Mayor Thomas Koch's August reassignment of longtime Planning Director Dennis Harrington to a different position within the Planning Department during the Sept. 8 meeting, the body's first meeting after its summer recess.

The council held a hearing in June on developer William Locke's plan to build the residential complex off Quarry Hills Drive. The eight-acre project site – identified as 00 Ricciuti Drive Rear on the city assessor's maps – is near the Milton line in a densely wooded area. Marian Manor previously received permission from the city to construct an assisted and independent living complex on site in 2007, but was unable to follow through on construction.

Five residents of Ricciuti Drive opposed the project during the June meeting, citing concerns over traffic; the manager of Cunningham Park in Milton also spoke against the project because of concerns over runoff.

Other stakeholders including former Mayor Walter Hannon, representing Granite Links; Al Bina of the Quincy Quarry and Granite Workers Museum; representatives of two local labor unions; and one Ricciuti Drive resident, spoke in favor of the proposal.

The Planning Board on Sept. 9 voted to give a positive recommendation to the proposal.

Party City Moving To Hannon Parkway

By SCOTT JACKSON

A former gym in Quincy Center will be renovated and given a new façade; the building will be the new home of the Party City store currently located on Granite Street, which has outgrown its present square footage.

The Planning Board on Sept. 9 approved the application of Parkingway Acquisitions LLC for a special permit to renovate the store's new location. The store will be moving to the site of a former gym at 150 Parkingway, which is actually located on the Hannon Parkway.

The owners of the building will give it a new façade, including glass windows around the front entrance; the building's exterior is currently solid brick. The footprint of the building will remain the same.

"Knowing that this is going to be a gateway to the city of Quincy and more importantly a gateway to the Quincy Center district, they want to change the outside of the building. We're not changing the footprint. We're not making it larger. We're not adding parking," Robert Harnais, the attorney for the applicant, said. "All we're doing is making it a nicer building."

As part of the renovation project, the owners have also agreed to remove several empty sign boards that line the retaining wall of the building's parking lot on the Hannon Parkway. The parking lot on the roof of the building will remain in, with new lines painted.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Although practical situations continue to dominate this week, there's time for the Lamb to indulge in the fun things in life -- like maybe taking a special someone out for a great evening.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) This week favors relationships. Take time to renew old ones, and make time to go where new friends can be found. On a more practical note, expect news about a business deal.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You should be seeing some progress on that new workplace situation. Meanwhile, family matters might demand more attention, and you'll want to set aside time to deal with them.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A relationship suddenly might present some challenges you never expected. After talking things out, you might want to consider taking some time to assess what you've learned.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A disappointing response to a request might dampen the Lion's spirits. But you might want to ask the reasons behind it. What you learn can be of great importance in a future undertaking.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A once-volatile situation should be settled by now, giving you a chance to refocus on a project you've been planning for. Look for an interested party to rally to your support.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A business matter that unexpectedly turns into a personal situation could create complications. Best to resolve the matter now before too much harm can be done.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Emotions can run high when they involve personal matters that no one really wants to talk about. But this could be a good time to create the means to a workable outcome.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A positive response to a workplace request could lead the way to other long-sought changes. Congratulations. A personal situation also takes a welcome turn.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Patience pays off, as that once-overwhelming work situation continues to become easier to handle on a one-by-one basis. Look for positive news from a colleague.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) It might be a good idea to take more time to reassess your next move in working out a complex situation. You could benefit from a new perspective on the matter.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You might want to consider making time to discuss a change of plans with everyone concerned. Be prepared to explain your actions. Also be prepared to listen to alternatives.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a strong sense of what is right, and you try to work from that foundation. Friends see you as reliable.

Owner Plans To Demolish Iconic Wollaston Theatre

By SCOTT JACKSON

Eighty-nine years after it first opened its doors, the Wollaston Theatre could be torn down in the coming months over concerns about the building's structural integrity in the wake of last winter's record-breaking snowfall.

Affectionately known as "The Wolly" to many Quincy residents, the Wollaston Theatre first opened in 1926 as a vaudeville theater and was repurposed to a movie house in the 1930s. The theater, located at 14 Beale St., has been closed since 2003.

The building's current owner, Miao Kun "Michael" Fang, purchased the site in 2012 for $600,000 from Yvonne Chandler. Chandler and her late husband, Arthur, had owned the building since 1979.

Stephen Crawford, a spokesman for Fang, said the structure is beyond repair because damage sustained over the past two winters.

'GOODBYE OLD FRIEND' – This note was taped to the front door of the Wollaston Theatre by a former employee. News of the owner's plans to demolish the longtime neighborhood theater has left many feeling nostalgic and disappointed.

Expansion Eyed At Housing Authority

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Quincy Housing Authority may look to expand in the future by taking over operations of smaller housing authorities in neighboring communities and creating new developments for residents being squeezed out of the city by rising rents.

Three top officials at the Quincy Housing Authority – Executive Director James Lydon, Facilities Director James Marathas and Finance Director Grace McAuliffe – discussed those and other changes at the agency during a recent interview.

The concept of merging the Quincy Housing Authority, which owns nearly 1,600 state- and federally-funded units, is in line with the state's effort to eliminate smaller housing authorities throughout Massachusetts, Lydon said. The Massachu-

Voters Decide 2 Mayoral Nominations Thursday

• Nominations For Two Ward Seats Also At Stake In Preliminary Election

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

The race for the mayor's seat will be narrowed from four candidates to two nominations today (Thursday) when Quincy voters head to the polls in the only citywide contest on the preliminary election ballot.

The two mayoral candidates who receive the most votes today (Thursday) will be nominated and advance to the final election Nov. 3. The winner Nov. 3 will be elected to the city's first four-year mayoral term that begins in January. Voters approved doubling the term of mayor to four years by initiative petition in 2013.

City Clerk Joseph Shea is predicting 17,352 voters – about 32 percent of the city's 54,226 registered voters – will cast ballots in the preliminary election today (Thursday).

Polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. Election results should be tallied by 9:30 p.m. Thursday evening, Shea said.

Results will be posted on The Quincy Sun website – www.TheQuincySun.com – Thursday evening.

Voters in Ward 2 and Ward 3 will also narrow the field in contests for council seats. Three candidates are vying for two council nominations in each of those wards.

Single-Family Homes Seen At Star Of Sea Site

By SCOTT JACKSON

The developer who purchased the former Star of the Sea Church in Squantum is scrapping plans to convert the existing buildings on site into 14 condominium units and is likely to move forward with plans to build four single-family homes instead following feedback from residents at a recent community meeting.

Victor Sheen, founder of Brookline-based Oakgrove Residential, presented his original plan to convert the church and its rectory into the 14 condos – nine in the church and five in the rectory, the latter of which would have space set aside for a community room for Squantum residents – during a community meeting Sept. 15 at the Squantum Elementary School. Twenty-eight parking spaces would have been provided on site under that plan.

Nearly 200 residents attended the Sept. 15 meeting and those who spoke said they would prefer the existing buildings on site be torn down and replaced by single-family homes. The 37,200-square-foot lot at 101-105 Bellevue Road is in a Residential A zoning district, which allows single-family homes by right.

"I want single-family homes. That's what I want,"

SQUANTUM RESIDENTS objected to a proposal to convert the former Star of the Sea Church (pictured) on Bellevue Road into 14 condo units at a recent community meeting. Developer Victor Sheen said following the meeting he would likely pursue building four single-family homes on site instead, which is what the zoning code allows by right. Sheen purchased the former church for $600,000 in June. Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Bosworth

Meeting On Deer Hunt Oct. 1

By SCOTT JACKSON

State officials will hold a meeting Oct. 1 for Quincy residents on plans to allow deer hunting later this year in the Blue Hills Reservation.

The Oct. 1 meeting will be held at the Lincoln-Hancock Community School's auditorium, 300 Granite St., from 6:30 to 8 p.m.

Hunting has been prohibited in the Blue Hills, but the Department of Conservation and Recreation is finalizing plans to allow deer hunting in the Blue Hills Reservation this year because of an overabundance of deer in the 7,000-acre park.

A May 2013 survey by the Division of Fisheries and Wildlife found there were at least 85 deer per square mile of deer habitat in the Blue Hills. DFW's statewide deer management range is six to 18 deer per square mile of forest; more than 20 deer per square mile can lead to negative impacts in northeastern forests.

Under DCR's draft deer management plan for the park, shotgun hunting of deer would be allowed in the Blue Hills Reservation for four days during the state's shotgun hunting season, which begins the Monday after Thanksgiving and last for two weeks. This year's deer hunt in the Blue Hills would take place on Nov.

PLAYING TIGHT AND LOOSE

While delicate layered chains and tiny pendants continue to be popular, the current trend has necklaces taking divergent paths. To begin with, there has been renewed interest in longer gold chains from which multiple pendants dangle. The focus is on smaller, more delicate pendants rather than larger pieces. In addition, there is a carryover effect from last summer's very popular y-shaped "Bikini Necklace.: The lariat-style of the cleavage-enhancing necklace will make its way from the beach to the plunging necklines of blouses, sweaters, and gowns. However, even as these longer necklaces become increasingly popular, there is a trend growing in the opposite direction toward chokers. These tight-fitting necklaces feature lots of metal and vintage styling.

The Chiefs Gorman Honored

There were stories and smiles, handshakes and hugs.

Most of all, there was appreciation and gratitude for two longtime public servants who served the city and Quincy Fire Department with distinction.

On a sunny September morning last Saturday, the city dedicated a plaque honoring the legacy and professionalism of the late Thomas Gorman and his son, Thomas Jr.: the only father-son tandem to serve as Quincy fire chief.

As a brigade of proud family and throng of admirers looked on, Thomas Jr. and his sister, Marylou Thomas, removed a bright red plastic cover to unveil a beautiful bronze plaque fastened to the brick exterior at Quincy Fire Headquarters on Quincy Avenue. Tom Jr. paused to read the inscription and then clapped. His sister beamed next to him with pride. The crowd also applauded showing its appreciation for two men who combined served the Quincy Fire Department for 80 years – 30 of them as chief.

The plaque reads:

"The Chiefs Gorman: The name Gorman echoes a proud legacy of leadership at the Quincy Fire Department. The father-son tandem served the department a combined 30 years as chief with over 80 years combined served to the City of Quincy. What became a family tradition for the Gormans has become an example for firefighters of professionalism, dedication and brotherhood. A grateful city salutes their commitment and service."

The plaque also features small engraved portraits of the two chiefs with their years of service.

Thomas F. Gorman was appointed to the Quincy Fire Department in 1925 and was appointed chief in November, 1947. He retired in July 1967. He died in 1985.

His son, Thomas Jr., was appointed to the Quincy Fire Department in 1963. He was appointed chief in October 1991 and retired in July 2002.

Asked after the unveiling how much the plaque means to him, Tom Jr. replied, "Seeing just my father on this plaque would have been enough. It really means something to us. Some of us pass through this life and never get any recognition and probably should.

"I am so proud that they thought enough of me and my father to do this. For years to come people will see this plaque and they probably won't know who the Gormans are but they will be reminded by the plaque."

The two Gormans served on the Quincy Fire Department at the same time for only four of those 80 years. But the son said he will always remember his father's advice on what it takes to be a good firefighter.

"Always worry about your men," Tom Jr. said without hesitation. "Don't put them in harm's way just to save a building for the insurance company. We'd talk for hours at the kitchen table and he'd tell me how to be a good firefighter."

The son says he misses the days reporting for work but "I have my scanner on all the time to find out what's going on."

Before the plaque unveiling, Tom Jr. fondly remembered his father and hanging around the firehouse when he was just a young boy.

"My father grew up on Elm Street and the old station sat right about here. He'd hear the bell bang and he'd get out of bed and catch the engine going out the door. That was my father's introduction to the fire department."

His father's father worked in the leather business and tried to recruit Thomas Sr. to follow in his footsteps with no avail.

"My father said he wanted to be a fireman. His father was proud of him when got to be chief," Tom Jr. said.

He then relayed a story from his youth.

"I can remember when we were little all the kids would hang around the fire house. We'd be in the station with water fights. Someone would hit you with a bag of water. One day I'm coming out the door and I'm trying to sneak home and my father would see me and said 'what's going on?'"

The son told him "nothing."

Father knows best.

"You get home and don't come back here," Tom said his father warned him. "And I said, 'Ohhh, okay. I won't be back.'

"When my father spoke, it was the law. No one gave him any baloney. I was very fortunate to have a good father. He took me to a lot of fires. We went every place. Those are the things that you remember."

Tom Jr. also thanked all the "good people" who supported him and the department when he was chief.

"When you're in the chief's job. You can't do it all by yourself. You need good people and good people to help you.

"I had some good times here. I see a lot of firemen out here that I worked with. All good guys. That's what makes the fire service so great. A lot of good people. It attracts a lot of good-hearted people. Some guys would help fix bicycles and others repair cars. Somebody is always here to pitch in and help.

"We had a lot of good times and a lot of fun. We also had some sad times when people got burnt out of their homes. Fire service has changed and a lot of good things have happened to help reduce the loss of life."

Another featured speaker at the dedication was current Fire Chief Joseph Barron. He introduced Boston Fire Commissioner Joseph Finn, retired Quincy Fire Chief Carl Valenti, retired Quincy Deputy Chiefs Tony Iannello and Jerry Galvin. Chiefs from Brockton, Hull, Hingham, Waltham and Weston also attended as well as retired Quincy Police Chiefs Thomas Frane and Francis Mullen.

Barron fondly remembered working with the younger Chief Gorman and for a while was his aide.

"As a firefighter, I got a chance to drive him as an aide, watch him work at a fire and certainly that helped me throughout my career."

Barron grew up on Hollis Avenue across from Atlantic Junior High School. One day when he was about 10 there was a serious fire in the area.

"I got on my bicycle and I could a lot of sirens. I went to the top of Hollis Avenue looking and listening. That was about as far as I was allowed to go. But I could hear the sirens so I continued on and I could see them dressing hydrants and I could see smoke in the distance.

"So I continued down Newbury Avenue to Welcome Young Field and there was a railroad station there. The fire was roaring. I think every truck in the city was there. There was a big crowd watching and I sort of eased my way to the front of the crowd.

"I was mesmerized watching all the guys work. Finally, I hear on the side of me a voice. 'What are you doing here?' I looked up and it was the chief, Tom's dad. He said, 'you stay right there.'

"I thought I was in big trouble. You talk about a command presence in the fire service. Tom Gorman, Sr. had that presence. He was a great guy. He recognized me and I got shown around afterwards. It's no wonder I'm here today.

"With Tom's guidance he left the department in great shape. I really appreciate your service and help."

In his remarks, Mayor Thomas Koch said, "Nobody loves Quincy more than Tom Gorman. He loves the history of the department. He is a unique individual who has served this city so so well and continues to love his city. He helped with the transition of Emergency Management with the Fire Department.

"He never says no. He's just a very wonderful individual."

The mayor told a quick story when he was the executive secretary for Mayor James Sheets and Gorman was chief. The chief invited Koch to take a ride with him.

"I wouldn't do it again," the mayor cracked as the crowd broke into laughter. "We took a ride to somewhere like Middleboro and took every road to get there. I was gone for the whole day. I got back to City Hall and the mayor said, 'where the hell have you been?'

"We did find an ice cream shop along the way which is typical of his routine. We've had a lot of fun with Tom."

Then there's the serious, all-business side of Tom which has also shined over the years.

Koch remembered Gorman calling him during the "No-Name Storm" of 1991.

"I was at City Hall and I didn't think much of it. It was only raining. Tom called me up and said 'I'm picking you up.'"

Koch asked why?

"The weather. He brought me down to the coast and we saw the devastation that was happening and the Quincy Fire Department manpower that was helping people who were flooded out get to their homes. It happened so quickly but they were there to take care of things.

"Tom's a great chief and has been a great friend to all of us."

The city is fortunate to have had two men named Thomas Gorman serve and lead the Quincy Fire Department.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

- On Oct. 5, 1892, the Dalton gang attempts to rob two banks simultaneously in Coffeyville, Kansas, but meets resistance from townspeople, who kill four of the five bandits. The gang had turned to crime when they became bored with their other career possibilities on the Western frontier.
- On Oct. 11, 1925, novelist Elmore Leonard is born in New Orleans. He decided to write either Westerns or detective novels, whichever would generate the most income. By the time of his death in 2013, he'd penned 45 books.
- On Oct. 9, 1934, the St. Louis Cardinals defeat the Detroit Tigers in the World Series. The Cards nickname, the "Gashouse Gang," had to do with the team's close resemblance to the rowdy, dirt-streaked thugs who hung around the Gashouse District on Manhattan's East Side.
- On Oct. 10, 1957, President Dwight D. Eisenhower offers his apologies to the Ghanian finance minister, who had been refused service at a restaurant in Delaware. It was one of the first of many such incidents in which African diplomats experienced racial segregation in the United States.
- On Oct. 6, 1961, President John F. Kennedy advises American families to build bomb shelters to protect them from atomic fallout in the event of a nuclear exchange with the Soviet Union.
- On Oct. 8, 1970, Russian writer Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn wins the Nobel Prize for literature. Arrested in 1945 for criticizing the Stalin regime, he served time in Russian prisons, forced labor camps and internal exile. His works had to be secreted out of Russia in order to be published.
- On Oct. 7, 1983, Sean Connery stars in "Never Say Never Again" as the British secret service agent James Bond, a role he last played in 1971. The film's title referenced the fact that Connery had previously said he would never play Agent 007 again.

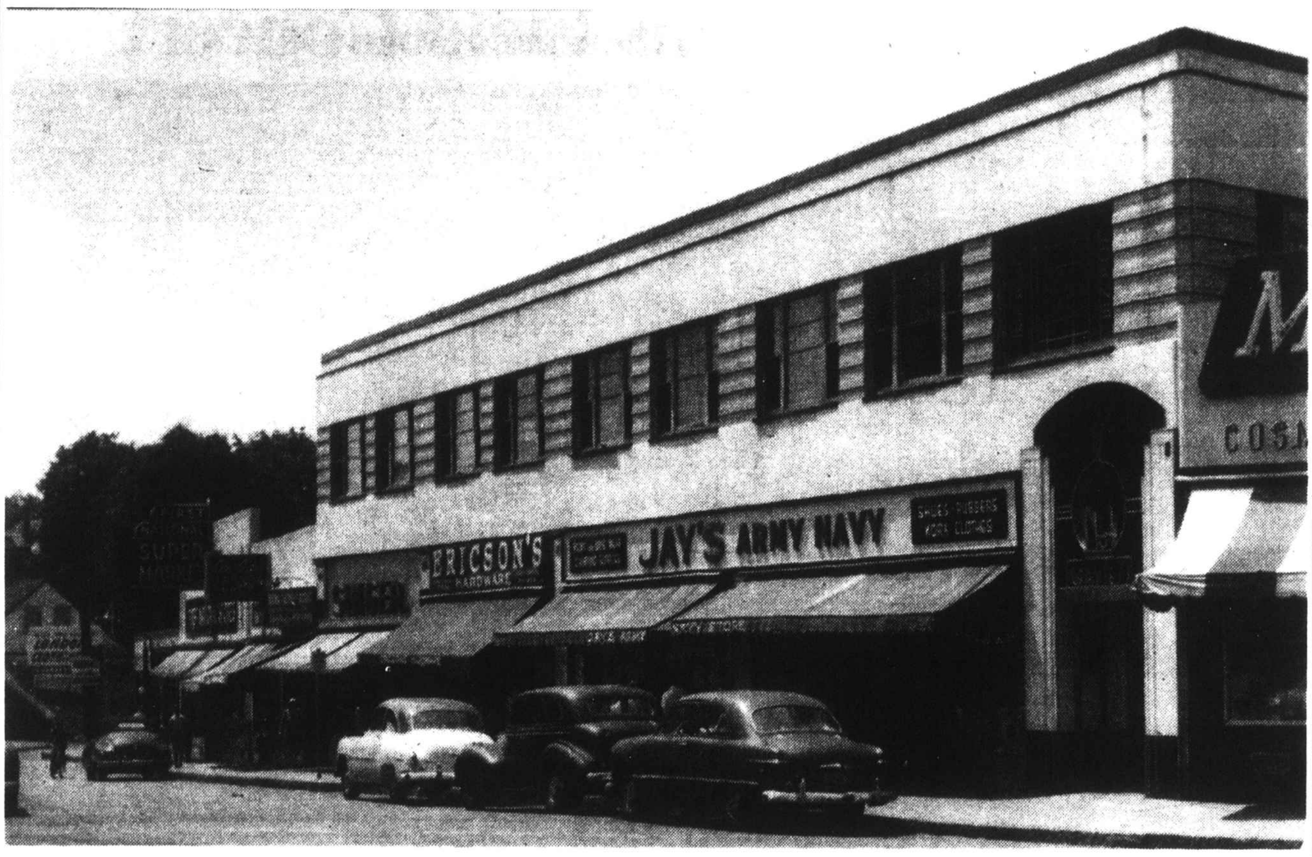
Scenes From Yesterday



THIS IS A 1950's postcard view of the north side of Granite Street in Quincy Square looking from Hancock Street to the railroad tracks that at the time the street went under. The stores here are a sample of the types of small retail businesses that thrived in the then "Shopperstown" downtown Quincy: a war surplus store, hardware, corsets, sewing machines and a small supermarket. You likely will not find any of these products in small retail storefronts in a new downtown Quincy. Shortly after this picture was taken these buildings were demolished to make way for the northern expansion of the Ross Parkingway. The new parking lot was named in memory of Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa's son Walter who was killed in Korea. Then in 1980 the lot was closed to construct the new Stop & Shop headquarters building and the parking garage over the MBTA tracks. The store on the extreme right was McGilvray's Drug Store. READERS FORUM

Thank You Quincy From The Messina Family

Once again the City of Quincy, and by extension of family and friends, many surrounding communities, has shown its true colors.

As you may have read in recent articles, a fundraiser was held on Sunday, Sept. 13th at the Granite Links Pavilion Tent in Quincy to benefit, former North Quincy resident, Mark Messina.

For those who may not be aware, Mark was involved in a horrific UPS tractor trailer accident on Labor Day, Sept. 1st, 2014. The results of this accident left Mark paralyzed from the waist down.

As recently as last Friday, during an interview with Great Clips reporters, which aired on ABC's Channel 5, Mark stated that, "With modern technology and the help of the man upstairs, I believe I'll walk again." A great many people must believe Mark because they showed up in droves to help his cause.

Trying to get information of Mark's fundraiser out to the public would be the first challenge. Ours and Quincy's friend, Robert Bosworth, of this paper, agreed to help. I wrote an article and Bob published it not just once, but several times. Bob's commitment and dedication to helping current and former Quincy residents is a tribute to not only himself but to his father Henry.

Phone calls, online donations, and to me personally as a USPS employee, the best, mailed donations started pouring in. My goal was to sell 500 tickets and maybe have 300 people attend. Five hundred and five tickets were sold and over 350 people arrived.

The show of support and generosity was overwhelming. Childhood friends, school friends from NQHS, Archbishop Williams and West Point, Quincy Youth Hockey friends, UPS friends, family friends and golfing buddies, they were all there.

To all of you I say thank you.

Special thanks go out to, again, The Quincy Sun, Walter Hannon at Granite Links, Mark Carey Productions of Quincy, who provided our music at the event and Tim Grant, our own Frank Sinatra.

The full story of Mark's accident and more information is available on his website, friendsofmarkmessina.org.

Thank you and God Bless.

Brett, Hannon In Stretch Drive For Mayor's Seat

Contenders Joseph E. Brett and Walter J. Hannon began their stretch drive for the mayor's office this week, firing political barbs at one another enroute.

And there were indications that whoever wins on Nov. 2 Quincy may end up with a full-time mayor.

Hannon, in a Quincy Sun interview, disclosed:

"I don't believe I would seek re-election when my term (state representative) runs out."

Brett, also in a Sun interview, re-affirmed his pledge to resign his House seat if elected mayor and chided Hannon for "leaving the door wide open" on the matter.

Hannon, a Republican who topped (11,109) the mayoral field in the primary, and Brett, a Democrat (7,338 votes) differed sharply on voters and supporters crossing party lines in a non-partisan city election.

McCORMICK ENDORSEMENT UP IN THE AIR

Asked to comment on the election, School Committee Vice-Chairman James F. McCormick, Sr., defeated in the primary election in his bid for mayor, said:

"The public has spoken. That's the end of it-like everything else, there are other times."

"I am not ready to make any statement at this time," on the matter of endorsing one of the two candidates in the final election.

"I WILL RUN AGAIN," SAYS RITA ANDERSON

Mrs. Rita Anderson, 2 Shawmut Place, West Quincy, when asked for a comment on the city primary election in which she was defeated as a mayoral candidate, declared:

"I am very happy. It was encouraging since I am not known and to be up against three candidates like I was-and I had only one relative in the whole city-I feel those citizens who voted for me voted for a particular reason."

Mrs. Anderson will not endorse either Walter Hannon or Joseph Brett, she said.

James DeAmicis, a candidate for Quincy School Committee, and Rotary International recently coordinated the donation of 100 backpacks for Quincy school students in need.

DeAmicis was a director for this year's Rotary Youth Leadership Program known as RYLA held at the Cape Cod Sea Camps in Brewster this past May.

Spinach Ricotta Pie

By MARIE

Today's recipe is one I use so much especially when in doubt about side dishes.

I used frozen spinach with the ricotta cheese but any favorite vegetable will do-zucchini works well also.

SPINACH RICOTTA PIE

2 tablespoons butter
1 small onion (chopped)
1-10 ounce package frozen spinach (thawed and drained)
1 pound ricotta cheese
1/2 cup grated Parmesan cheese
1-9 inch pie unbaked pie shell
1/2 teaspoon garlic powder
salt and pepper
2 eggs (beaten)

Heat the butter. Saute the onion until tender. Add the spinach, ricotta, eggs, Parmesan cheese and seasoning. Mix well.

Pour into the pie shell and bake in a preheated 375-degree oven for 45 minutes. Serve hot. If you have any left over, it heats well in the microwave.

P.S. A bag of fresh spinach can be used instead of frozen if preferred.

Pomegranate Parfait

By SUZIE

Chia seeds are tiny black seeds from the plant Salvia Hispania which is related to the mint. Chia is the ancient Mayan word for "strength" and was an important food for the Aztecs and the Mayans.

These seeds make a wonderful addition to anyone's diet, especially those who are health conscious. Chia seeds are loaded with antioxidants, fiber (11 grams per serving, almost all of the carbohydrates in chia seeds are fiber. This gives them the ability to absorb 10-12 times their weight in water.), healthy fats (they contain more omega 3's than a serving of salmon, gram for gram but they do not supply DHA, which salmon does), calcium, manganese, magnesium, and phosphorus.

Pomegranates have been known as a symbol of health, vitality, and fertility for centuries. They are not only quite remarkable looking, but taste delicious and make a wonderful juice.

A compound found only in pomegranates called punicalagin is shown to benefit the heart and blood vessels. Punicalagin is the major component responsible for pomegranate's antioxidant and health benefits. It not only lowers cholesterol, but also lowers blood pressure and increases the speed at which heart blockages (atherosclerosis) melt away.

Another interesting fact is that pomegranate juice contains phytochemical compounds that stimulate serotonin and estrogen receptors, therefore maybe improving symptoms of depression as well as increasing bone mass in lab animals

Sheep's milk yogurt has 48% more protein than cow's milk and twice as much calcium, it is also higher in important vitamins and minerals and contain more of the important probiotic cultures. It's smaller fat globules make it more digestible and the lactose is converted into lactic acid, so many with lactose intolerance can digest this far better. (same with goat milk yogurt, but I am not a fan of the taste) Sheep are also not give growth hormones.

Here is a recipe for a parfait adapted from Bon Appetite using all three of these ingredients that you can make the night before and have for a healthy breakfast or snack!

¼ cup pomegranate juice (I like POM brand juice)
2 tablespoons chia seeds
1 cup sheep's-milk yogurt (I use Old Chatham brand)
2 tablespoons shelled pistachios, chopped
Fresh berries

Simply mix seeds and juice in a container and refrigerate overnight. In the morning, layer with the yogurt and top with fruit and pistachios.

TO YOUR HEALTH! ENJOY!

No Frill Biscotti Or Cookie

By MARIE

If you enjoy a cookie with a cup of tea or coffee as I do, one of my favorite ones for dunking is a biscotti. There are so many ways to flavor and bake them.

I used anisette for today's recipe, but vanilla, almond, lemon can be used as well.

The dough from this mixture can either be made as a biscotti or just a round cookie. If you want to make both just make one roll, and then the other half of the dough in the round style.

ANISETTE BISCOTTI OR COOKIE

1/2 cup vegetable oil
1 cup sugar
3 eggs
3 1/4 cup flour
1 tablespoon baking powder
1 tablespoon anise extract or 3 drops of anise oil (the oil gives it a more vibrant flavor.

Preheat oven to 375 degrees.

Beat together the oil, eggs, sugar and anise until well blended. Add the flour and baking powder. Stir in the eggs to form a dough.

Divide the dough into two pieces. Form each piece into a roll about as long as an average cookie sheet. I used parchment paper.

Bake for 25 minutes.

When cooled, cut in pieces, and if you want them to be crispy, put back in the oven until they are golden brown.

If you want to frost them here is a delicious topping.

TOPPING

1/8 cup warm milk
1/2 cup powdered sugar
favorite flavoring

Mix together until smooth, and brush each cookie-added sprinkles can be used.

Voters Head To Polls For Preliminary Election Thursday

The mayor's race has heated up in recent weeks as the four candidates head into today's preliminary election. Each has been seen greeting voters and seeking support at locations and events throughout the city.

The four bidding for the two mayoral nominations are: Incumbent Mayor Thomas Koch, former Mayor William Phelan, School Committeewoman Anne Mahoney and Councillor Doug Gutro.

Koch is seeking his fifth term this fall. Phelan is making his second bid for the mayor's seat after he was unseated by Koch in 2007. Mahoney is also running against Koch for the second time bowing to the incumbent in 2011. Gutro is vacating his at-large seat to make his first run for the city's highest elected office.

Interest in the preliminary election appeared to be strengthening leading up to the polls opening Thursday morning. More than 300 people have voted by absentee ballot over the past seven business days, according to the City Clerk's office.

As of Tuesday afternoon, 791 voters had cast absentee ballots. That's 313 more than the 478 absentee votes cast as of Sept. 11.

Wednesday at noon was the last day and hour that a voter could request an absentee ballot at the City Election Department located on the second floor of City Hall (glass building), 1305 Hancock St.

All four candidates for mayor are well-known political veterans who have held city-wide office.

Koch won the mayor's seat in 2007 unseating Phelan who had served for six years. Koch defeated Phelan in a mayoral rematch in 2009 and turned aside a challenge from Mahoney in 2011. He was unopposed winning a fourth term in 2013.

Two years after winning a School Committee seat in 1999, Phelan also defeated an incumbent mayor to win the mayor's seat. In 2001, he upset six-term incumbent Mayor James Sheets in one of the closest elections in city history. The margin of victory – after a recount – was 17 votes. Phelan was re-elected in 2003 defeating Ward 6 Councillor Joseph Newton and won a third term without opposition in 2005.

Mahoney is mid-way through her third four-year term on the School Committee. This is her second run for mayor bowing to Koch in 2011. She topped the School Committee ballot in 2005 and 2009 and finished second two years ago winning her third four-year term. She does not have to vacate her school seat to run for mayor because there are two years remaining on her current term.

Gutro – a seven-term councillor – began his political career winning the Ward 5 council seat in 2001. He served as ward councillor for 10 years before winning a councillor at-large seat four years ago.

Besides the mayor's race, there are preliminary contests in Wards 2 and 3 with three candidates in each of those wards vying for two nominations.

In Ward 2, incumbent Councillor Brad Croall of 65 Gay St. is being challenged by two political newcomers:

Antibiotics Resistance: A Message From The Quincy Health Dept.

RUTH JONES

By RUTH JONES
BSN, RN, BC, CP-FS

Antibiotic resistance is an emerging problem, both in the United States and across the world, and has been called one of the world's most pressing public health issues. The most compelling factors behind antibiotic resistance are the overuse and misuse of antibiotics.

Every time a person takes antibiotics, sensitive bacteria are killed, but resistant ones may be left to grow and multiply. Repeated and improper uses of antibiotics are the primary causes of the increase in drug-resistant bacteria. Overuse and misuse of antibiotics threatens the effectiveness of these important drugs. Decreasing inappropriate antibiotic use is a fundamental strategy in controlling antibiotic resistance.

Antibiotic resistance in children is of particular concern because they have the highest rates of antibiotic use and often have fewer antibiotic choices since some antibiotics cannot be safely given to children. Antibiotic resistance can cause substantial suffering for people who have common infections that once were simply treatable with antibiotics. When antibiotics do not work, infections often last longer, cause more severe illness, require more doctor visits or extended hospital stays, and involve more costly and toxic medications. Some resistant infections can even lead to death.

If you have a cold or flu, antibiotics won't work for you. Colds, flu, most sore throats, bronchitis, and many sinus and ear infections are caused by a virus; antibiotics do not help fight viruses. For the overwhelming majority of common respiratory infections, antibiotics are not helpful. Taking antibiotics for viral infections will not, cure the infection, keep other individuals from catching the illness, or help you feel better. The consequences of misuse can be overwhelming:

- Antibiotics are responsible for 1 out of 5 emergency department visits for adverse drug events. Antibiotics are the most common cause of emergency department visits for adverse drug events in children under 18 years of age.
- Taking antibiotics increases your risk of getting an antibiotic-resistant infection later.

Antibiotics Resistance

• Antibiotics kill the healthy bacteria in the gut, allowing more harmful bacteria, such as C. difficile, to grow in its place. Although this infection is more commonly found in hospitals, it also occurs in clinics outside of the hospital.

• It is estimated that over half of antibiotics prescribed for patients who visit a clinic in the United States are inappropriate. These patients are most frequently seeking care for acute respiratory infections that are caused by viruses.

It's crucial to only take antibiotics for bacterial infections since they can put you or your child at risk for harmful side effects and antibiotic-resistant infections. Whooping cough, strep throat, and urinary tract infections are some of the illnesses usually caused by bacteria and do need antibiotic treatment.

Using antibiotics appropriately is the most beneficial way to safeguard your health, your family's health, and the health of those around you.

Some tips for proper antibiotic use are:

•Ask your healthcare provider about what you can do stop or slow antibiotic resistance. Let them know you are concerned about this issue.

•Ask your healthcare provider if there are steps you can take to feel better and get relief from your symptoms without using antibiotics. Sometimes the best treatment for your illness may be relieving your symptoms, not an antibiotic.

•Take the prescribed antibiotic exactly as your healthcare professional tells you. If taken improperly, antibiotics are more apt to cause harm.

•Safely discard any leftover medication. Ask your local health department for instructions on the best way to do this.

•Ask your healthcare professional about vaccines recommended for you and your family. Vaccines are an effective way to prevent infections that may require an antibiotic and to keep diseases from spreading.

•Never take an antibiotic for a viral infection like a cold or the flu. Antibiotics do NOT cure viral infections such as: Colds, flu, most sore throats, most coughs and bronchitis ("chest colds"), many sinus infections, many ear infections.

•Never pressure your healthcare professional to prescribe an antibiotic.

•Never skip doses or stop taking an antibiotic early, even if you no longer feel sick, unless your healthcare professional tells you to do so.

•Never save antibiotics for the next time you become sick and do not take antibiotics prescribed for someone else. Taking the wrong medicine may delay appropriate treatment, allow bacteria to multiply, and cause undesirable or severe side effects.

Each year in the United States, at least 2 million people become infected with bacteria that are resistant to antibiotics and at least 23,000 people die as a direct result of these infections. Protect your health, get smart about antibiotics.

Voters Head To Polls Today For Preliminary Election

James M. Connors of 124 Martensen St. and Gulistan Malik of 109 Curtis Ave.

In Ward 3, there are three candidates running to succeed longtime councillor Kevin Coughlin who is not seeking re-election this year. Running in Ward 3 are Karl Roos, 9 Park St.; Sandra Verhault, 183 Highland Ave. and Ian Cain, 192 South Central Ave.

The top two vote-getters in the ward races Thursday will advance to the Nov. 3rd election.

Quincy's preliminary election date had been scheduled for Sept. 22 but was moved to Sept. 24 due to Yom Kippur, a solemn Jewish holiday. The Thursday election date is unusual but not unheard of in Quincy. Voters here went to the polls for the state primary Thursday, Sept. 6, 2012. The date was moved from a Tuesday as to not conflict with the Rosh Hashanah holiday.

Today's (Thursday's) election will mark the first time poll workers will return ballot boxes to the Board of Registrars office located on the second floor of the glass annex building of City Hall. That office along with the City Clerk, License Board and Vital Statistics relocated to the second floor last month.

Many political observers are predicting a close finish for the mayoral nominations. Shea said the city does not have an automatic recount provision in the city charter.

To file a recount in a citywide race, a candidate would have to collect at least 10 signatures from registered voters in each ward that a recount is requested.

In a ward race, at least 10 signatures are required in each precinct in that ward that a recount is requested.

The signatures would have to be filed with the City Clerk by Tuesday, Sept. 29 at 5 p.m.

Those nominated today (Thursday) will advance to the Nov. 3rd ballot that also features contested races for councillor at-large and five out of six ward seats. Only incumbent Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci is unopposed on the city council.

Candidates already appearing on the Nov. 3rd ballot are:

- Councillor at-Large: Incumbent Joseph Finn, 15 Williams St.; incumbent Michael McFarland, 27 Village Dr.; School Committeeman David McCarthy, 48 Whitney Rd.; School Committeeman Noel DiBona, 70 Chickatabot Rd. and political newcomer Nina Liang, 2 Williams Street.

McCarthy is vacating his School Committee seat to run at-large. DiBona was elected two years ago and is mid-way through a four-term term

- Ward 1: Incumbent Margaret Laforest, 236 Rock Island Rd. and challenger John McCone, 111 Darrow St.
- Ward 5: incumbent Kirsten Hughes, 116 Willow Ave. and challenger Gina Ostis, 57 Estabrook Rd.
- Ward 6: incumbent Brian McNamee, 94 Newbury Ave. and challenger William Harris, 74 Ashworth.

There are also three candidates on the ballot for three school committee seats. They are incumbent Paul Bregoli, 80 Willow Ave.; incumbent Kathryn Hubley, 44 Marion St.; and political newcomber James DeAmicis, 66 Campbell St.

A fourth school committee candidate who filed papers – former QHS principal and School Committeeman Frank Santoro – dropped out of the race last month.

Because of the hotly contested mayor's race and city council races, Shea is predicting turnout of 44 to 46 percent for the Nov. 3 election.

New Downtown Park Expected To Start 2016

Design Nearly Finished; 1-Year Construction Seen

By SCOTT JACKSON

Construction on the new park planned as a link between City Hall and the United First Parish Church is on pace to begin in the summer of 2016 and is expected to take one year.

Mayor Thomas Koch, in a recent phone interview, said the design of the park is nearly finished. Once Halvorson Design, the company tasked with planning the park completes it, the company will work with the city to put the project out to bid.

"The design is pretty much finished," Koch said. "Halvorson will help put bid packages together and get it out to bid."

The project will go out to bid over the winter or next spring, the mayor added. That would allow construction of the new park to begin next summer and wrap up in 2017.

The park's design was paid for by a $1 million state grant awarded to the city in 2012. On Sept. 14, Gov. Charlie Baker awarded a $4.2 million grant to Quincy for underground utility work needed before the park itself can be built; a wooden duct carrying 27,000 phone lines under Hancock Street, for example, needs to be rebuilt.

The park itself will cost an additional $10-20 million to complete. Koch said the plan is to use the state's Infrastructure Investment Incentive (I-Cubed) program to pay for those costs. Under that program, the state would issues bonds for the construction that would be paid off using new state tax revenue generated by development in Quincy Center. The city has received preliminary approval to use I-Cubed money for two projects – the new park and a bridge at Cliveden Street.

Koch added that his administration is also looking at other potential state grants to help finance park construction.

"We expect to use either I-Cubed or other available grants," the mayor stated.

While the design of the park is nearly completed, it still doesn't have a name. When plans for the park were first publicized, it was known as Adams Green in honor of the Adams family – Presidents John and John Quincy Adams and First Ladies Abigail and Louisa, who are entombed in the church.

Koch, however, has said he also wants to honor John Hancock – the first signer of the Declaration of Independence and later the first governor of Massachusetts – in the naming of the new park. The portion of Hancock Street between the two historic buildings is also being closed to make way for the park, Koch noted.

The mayor said is still deciding between two potential names for the park: Adams Hancock Common, which was the name used on renderings of the park displayed at the Sept. 14 announcement, and Adams Hancock Green. Koch said a final decision will be made in the coming months.

The new park will feature bronze statues of John Adams and John Hancock, which will be located on opposite sides of the park along the 18-foot-wide promenade that will run north to south through the park roughly where Hancock Street is now located.

Sergey Eylanbekov was commissioned to design the two new sculptures. He was one of 78 artists who entered submissions to design those sculptures; a committee of local art experts and historians vetted the applicants.

Eylanbekov, who resides on Long Island and in Italy, is a fellow of the National Sculpture Society and has served on its board of directors. The 55-year-old Russian native began sculpting at the age of 13.

Eylanbekov is currently crafting clay models of the two statues at his studio in Pietrasanta, Italy, Koch said. Those models will be used to make the final bronze statues. Koch said the statues should be ready by April 2016. Eylanbekov is being paid $250,000 for each statue, which will be paid for using the funds the city receives for constructing the park.

In addition to the two new sculptures, two existing ones – the sculpture of Abigail Adams and a young John Quincy Adams outside the United First Parish Church and the sculpture of John Adams on the McIntyre Mall – will also be incorporated into the new park. Koch said they would be placed in a portion of the park meant to resemble Peace Field.

The sculpture of Abigail and John Quincy Adams was installed in 1997 and the sculpture of John Adams was added five years later. Both were commissioned by the Quincy Partnership and were designed by Lloyd Lillie.

Wollaston Walking Tour Oct. 3

Historic New England invites the public to take part in a Wollaston Walking Tour on Saturday, Oct. 3 from 11 a.m. until 1 p.m.

In 1770, Edward Pierce, a Dorchester carpenter, built a mansion for Col. Josiah Quincy. Originally surrounded by fields and pasture, the estate's boundaries once encompassed several hundred acres and reached from what is now Hancock Street to Quincy Bay. When the house was built, the area around it, now a densely populated neighborhood known as Wollaston, was very rural.

This walking tour illustrates how the area evolved over a 300-year period. Explore Moswetuset Hummock, the seat of the ruling chief Chickatawbut; see Quincy Bay and Boston Harbor through the eyes of Col. Josiah Quincy and General George Washington; and witness the development of an early twentieth-century middle class neighborhood that reflects a range of architectural styles. Tour Historic New England's 1770 Josiah Quincy House following the walking tour.

The tour departs from the Moswetuset Hummock parking area, East Squantum Street, near junction with Quincy Shore Drive.

The tour is $5 for Quincy residents and Historic New England members, $10 for nonmembers.

Registration is recommended. For more information or to register, call 617-994-5930 or visit HistoricNewEngland.org.

Beechwood Knoll School Fall Festival

Beechwood Knoll Elementary School will host its 18th Annual "Beechwood Knoll Fall Festival" on Saturday, Oct. 3 from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. at Beechwood Knoll School, 225 Fenno St., Quincy.

The BKS Fall Festival is the school's cornerstone fundraiser to raise funds to pay for books for classrooms and library, computer equipment, educational materials, field trips and other classroom necessities.

There will be food, arts and crafts, games, cake walk, nails, tattoos and face painting as well as silent auctions, raffles, pony rides and kiddy carnival rides.

All are welcomed. The festival will be held rain or shine.

Expansion Eyed At Quincy Housing Authority

setts Department of Housing and Community Development (DHCD) is able to save money by merging administrative staff.

Such mergers have already taken place elsewhere in the state. Housing authorities in Leominster, Fitchburg, Lunenburg and Sterling now operate as the North Central Massachusetts Housing Authorities, for example. That agency has a central staff while each of those communities maintained its own board of directors.

"The thrust forward in public housing is to eliminate many of the small housing authorities around the commonwealth. Quincy is a very unique size. With our Section 8 and the units we own we're slightly over 3,000 units, so we're large enough to be able to afford our own maintenance department. We have electricians, we have painters we have floor-layers, we have carpenters, we have laborers," Lydon said.

"If you're a little town – if you're in Milton, for example – you may have 50 units of public housing throughout the community. You don't have a budget to be able to hire a maintence department. You have to hire a plumber if you have a plumbing problem, hire an electrician if you have an [electrical problem].

"What is the state is trying to do is they're trying to eliminate the additional cost of maintaining housing authorities like that and they're merging housing authorities of that size with communities like Quincy, because we have the staff."

The Quincy Housing Authority, Lydon continued, would benefit from such a merger because it would receive additional funds with which to operate.

"From an operations perspective that means more money for the Quincy Housing Authority because we wind up with a portion of their budget. From DHCD's perspective, they wind up with a savings because they don't have to deal with a local administrator in that particular community," Lydon said.

"We're ideally trying to put ourselves in a position where DHCD says 'hey, those guys down in Quincy are pretty sharp, we want to work with them – we have faith in them.'"

Lydon said DHCD, under the watch of Gov. Charlie Baker, has also started a push to create new public housing units for working class residents, similar to Harbor Point in Dorchester. The new developments would be targeted at residents who might be driven out of the city by increasing rents.

"The other thing that DHCD is looking at, and I think this is probably new with the Baker administration, is mixing in private, market-rate housing with public housing," Lydon said.

"The population group we may be looking at, as I understand it, moving forward may not be the rich, rich – we wouldn't be looking for the high end renters – but we'd be looking for the person who is market rent but they're being squeezed out of market rent in Quincy because the rents are eking up so high. It's that mid-range tenant that we'd be looking to service."

"It would be affordable to working-class people," Marathas added. "Below market rents, but not subsidized like public housing."

Lydon said the housing authority is waiting on state officials to put the programs together. The Quincy Housing Authority does have land to build on, including at Tobin Towers on Clay Street in Wollaston and in Germantown.

"We've got land. We've got land around my place down at Tobin Towers. We've got land in Germantown. We do have the ability to accommodate these changes as we move forward," Lydon said. "They would be new developments."

The housing authority is also making improvements to the properties it manages, including upgrading electrical systems and refurbishing common areas for tenants.

The repair of electrical system at the housing authority's high-rise buildings – Pagnano Towers, O'Brien Towers, Tobin Towers and Sawyer Towers – was prompted by what Lydon called a "catastrophic failure" at Sawyer Towers last winter. That failure was caused by poor repair work; Lydon said workers had used duct tape to wrap the main electrical line leading to the building.

"We're improving the electrical systems at all the high rises. We had a catastrophic failure of the electrical system over at Sawyer Towers in the middle of last winter and it related to shoddy repair work that had been formerly done to the main electric line coming into the building," Lydon said.

"When my people went to shutdown the major breaker, the breaker because of lack of maintenance was frozen. They couldn't get it done. They had to get National Grid out to shut power off at the pole so they could then get in and address the issue."

Inspections of the other high rises revealed similar issues, so the agency decided to upgrade those systems as well. The repair work will be done in September and October; Lydon wanted to avoid having the work done in the summer when tenants would be using air conditioning. Tobin Towers was the first to receive an upgrade.

The electrical improvements will cost the housing authority $10,000; the emergency work at Sawyer Towers cost $14,000.

The housing authority has also been working with a Nashua, N.H., company which purchases old hotel furniture to help upgrade common areas in buildings; Drohan Apartments recently received new leather easy chairs and a leather settee, for example.

"They liquidate old hotel furnishings and we're able to buy beautiful chairs for virtually pennies on the dollar. We just went out and purchased [six] flat screens for common areas in the buildings," Lydon said. "We have a more aggressive improvement policy for the buildings than anybody has every had before…we are able to provide tenants with really, really nice amenities."

"The new capital plan will contain a lot improvements at O'Brien Towers," Marathas added. "We'll be doing over the community room. We'll be doing over all of the flooring on all the floors. We're going to be doing a lot of work at O'Brien Towers to really improve that building."

Work could also be done at Tobin Towers, which is home to the Quincy Housing Authority's administrative offices. McAuliffe, however, works out of an office in Sawyers Towers on Martensen Street and the plan is to bring her office in together with the others at Tobin Towers.

"It would be much better if we could be all together," McAuliffe said.

She also highlighted other technological improvements the housing authority has made over the last year. QHA now uses an online payroll system; department heads now have remote access, allowing them to work from home in severe weather; and inspectors now use tablets when inspecting units.

"We've made some big changes I think in the way we communicate and use technology and use computer programs this year, which I think is a big, big help." McAuliffe said.

The housing authority has also purchased four new trucks this year – a pickup truck, a box truck, plumbers' van and painters' van – to replace antiquated ones in the fleet, McAuliffe noted; those trucks can also be used for plowing snow in the winter. Lydon said the agency is also weighing the purchase of a front-end loader to help with snow removal in the wake of last winter, when the housing authority had to rent two loaders to clear snow from the parking lots outside its buildings.

The Quincy Housing Authority recently moved to ban all pit bulls, Rottweilers and Doberman pinschers as well as any other breed that typically weighs more than 40 pounds from its units. The agency is awaiting approval from state regulators after its board of commissioners voted in favor of the ban on Sept. 16.

All dogs properly registered will be grandfathered in; the ban only applies to new dogs.

Marathas said the new policy, which applies to all QHA properties, was established because of concerns over public safety.

"It's for public safety to protect the residents that live there as well as the employees that work there," he stated. "Employees have been bitten. Complaints have been made by neighbors about other neighbors. It's in their lease that they're not supposed to chain the dog outside – people leave the dog outside, little kids walk around their corner, have no idea the dog is there, and the dog comes running out."

Council Seeks Outside Review Of Harrington Reassignment

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council wants an independent attorney to review Mayor Thomas Koch's reassignment of longtime Planning Director Dennis Harrington to a different position within the Planning Department.

The council voted unanimously on Sept. 8 to ask for outside counsel to review the mayor's action following a two-hour hearing on the matter. If the request were approved by the administration, Council President Joseph Finn would be responsible for selecting the attorney.

Harrington, meanwhile, agreed to take a paid leave of absence while an outside attorney reviews claims he created a hostile workplace, according to City Solicitor Jim Timmins. He remains on paid leave as of Monday, mayoral spokesman Chris Walker said.

Koch, on Aug. 18, reassigned Harrington to the position of director of transportation planning, a post that was vacated in January by the departure of Kristina Johnson; the mayor's chief of staff, James Fatseas, was named interim planning director.

Koch said his decision was prompted by Harrington's Family and Medical Leave Act request in June to work a reduced 15-hour per week schedule and that Harrington's compensation and benefits would not be affected by the reassignment. Timmins, at the Sept. 8 meeting, said FMLA allows employers to reassign employees temporarily during the period of intermittent or reduced leave.

"The downtown projects are coming online. The Planning Board is slammed months; they're looking now at setting up two meetings in September. It is a high demand job and there is a lot of stress involved in that, both of which are completely contrary to the medical leave sought by Mr. Harrington," Timmins said.

"The purpose of transferring or reassigning as allowed under FMLA was to address that, plain and simple."

Harrington, in an Aug. 19 response to Koch, said the reassignment was "unlawful" because state law that established the Planning Department – specifically Chapter 898 of the Acts of 1973 – says the director of the department "may be removed by the mayor with approval of the City Council." The leave request, Harrington told the council, does not hinder his ability to do his job.

"My doctor suggested that I should reduce, temporarily, my hours in the office but it doesn't prevent me from doing my job," Harrington said. "Nor does it prevent me from dealing with complex issues."

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci said the reassignment of Harrington was a removal that would require council approval per state law, or at least close enough to a removal to require extra scrutiny.

"I view this as a removal; that's my opinion. I know you (Timmins) disagree and the mayor disagrees, but the way I look at this, this to me looks like it implicates Chapter 898," Palmucci said.

"Even if it doesn't, it comes pretty darn close and it's probably worthy of some sort of additional scrutiny to make sure it doesn't if that's the position of the mayor and the administration."

Finn also said he viewed it as a removal. He noted FMLA requires transfers to be done in compliance with any applicable state law as well as collective bargaining agreements and federal law such as the Americans with Disabilities Act.

"The state law structures very set ways in terms of how this officer is appointed and then again how he is removed. It says specifically the mayor may remove with a vote of the City Council – plain and simple. You cannot overcome that piece of state law, particularly when [FMLA] has this provision about compliance, simply by claiming he's under the federal FMLA," Finn said. "I really have a difficult time understanding how this is anything but a removal."

It was Palmucci who recommended the council seek outside counsel to review the matter.

"I think it's important we get some independent counsel on this separate and apart from the solicitor's opinion, which again I respect and I don't mean that as an insult to Mr. Timmins…It's difficult to serve two masters in this situation and I think it's clear that Mr. Timmins has been advising the mayor through this process and we would need legal counsel specifically to advise us throughout this process and in this context," Palmucci said.

Timmins said bringing on an outside attorney would set a precedent other aggrieved municipal employees would use to go before the council to get an outside attorney, instead of having to hiring their own attorney.

"We're setting up for a parade here in the future of other people who feel as Mr. Harrington does and that's what the whole city charter and the government is all about," the solicitor said. "I am the person under the municipal ordinance who provides legal opinions that are rulings that affect the city of Quincy. If someone has a problem with them then they have to go out and get their own counsel. They have to get a judge to order differently."

Finn said it would not create such a precedent because the planning director is one of the few positions – along with the city clerk and auditor, among others – the council has authority over.

"Any other person under the charge of the mayor

At the Sept. 16 meeting, the board approved a new policy that will charge residents for any damage done to QHA property through either negligence or vandalism; residents will not be charged for routine wear and tear.

"We'd go into units and we'd find every single door in the unit punched out because somebody had an anger management problem," Lydon said. "We need some way to address those situations."

"Budgets aren't really set for that kind of maintenance," McAuliffe added. "That's really extraordinary so you're not subsidized for that by the state or the feds."

A ban on smoking on housing authority property went into effect earlier this year; Marathas said there are a couple hearings pending for tenants found smoking and the agency will work with them to rectify the situation.

The housing authority may look to modify the policy at the next board meeting in October, Lydon added. The ban currently applies to all QHA property, which Lydon said could make it difficult for disabled or elderly tenants to smoke during inclement weather at properties such as O'Brien Towers that are set back several hundred feet from the street. To remedy that, the housing authority will consider establishing designated smoking areas outside the building but still on QHA property.

– any department head or anyone else – if the mayor wishes to terminate them he can do so with or without cause. If he feels he needs to, he can," Finn said.

"The distinction that's not being made here is this is not that. This was a creation between federal and state law regarding the design and concept behind planning and community development. This city went out with a home rule position that had a specific provision within it that says the mayor may remove with a vote of the council."

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, who said Koch's decision looked like a removal of the planning director, questioned the timing of the reassignment. Referencing his own experience granting FMLA requests to employees he manages in the court system, Coughlin said such a reassignment would have been discussed at the time the request for reduced hours was originally made.

"Typically in my own experience that was the end of the discussion," Coughlin said. "I didn't attempt to reassign the employee to other job responsibilities; that discussion would have taken place right at the outset."

Timmins said he would be cautious about having such discussions with an employee, because it could be seen as trying to pressure that person into altering their FMLA request.

"I'd be very cautious about conversations of that nature to the extent that the employee might feel that you're somehow trying to influence the amount of time they're looking for or the request itself," Timmins said.

"I saw some [cases] and employers invariably got in trouble when their interests clashed with the particular employees leave request and it didn't work well. I'm not really certain that a discussion about 'gee, I don't know 15 hours is going to work,' would have been helpful or productive and perhaps might have been greeted by Mr. Harrington as some sort of attempt to influence him adversely on the request."

A separate item on the agenda for the Sept. 8 meeting asked councillors to approve Koch's decision to place Harrington on paid administrative leave pending an investigation already underway by Nan O'Neill of the Quincy law firm Murphy, Hesse, Toomey & Lehane into allegations that Harrington had created a hostile workplace.

Finn, however, objected to that item, which tabled it until the council meets again on Sept. 28. He said it would be prejudicial to Harrington to act while the investigation was still ongoing.

Timmins in a phone interview Sept. 9 said Harrington had agreed to step aside temporarily during the investigation prior to the previous night's meeting.

"I discussed it with him before the hearing. We were able to agree he would stay away from the workplace during the investigation," Timmins said.

Timmins said he had not yet discussed the council's request for an outside investigation into the reassignment, because O'Neill's investigation was a more pressing concern.

Donald Golden, who lives across Bellevue Road from the church, said near the opening of the community meeting, prompting a round of applause from those in attendance. "We want single-family homes."

Golden's sentiments were echoed by several other residents who followed. They suggested the peninsula's character would be changed if the condo plan went forward.

Ed Fleming, a Quincy attorney representing Sheen, said the 14 condominium units would provide an alternative to current Squantum residents who may be looking to sell their homes. Sheen was willing to give neighborhood residents an opportunity to purchase a unit before opening up sales to those living elsewhere.

"If you sell your home in Squantum there is no place to go in Squantum. There is no alternative housing available. What I think Mr. Sheen and his group thought about was that this is an opportunity for people of Squantum, when they decide to sell their home, to have alternative housing options available to them," Fleming said.

"Mr. Sheen is willing to provide a preference to people of Squantum. Prior to marketing these units to anyone else, they would be shared with Squantum first to determine whether or not they would be of interest."

Donna Richardson, who lives in Squantum, said residents of the peninsula do not want condominium developments and dismissed the idea neighborhood residents would want alternative housing.

"Gentlemen, I'm really confused. This is a community of single-family houses. We have very little condos… we want it to be single-family houses. We don't want condos," Richardson said. "Your assertion that those of us who no longer can manage our homes are going to be able to buy into this high-end condo is – I'm sorry – just blatantly impaired."

The condo plan, if the developer had gone forward with it, would have required approval from the city's Planning Board and Zoning Board of Appeals. Construction of single-family homes would not require such approval, provided Sheen adheres to dimensional requirments spelled out in the zoning code.

Jim Stamos, a Squantum resident and real estate agent, said he hoped Sheen would respect the character of the neighborhood while building the four single-family homes.

"Residence A zoning entitles them to four single-family homes by right and it's exactly what it means, by right. They can go and apply for the permit and build four houses up to 35 feet in height on top of that hill," Stamos said.

"We really have to realize we have no control if they go through that process. They can build as big as they want up to 35 feet in height, as big as the footprint will allow them, and it will completely change the character of Bellevue Road…We don't have any kind of process, other than a legal appeal, if they were going to build four McMansions. I would hope Mr. Sheen would respect the character of Squantum."

Sheen, in a phone interview Sept. 16, said he was "not looking to pick a fight with the community" and would put together revised plans for the site. Those plans will likely call for four single-family homes, as is allowed under the zoning code.

"We're contemplating just doing it as four single-family homes," Sheen said. "That way nobody can blame us for doing anything contrary to the neighborhood."

Alternatively, Sheen said six smaller houses could be built on site if the community presses for scaled down homes. But Sheen added he did not get the sense that would be supported during the previous night's community meeting.

At the meeting, the developer also ruled out using the state's Chapter 40B law to gain approval for the condo project. Under that provision of state law, developers in communities where less than 10 percent of all housing qualifies as affordable can bypass municipal zoning requirements. Quincy's affordable housing stock recently dipped below that mark.

Sheen purchased the church and rectory from the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Boston in June for $600,000. Several residents at the meeting asked if he would be willing to sell the site to the community for more than that – or develop only half the land and set aside the other part for a park commemorating the former church.

Sheen replied that he would be willing to consider selling the property.

The Star of the Sea Church was among 50 area parishes the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Boston designated for closure in 2004. A group of parishioners, the Friends of Star of the Sea, appealed that decision all the way to the Vatican but ultimately lost. The archdiocese relegated the church to profane use in July 2011, meaning it was no longer considered a site for worship.

The archdiocese attached two conditions to the sale, according to Fleming. The first prohibits the buildings from being used for religious purposes. The second prohibited would-be bidders from reaching out to the community before the sale was finalized; typically sales of property for development are contigent on local permitting.

Fleming said the latter condition might have kept other potential buyers from bidding more for the property in response to concerns about the $600,000 price paid for the property. The property has an assessed value of $2 million, according to the city assessor's online database.

Fleming said the archdiocese followed an open bidding process for the church.

"Like all of us, the theatre has had a couple rough winters," Crawford said. "Regrettably it is beyond repair."

Fang has no plan yet for the future of the site, Crawford added. The plan is to finish demolition before the winter to prevent further damage to the structure.

"He's very early in the process of informing the community and the city's elected leaders. He has not yet pulled permits for demolition and the building inspector hasn't been in, but there is no question it's time for 'The Wolly' to enter its next chapter," Crawford said.

"Hopefully it is done this fall so it doesn't linger through another winter season."

Fang is the owner of the C-Mart supermarket chain, The City Council, acting as the city's special permit granting authority, has twice rejected Fang's plan to open a C-Mart at the former Boston Gear Works on Hayward Street in North Quincy. Fang is currently suing the city over the second rejection, which happened in May 2013.

Before selling to Fang, Chandler had reached an agreement in 2009 to sell the theatre to Street-Works, the city's previous master developer for Quincy Center. The New York-based company exercised an option to opt out of that agreement after it was estimated that renovating the building would cost upwards of $7 million.

Mayor Thomas Koch said it would be sad to see the theatre go, though he recognized the building is in a state of decline and would be costly to repair. He also faulted Fang for not disclosing any future plans for the site.

"It's disappointing. For those of us who grew up in the area and frequented 'The Wolly' it's a sad day," Koch said. "I also recognize the building has been let go for decades. Years ago, when the developer (Street-Works) planned to purchase the building, the cost to rehab it was $7 million. Nobody was coming with $7 million and you'd never get a loan for that amount.

"I'm disappointed obviously with the loss of the theatre but I'm also disappointed the owner has not filed plans for demolition with the building inspector and has not shared plans for the site."

The owner had yet to file for demolition permits with the city's Inspectional Services Department as of Monday, according to mayoral spokesman Chris Walker. Once filed, ISD will review the plans like the department does for any other permit sought.

The Wollaston Theatre was added to the National Register of Historic Places in 1989. Owners of properties on that list are allowed to demolish or alter those buildings if no federal, state or local funds have gone towards the building.

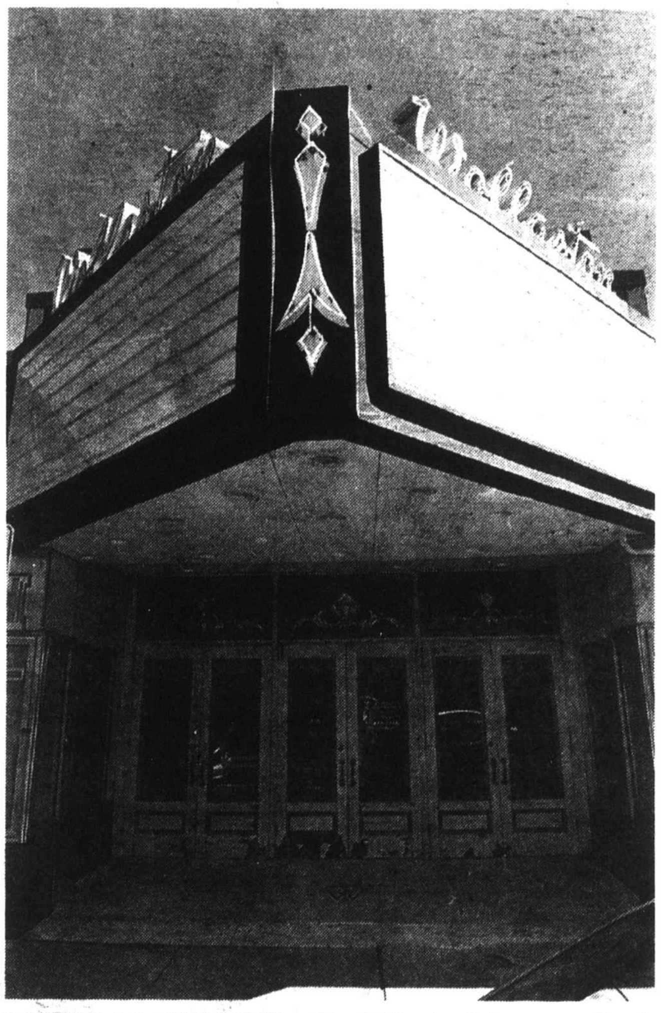
The city of Quincy once boasted more than a dozen theatres, including the Lincoln in Quincy Point and the Strand in Quincy Center. The Wollaston Theatre is the last of those standing.

John McDonald, owner of JM Productions and Rising Stars, called the planned demolition of Quincy's last theatre "outrageous" and "a slap in the face." He said the Wollaston Theatre could still be renovated and re-used, comparing it to the Boston Opera House, which was thoroughly renovated in 2004 at a cost of $38 million; McDonald said the Wollaston Theatre would not cost nearly as much.

"There is plenty of money out there. There are organizations out there that save theatres. I need people to speak up," McDonald said, suggesting the renovated theatre could be used by groups already in the community. "It could be used by dance studios, the Quincy Symphony Orchestra, and the Quincy Choral Society."

If the theatre were demolished this year, it would be the third Wollaston landmark lost in as many years.

Barry's Deli, which was located across Beale Street from the theatre for 52 years, closed in 2013 and the nearby Alumni Café on Hancock Street closed in 2014 after 54 years in business. Both eateries were replaced by Asian restaurants.



LOSING A LANDMARK – The Wollaston Theatre on Beale Street, which opened in 1926 as a vaudeville theater and was repurposed to a movie house in the 1930s - is expected to be demolished by the building's present owner. A spokesman for owner Miao Kun "Michael" Fang said the building will be razed due to structural integrity concerns in the aftermath of last year's record-setting snowfall.

Koch, Mahoney Clash Over NQHS Field Project

Two School Committee members who are also among four candidates running for mayor clashed over the building of a field and parking lot at the Hunt St. location, behind North Quincy High School at last week's School Committee meeting.

Mayor Thomas Koch, who is seeking re-election this fall, presented an update to the committee of the unfolding details regarding the project, including drainage, soil settlement, lighting, bleachers, concession building, etc. and announced a completion, ready-for-use date of September, 2016.

Nine homes on Hunt Street were purchased and razed in order to provide land for the athletic facility and a 150-vehicle-capacity parking lot. The mayor described it as a "transformational project for that neighborhood," being overseen by the Park Dept.

Regarding the admitted critical need for additional parking availability for students, staff and guests at North Quincy High, the mayor said, "This will be enormously helpful to the high school...will give an opportunity for a little bit of breathing room...and it will have a tremendous 'campus feel' when it's finished."

Koch also emphasized that use of the field and track does not just affect the high school, but other youth programs in the area as well. "Trying to schedule practices at the one stadium we have for both high schools is very challenging, particularly with all the sporting activities we have."

One of Koch's opponent's in today's mayoral preliminary election, School Committeewoman Anne M. Mahoney, said: "I just want to go on record that this was never brought before the school committee. This $12.5 million dollar park is being treated as if it were something for the schools. The school committee was never asked if this was something that we wanted. This is a project created by the Mayor and is now being brought to the committee and presented here as if it were something that we all agreed upon, and it's not."

Mahoney said "This is not something that was ever brought to us" and referred to the project as "a PR pitch by the mayor to explain why he spent $12.5 million dollars of the taxpayers' money on a park...this is something that I certainly never agreed to....and out-placing nine families and taking homes is not something that any of us would have been able to say we would want to see happen."

The mayor responded that this "was a City of Quincy project, it's parkland, it was vastly discussed by the Park and Recreation Board, by the Quincy City Council, in great depth and was approved by both of those bodies...I never said this was a school project."

Koch stated that the project was "a response to a need for that school, a need for our city, a need for our park and recreational facilities," and that he never suggested that the school committee had endorsed it nor that this issue had ever been brought before the committee, as it has no jurisdiction on the site.

Committeeman David McCarthy, who is in support of the project, felt that "the Teel Field project would broaden the campus, give the kids at the school another park and rec. opportunity that they can utilize."

He maintained he was aware that this project was not going to be voted upon by the school committee, that it "wasn't school property" but recognized why the mayor had chosen to review the project during this meeting, as its proximity to the school made it relevant.

McCarthy also spoke of the vast improvement that the new windows had made upon the appearance of North Quincy High, and the significant improvement to the major intersection at the school. "As chairman of the Facilities Committee....I think this project will turn out to be another jewel."

Committeeman Paul Bregoli said, "This goes back a long way, the history with that area. We had an opportunity way-back-when to take some land when DeMatteo was there and the city didn't see the need for the expansion of field facilities at North Quincy High School, and now we have an Applebee's and a Panera instead of a field."

Bregoli spoke to the high demand for access to a limited number of sports facilities in the city. As an example, Bregoli – the head coach of the NQ girls' varsity soccer team – said the team is required "to practice at Quarry Hills every other week, across the city, in order to get some time on a field."

School Committeeman Noel DiBona felt that this athletic facility could or would revitalize interest in sports, as he stated athletic programs at the school have been dwindling, and was in support of the physical expansion of the intersection (Hunt Street and E. Squantum Street side) and the entire area.

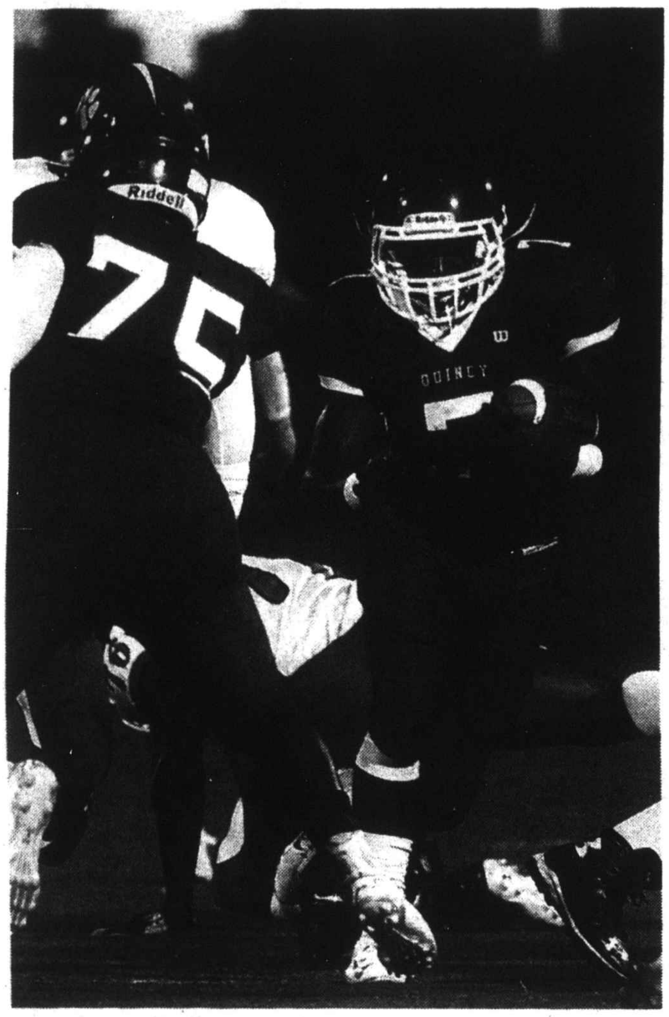
Milton Escapes With 26-20 Win Over Quincy

1-1 Presidents Host Plymouth North Friday Night

By BILL GRIFFIN



JAHVAE HANDSOM-FIELDS had 140 yards on 26 carries in Quincy's 26-20 loss to Milton last Friday night at Veterans' Memorial Stadium. Here he follows blocker Isaiah Uzamere (#75).

They don't quit.

If there is one thing Quincy's young football team has proved over the first two weeks of the season, it is that the Presidents never give up on a football game.

For the second straight thriller last Friday night, Quincy trailed late in the fourth period. For the second straight week, the Presidents battled back and stood on the threshold of a victory.

In the opener against Braintree, it was enough for a two-point win. Against Milton, Quincy barely missed. The Wildcats' Derek Perkins picked off an interception at his own seven with 53 seconds left to stop Quincy's final threat, and Milton escaped with a 26-20 non-league win over the Presidents before a large crowd at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

A coach learns things about a young team early in the season. Quincy's Billy Reardon has learned a most important lesson about his club.

"I love the way we compete. We fight hard and we play the game to the end. We're young and we make mistakes. But if you have that kind of effort, you can improve with practice and hard work," said Reardon.

Milton's high-flying, hurry-up offense under new coach Steve Dembowski was as good as advertised. Quarterback Mike Fallon had 250 yards through the air, two touchdown passes and had Milton up 20-6 at the half and 26-14 with less than 4:00 to play. However, Quincy would not go away quietly, and the Presidents gave themselves a chance to win.

How tough were they? Consider the following.

— Four times in the second half, they had to convert on fourth down to keep alive a drive. Four times, they converted, once on a perfectly-executed pass off a fake punt from quarterback Cody Desmond to Mike McNelly.

— When they simply had to get the ball back, the defense got it back from them. Isaiah Uzamere and McNelly stopped a fourth-and-one at the Quincy 30. Mike Nazzaro's blanket coverage forced a third-down incompletion, and gave Quincy one last chance with 2:59 left in the game.

— With Milton threatening to break open the game in the first half, Garrett Cronin and Jahvae Handsom-Fields stepped up with interceptions deep in Quincy territory.

"I thought we showed our mettle on those fourth-down plays," said Reardon. "Milton is a tough team with great athletes. Fallon is a big-time quarterback. We got decent coverage at the end to get the ball back."

Desmond ran two quarterback draws perfectly in the fourth period. One went for 24 yards to the Milton four to set up a touchdown run by Handsom-Fields. The second was a 31-yard beauty for a touchdown which cut the Milton lead to 26-20 with 3:32 left in the game. Desmond sold the defense on the pass, broke clear up the middle, flashed to the right sideline and outraced the secondary for the score.

"On the draw, Cody has the option to run or pass. If he sees a hole, he runs. He's a good, quick athlete," said Reardon.

After Nazzaro and Sean Curran Cross made big plays on defense to get the ball back, Handsom-Fields had a 12-yard run and Desmond hit Dyreke Johnson with an 18-yard laser over the middle to get Quincy to the Milton 35, but the interception ended the final threat.

Handsom-Fields was brilliant. He had 140 yards on 26 carries, most of them hard yards between the tackles on which he took big hits and kept squirming and twisting to keep alive the play. He also played a smart, hard-hitting game at free safety.

Cronin ran well between the tackles with 30 yards in eight carries. He added a six-yard TD catch in the first half from Desmond and played well at linebacker on defense.

"Jahvae and Garrett both gave us tough yards," said Reardon. "It was good to see Garrett run well because it takes some of the pressure off Jahvae.

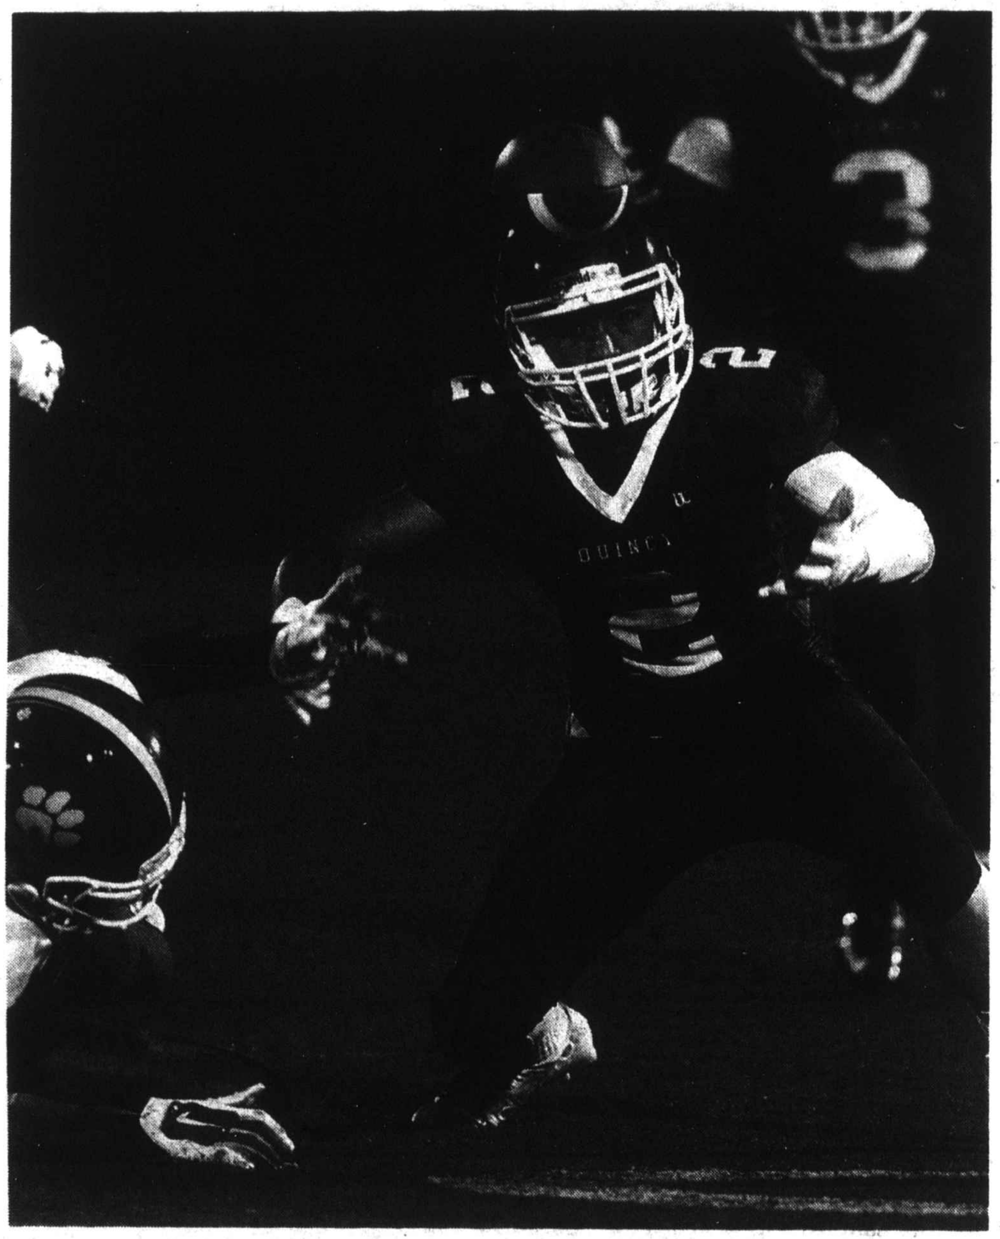
Desmond was a dangerous two-way threat on offense. He ran for 67 yards on seven carries and threw for 46 yards on five completions. He had a TD pass and two-point conversion to Pat Bambrick. As Desmond and Handsom-Fields gain experience playing together, Quincy should be able to crank up its offense as the season progresses.

"Cody gives us an extra option with his offense," said Reardon. "He reads the play well and knows when he has the opening to run."

Milton scored first on a 17-yard TD pass from Fallon to Koby Osazee. Quincy tied it at 6-6 on Desmond's TD pass to Cronin early in the second period. A second TD pass from Fallon and a four-yard scoring run by Osazee put Milton up 20-6 at the half.

Quincy cut it to 20-14 on Handsom-Fields' four-yard TD run in the third, but Milton answered with an eight-yard scoring run by Fallon for a 26-14 lead entering the final period to set up the closing drama.

Game Notes – Quincy (1-1) hosts Plymouth North in a Patriot League Keenan Division game Friday at 7 p.m…Quincy's offensive line of Declan Mayo, Uzamere, Jhonta Sousa, Mike Munroe, and Bernie Van Tassell improved and got a better push in the second half. "We cut down on the plays we were calling and simplified things at halftime," said Reardon...Johnson, who had the winning TD catch Braintree, had three receptions for 29 yards in the second half, including an acrobatic catch over the middle...Munroe had a tipped pass which led to an interception in the first half. Tyrian Leonard, Domenic Coleman, Ryan Ahola, Uzamere and Curran-Cross also had key plays for the Presidents on defense.



QUINCY'S JACKSON VO keeps his eyes on the ball as he recovers a Milton onside kick for the Presidents.

Football Hall Of Fame Monument Dedicated To Ivils

By BILL GRIFFIN

It was a night to shake down some memories and honor a father and son who devoted 40 years of their lives to supporting high school football in the city and making possible the Quincy-North Quincy Hall of Fame.

Robert Ivil and Matthew Ivil Jr. unveiled a plaque of their father Matt and brother Ron at the Hall of Fame Building at half-time of the Quincy vs. Milton game Friday night at Veterans Stadium.

Matt Ivil founded the Quincy Fathers Club in 1953 and organized events and functions which supported football and Quincy and North for 18 years.

Ron has been the director of the Hall of Fame for the past 22 years. The labor of love for the Ivils stretches back over 60 years. The unveiling of the plaque called up thoughts and stories of the fine, old days when it all began.

"It brings back so many memories," said Ron Ivil. "I just remember how much fun it was. I remember my father cooking spaghetti dinner at my house, at the high school, at function halls to support the players. I'm happy this plaque honors what he started."

Butch Mahoney, Ken McPhee, and Jack Raymer began the Hall of Fame in 1984. Ivil took over as director in 1993. There are over 250 players, cheerleaders and supporters in the Hall of Fame. There is a seven-year waiting period before a player can be inducted. Ballots can be found on this page below.

"A player doesn't have to be a superstar. We're looking for players who were dedicated to their teams," said Ron Ivil. "We've had great support from the coaches and from Dr. (Richard) DeCristafaro (Superintendent of Schools). A lot of people are involved."

However, it is Ivil who works the long, thankless hours of organizing and communicating which makes possible the Hall of Fame. The highlight of the season is the induction ceremony on the Tuesday before the Quincy vs. North game on Thanksgiving.

"I love it. I love to talk to the kids and tell them a little of the history of the Hall of Fame," said Ivil. "A lot of members come back and talk to the current players. It's like a fraternity. We invite the seniors from both schools. We have turkey, roast beef and pasta. You should see the kids put it away. There's nothing left over. It's a great night."

QNQ Cross-Country Meet Vs. Hanover Highlights

By GEOFF HENNESSY

The term "diaper dandies" might be appropriate when describing this year's Quincy-North Quincy cross country team.

This is one green bunch with 19 freshmen and 13 others between the two squads. This year the Quincy and North Quincy teams are co-op once again and with good reason. Only three North girls are on the squad and seven boys. The rest are Presidents. Coach Geoff Hennessy begins his 28th season at the helm of cross country.

The Sept. 16 meet versus Hanover was controlled right from the start by the 1-2 punch of junior Jimmy Cannon and senior Peter Saccoach. Both are much improved from a year ago and created a huge lead at the mile point of the 2.5 mile Pageant Field circuit. Juniors Aidan Golden and Kevin White finished 5-6 and when freshman AJ Nelson was edged for 8th it didn't matter. QNQ had 23 points in the bank to Hanover's 42 and chalked up their first win. Behind them were freshmen Nick Ouellette (11), Kyle Ollman (14), Kirian-Phillip Kofoworola-Kuti (15), sophomores Eric Mei (20), Shane Stokes (21), Alan VanGorder(22), Sophomores Victor Chu (24), Alex Ouellette (25) and Sean Scanlon (30).

The girls race was a different matter as Hanover put seven in the top ten to win easily 19-43. The race was not without its highlights though. Little freshman Abby Murphy, last year's middle school city champ in cross country placed 2nd in 18:00 a pretty fast time for a freshman, considering it was her first high school meet and it was a muggy 85 degrees. Senior Co-captain LaQueen Arias was 8th and senior rookie Jackie Coleman was 10th. Coleman is new to the sport and the city having moved here from Coral Springs, Florida, (she has family here in Quincy and Mass.), but

North Quincy Boys Bow To Hanover In Soccer, 4-1

By JOE REARDON

It's only the third week of the season and already North Quincy head coach Rich Hanlon is deeply concerned by what he has seen on the field from his Red Raiders' soccer team. On paper, the team has plenty of talent, but that hasn't trickled over to strong performances so far between the lines.

It's true the team has been slowed somewhat by injuries and North Quincy only had 13 players available on the bench Friday. And it's never an easy ride playing in the Patriot League.

North Quincy's problems, though, go deeper than just bad luck or an unforgiving schedule. The Red Raiders haven't been playing with a sense of urgency, the type of all-out effort you see in the tournament that a coach hopes is there during the regular season as well. Instead of buckling down and trying to dig themselves out of the lethargic situation they're in, the squad as a whole has almost become tentative. And the ship will have to be righted quickly if the Red Raiders don't want to spend the fall struggling to dig themselves out of a deep hole.

The frustration continued for North Quincy last Friday at steamy Veterans' Memorial Stadium against Patriot League opponent Hanover which was a modest 1-1 coming into the match. The Red Raiders looked sharp early on, scoring the first goal of the contest, but it was all Hanover after that as the Indians answered with three second-half tallies for the 4-1 victory.

"It's the worst game we've ever played," said Hanlon. "We stopped communicating and stopped playing agressive. Guys were getting hurt and we ran out of steam. Out of the three teams we've played so far, Whitman-Hanson, Plymouth South and these guys, Hanover, this is the weakest team and we made them look like superstars."

The loss dropped the Red Raiders to a tough 0-3 on the season. The fact that North Quincy missed out on what was a golden opportunity to build some momentum and get some confidence for the players at the same time was a bitter pill for Hanlon to swallow.

The Red Raiders did look sharp in the early minutes and struck first 6:02 in when midfielder Andrew Jayne settled a pass from 30 yards out and blasted it over the head of Hanover goalkeeper Johnny Ferrarini and just below the crossbar for the 1-0 advantage.

After Jayne's tally the momentum shifted drastically in Hanover's favor as the Indians were able to move the ball consistently across midfield and get close to North Quincy's talented keeper Joey England, who co-captains the squad with Jayne and striker/defender Angelo Taho.

The Indians just missed on a pair of bids, one coming on a shot that hit the post to the right of England and another that was just wide of the far post with 23:45 left in the half.

England was the best player on the field for North Quincy in the first half and absolutely robbed Brennan Taylor of a tally with 17:15 left, diving to his left to smother a hard, low shot. England did the same against Matt McGillvery with 15:49 remaining, but with so many shots coming his way, Hanover was eventually going to see the ball cross the goal line.

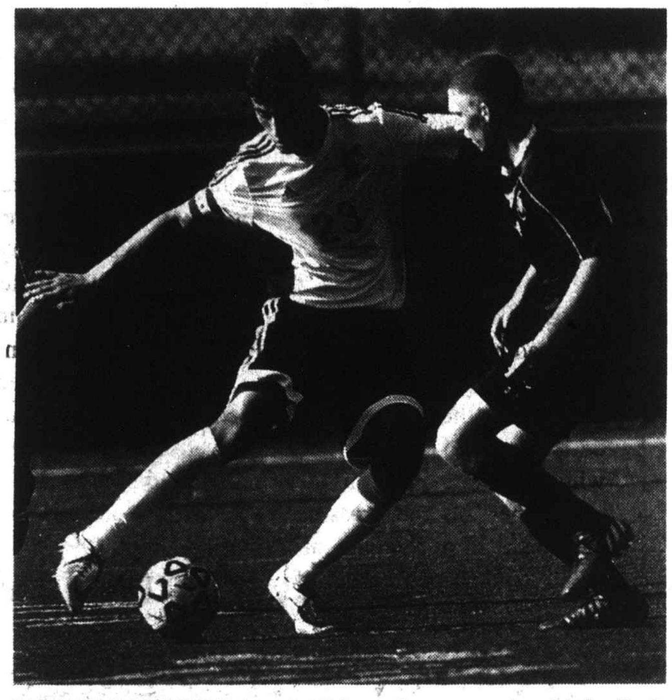
The Indians' persistence paid off with 14:53 remaining in the first when Danny Ferrarini got a pass off to Corey Dooley in close and he proceeded to tap it home to erase North Quincy's lead and make it a 1-1 contest.

"We scored the first goal and kept up some good momentum," said Hanlon. "Then when they scored it was the same old, same old. We let up. No matter how much I preach it they can't get it in their heads. It was like 'here we go again' and you're always going to lose if you have that attitude."

England, though, put that tally behind him and continued to play excellent between the posts, first getting his hand on a shot by Austin Beringer with just over 10 minutes remaining and then coming out and cutting down the angle to thwart Mark Barry's bid with 3:40 left until the break.

It looked as though the Red Raiders were going to head into the half even with the Indians, but that all changed with just over 2:25 to play when England made a big save on Brennan Taylor, but Mason Kane gained control of the rebound and pushed it across the goal line for the 2-1 lead and what was the eventual game winner.

The situation only got worse in the second half after North Quincy basically shut its play down and left England to fend for himself. The keeper had two huge stops 4:30 in in what was still just a one-goal contest, but Hanover was on the verge of breaking it open.



NORTH QUINCY'S Angelo Taho gains possession in the Red Raiders' defensive zone as a Hanover opponent moves in.

Beringer took a pass and made it look easy as he penetrated the North Quincy defense and put a shot on net that England had no shot at to go up 3-1 with 29:26 left.

England made another big stop on McGillvery four minutes later, only to have Matt Daudelin time a pass perfectly and put a header past England with 20:52 left for a 4-1 advantage.

Despite the disappointing loss, Hanlon believes his team has the fortitude to claw its way back into contetnion. "We're much better than we played today," he said. "We have five returning varsity players from last year. It's a work in progress. They're learning well, but everything I've taught them in the past three weeks went out the window in the second half today. It's tough to explain. I know it's hot out there, but it's hot for the other team too. Hanover had two full teams too. We started with 15 today and had three or four get banged up with injuries it makes it tough."

The best news coming out of the Red Raiders' camp is that midfielder Abdel El-Hashash will be returning later this week from a back injury that required a full body brace. The talented El-Hashash, who is expected to make his season debut today against Middleboro, is solid at the outside and midfield, two areas where the Red Raiders have been struggling.

"He'll help a lot," said Hanlon. "He's one of our best so that will certainly help."

VOICE FOR HEALTH
by Dr. Gabrielle Freedman
Chiropractor

A PAIN IN THE NECK

Not only is your cervical spine (neck) composed of the seven smallest vertebrae, but they are also delegated with the job of supporting the head, which weighs about 10-12 pounds. On top of that, when habits and/or poor posture compel the head to tilt forward, they have the effect of placing added weight on the neck. By some estimates, flexing the head 15 degrees forward (which is a position that people commonly assume when checking their cell phones) magnifies the weight of the head up to 27 pounds. The more the head is lowered, the greater the strain placed on the neck. Comprehensive chiropractic evaluation and treatment helps avoid this root cause of neck pain.

Has your neck been bothering you? If you are looking for a good chiropractor, one who will give you the personalized, attentive service you deserve, come to FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, where we are able to adjust patients sitting, standing, or lying down to accommodate any level of discomfort. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. Through comprehensive treatments we can help bring relief. Please call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment.

P.S. Instead of leading with your chin while standing, walking, and reading, focus on tilting your head back slightly, which is the position that best distributes the weight of the head over the spine.

NQ Girls Soccer Downs BL, Bows To Scituate

By BILL GRIFFIN

Everything but a goal.

Keeper Shannan Kennedy was steady and sure. The fullback line was unbreakable. Center halfback Marissa McGue dominated the middle of the field. Mandy Hazelton produced two golden scoring chances with beautiful corner kicks, and a pair of crisp checkerboard passing plays narrowly missed connecting for a score.

The problem was the only goal of the game went to Scituate. Emily Damrell deflected home a corner kick with 8:21 left in the second half to lift the Sailors to a 1-0 win over North in a terrific Patriot League Fisher Division match played at Veterans Stadium Monday afternoon.

"That was a great soccer match," said North coach Paul Bregoli. "We just missed on some good chances. Our defense was great. The only way they were going to score on us was on a dead-ball play. They weren't going to get one in the flow of the game.

"We played excellent soccer. We just couldn't buy a goal. We've given up two goals this season and we're 2-2."

Kennedy made 14 saves and had no chance on the winning goal. She was at her best in the second half, deflecting a direct kick, which was labeled for the top corner, off the crossbar and beating a Scituate attacker to the open corner of the goal for a big-time save.

"She reads the play well, and she gets off her line. She not only had some nice saves, she beat Scituate's attackers to the ball which stopped scoring threats," said Bregoli.

The fullback line of Julia O'Donnell, Molly Kate Cannon and Kerin Coleman gave nothing. They marked well, cleared scoring threats and kept the area in front of Kennedy free of traffic. They ruled the defensive zone until the decisive corner kick.

"Kara Carchedi and Ciara Viscione also played well on defense. Ali Coleman had a big save off a corner kick in the second half which stopped what looked like a sure goal," said Bregoli. "That's a quick, fast, and skilled team and we shut them down."

McGue, with a big assist from Emily Anglehart at outside backer, directed the flow of the game, and the Red Raiders used their control of the center of the field to produce four blue-chip scoring chances, all of which easily could have been goals.

In the first half, Hazelton took two successive corner kicks which she boomed at the right speed and height into the scoring area. Sinead Hanley got a head on the first and McGue directed the second towards the goal, but Scituate's keeper Julia Cuneo turned both aside.

"Mandy took two perfect corners," said Bregoli.

A fine passing play from McGue to Molly Donahue nearly sent Hanley in for a clear break late in the first half. Early in the second half, Hailey Houlihan found Annie Doherty on the right wing. Doherty centered a pass which sent McGue through the defense, but the ball barely trickled free from a clean possession which would have produced a one-on-one break on goal.

"The speed and timing were perfect. It was a tough angle, and I think that's why the ball hopped away from us. That would have been a breakaway," said Bregoli.

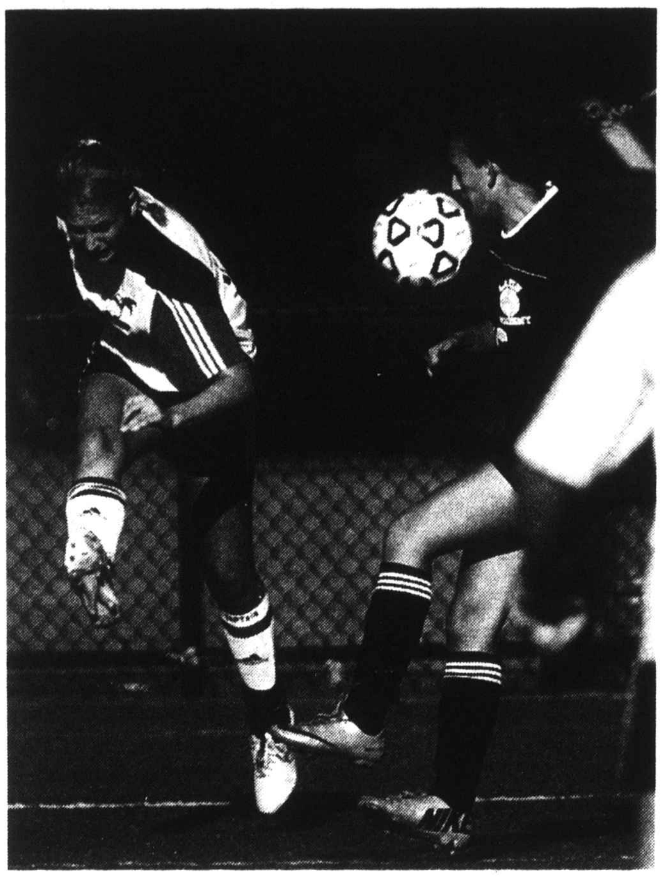
North clearly controlled the first 60-70 minutes of the match, but Scituate finished strongly and the Sailors forced the corner kick with a good rush. Julia Blacker took the corner, and Damrell, who scored the winning goal in Scituate's 2-1 victory over North last year, made an accurate deflection for he goal.

"Right now we're just a little snakebit. We lost 1-0 to Hanover and we had some great chances," said Bregoli. "I was proud of the way the kids played. Annie Doherty and Jill Hallisey played very well. Every kid that went into the match did something positive, and that's all a coach can ask."

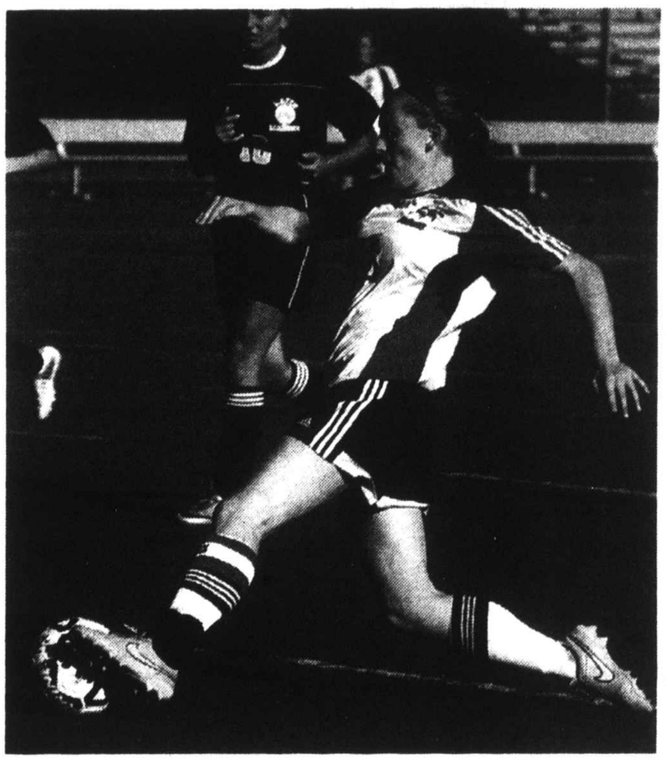
In other action last week, North rolled past Boston Latin for the 200th win of Bregoli's 20-year career. Molly Donahue had three goals while Hanley scored two and McGue added a goal and an assist.

In the 1-0 loss to Hanover, Hanley and Kerin Coleman each had excellent scoring chances which just missed connecting.

North is at Duxbury Monday at 4 p.m.



MARISSA MCGUE was one of seven goal scorers in North Quincy's 10-0 win over Boston Latin Sept. 15. Julia O'Donnell, Annie Doherty, Kara Carchedi, and Emily Butruccio also scored a goal in the Red Raider victory. The win was the 200th career victory for head coach Paul Bregoli.



MOLLY DONAHUE led the Red Raiders scoring 3 goals in a 10-0 victory over Boston Latin.

Quincy Girls Edged By Silver Lake, 3-2

By JOE REARDON

Their record may not show it quite yet, but the Quincy girls' soccer squad has been one fun and exciting team to watch just four games into its quest to improve greatly on a year ago.

Quincy struggled through a one-win campaign last fall and has one win so far this season, but the two teams couldn't be more different. This year's squad has a surplus of young, untapped talent that will make its fair share of noise in the tough Patriot League, not only this season, but for the next three.

While the Presidents found themselves on the receiving end of routs for much of the schedule in 2014, they've been throwing scares into the competition this fall and the season-opening 1-0 win against nonleague opponent Norwood certainly gave Quincy a big lift early.

And then, playing against Div. 2 state champion Hingham, the young (only three seniors) Presidents rushed out to a 2-0 lead before the Harborwomen woke up and took Quincy.

Playing without their starting center back and a starting forward, the Presidents forced visting Silver Lake, a team that picked apart Hingham 6-0, to play hard the entire match on Monday night after rallying for two goals late in what turned out to be an inspired 3-2 loss. The loss put the Presidents at 1-3 with a big showdown slated later in the week against the always tough Green Dragons of Duxbury.

Quincy head coach Seth Harmon, now in his second year, has his team on the same page as to the effort he expects and was pleased with the Presidents' ability to battle back despite the three-tally defecit. "We played well with (Plymouth) North in the first half and didn't play well in the second half," said Harmon. "This game was kind of the same thing. We didn't play well for about two minutes and they got two goals. I think we showed a lot of heart by battling back and scoring those two for kind of a thrilling finish.

QUINCY'S TAYLOR ROUTHIER gets a strong shot on net for the Presidents against Silver Lake Monday.

"We definitely have to maintain our intensity and focus for the whole game. In all three of our losses we just weren't there mentally for two minutes or five minutes. Plymouth North scored two goals in four minutes and Hingham scored two goals in five minutes. And tonight Silver Lake scored two goals in two minutes. It's just those little things we have to work on. That's what I'm so happy about. Even in the losses, you look at the game as a whole and it doesn't look like anybody was the way better team. Other teams may have taken advantage of their chances a little better, but for the most part we're in every game."

Down 3-0 with less than 12 minutes to play, freshman Megan Lyons scored off a corner kick and Kari Wismar followed through on a rush to put a shot past Silver Lake keeper Caity Smith to make it a one-goal game.

"We took a timeout after they scored the third one and I told them to get one," said Harmon. "There's still 25 minutes left. If we get one we're right back in it. We got one, then we got two on a little bit of an error by their goalie and we're right back in it and we have the momentum. For the last 10 minutes of the game it didn't look like they were going to do anything."

Quincy keeper Emi Guarente was sharp early, turning away a shot by Allie Crawford and then sprinting high in the box to cut down the angle of a Michala Callahan bid.

The Lakers continued to pepper Guarente and they finally put the ball past the goal line with 6:22 left on a direct kick by Crawford from 30 yards out that sailed just below the crossbar for the 1-0 advantage.

Co-captain Gabby Jerahian had the best bid by Quincy in the closing minute on a hard shot from the left side that Smith was able to smother.

The Presidents went into the break confident they could penetrate on offense in the second half. "At that point it was very positive," said Harmon. "The only negative was just to focus more on going to the ball and not giving them much time to get the ball at midfield. We wanted to keep the intensity up and keep playing like we had been."

Jerahian was on point in the beginning of the second half with three great chances to knot the game up at 1. After being denied on a rush down the left side, Smith stretched high to pull down her direct kick 6:51 in. Jerahian's best bid came with 9:09 gone when another direct kick from 20 yards out rattled off the crossbar.

A lapse in intensity on the field cost the Presidents dearly just minutes later when Guarente was beaten on some fancy footwork in close and a seeing-eye kick that found its way to the high right corner to put the Lakers up 3-0.

After Quincy scored the two tallies it continued to put strong shots on frame with hope of knotting it at 3. The two shots that hit the post earlier in the game loomed large as the Presidents weren't able to punch in a third goal.

"It was tough to play against a team of this quality," said Harmon. "You never get a break (in the Patriot League). You hope you get a week where if you have injuries they can get better, but this week we have Duxbury and Silver Lake. I couldn't be more happy with the effort here.

"That's kind of been our thing all season, a hundred percent intensity the whole time. If we do that we'll get the results."

30, Dec. 1, Dec. 7 and Dec. 8. The check-in time for all hunters would be between 5 and 7 a.m. those days with check-out at 4 p.m.

The plan would allow 120 hunters to hunt deer in portions of the park north of Interstate 93 each day. The deer management plan divides the park into six separate sections and the number of hunters per section is capped at roughly one per 30 acres.

The hunters would be allowed to use slugs this year; buckshot would be prohibited. Archery hunting may be allowed in future years.

Those applying to hunt in the Blue Hills Reservation must have a valid FID card and hunting license; they would be required to fill out an application and submit it to the DCR. A lottery would determine which applicants would be allowed to take part in the hunt. Successful applicants would have to attend a mandatory orientation session that would cover a number of topics, including safety considerations, area assignments, and other elements of the deer management plan.

As part of the plan, DCR has proposed closing Chickatawbut Road between Granite Street in Braintree and Route 28 as well as the entirety of Wampatuck Road beginning at 8 p.m. the Sundays before the hunt and ending at 7 a.m. the Wednesdays following the hunt. Hunters would be allowed to park on those roads to access the park.

Two other meetings on the plan have been scheduled in neighboring communities. The first is scheduled for tonight (Thursday) at 6:30 p.m. at the Ponkapoag Golf Course, 2167 Washington St. in Canton. The second meeting is at 6:30 p.m. on Sept. 29 at the Blue Hills Trailside Museum, 1904 Canton Avenue in Milton.

has impressed the coaching staff with her work ethic and easy going personality. Other finishers were Alyssa Camara (13), freshman Cianna Williams (14), Senior Co-Captain Grace Anderson (19), freshman Eve Anderson (22), freshmen Kiersten Irion (25), and Nora Comerford (26).

"We're improving daily" said Coach Hennessy. "I really like the leadership and work ethic we're getting from seniors Peter Sac-coach, LaQueen Arias, Alyssa Camara, Kelly Zeng and Grace Anderson. All of them are leaders in and out of the classroom and excel at multiple sports.

"The boys have a shot at a winning record despite having to compete in the tougher Keenan Division of the Patriot League (Duxbury, Hingham, Silver Lake, Plymouth North and Whitman-Hanson). The girls will take their lumps but the fun part will be watching them improve every day and seeing younger kids like Abby Murphy and Cianna Williams do their thing in the freshman events sponsored by the MSTCA. Our freshman boys should rock in the big meets."

QNQ traveled to Plymouth North Tuesday. The Eagles are coached by former NQ coach and alumni John Laverty. "He was an assistant my senior year," said Hennessy, "and he interacts with our kids telling them about past exploits of NQ and Quincy runners. Norfolk County Registry Of Deeds Historic Transcription Project

More Than 250,000 Hand-Written Deeds Dating Back 207 Years To Be Modernized

The Norfolk County Registry of Deeds is going back in time, 1793 to be exact.

Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell announces a project to modernize all handwritten deed documents dating back to when George Washington was President.

"The Norfolk County Registry of Deeds has been in existence for over 200 years. During that time, the Registry has gone from days of scriveners with quill pens to the modern era of computers and advanced document imaging. This project is an effort to transcribe images of handwritten deed documents dating back from 1793 to 1900," O'Donnell said.

The Registry, which is one of the first in the country to transcribe hand-written deeds documents back to Revolutionary times, is managing a massive undertaking. The 207 years of transcriptions total more than 250,000 deeds, resulting in 12.5 million lines of print.

O'Donnell noted that half of the handwritten deeds are already on-line for viewing, and the project should be completed in about a year's time.

"The project represents a special effort by the Registry to have an accurate representation of these handwritten deed documents. Additionally, its mission is to help the public perform historical, genealogical and land record research.

"A dedicated team of transcribers have been working to decipher these handwritten documents and transcribe them so they are available for viewing via our website www.norfolkdeeds.org," O'Donnell said.

While the transcribers have made a best effort attempt to translate these hard to read documents, their accuracy is not guaranteed.

"These transcribed documents," O'Donnell said, "are not legal documents in and of itself, and are not considered binding on the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds or its employees. It is considered merely a convenient reference for Registry patrons. For documentation purposes, users should refer to the scanned image of the original document instead of the transcribed image."

"As Register of Deeds, I take very seriously my responsibility to be the custodian of land document information in Norfolk County," O'Donnell said. "Part of that responsibility is to ensure the accuracy and accessibility of these land documents. Future generations will now be able to read these transcribed images with the goal of ensuring a historically correct record of land documents in Norfolk County."

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Friday, September 11, 2015, at approximately 6:53 p.m., Officers Mark Millane and John McGowan were dispatched to the McDonald's restaurant located at 275 Hancock Street for a robbery call.

Upon arrival, Officer Millane met with the 35 year old female victim and her boyfriend in the restaurant. The victim said that they both went to the bathroom at the same time, leaving her black back pack behind in the booth. When she came out, she saw that the back pack was missing and told her boyfriend as he came back to the booth. The boyfriend went back into the men's room and observed a man in possession of the back pack. The boyfriend asked the suspect what he was doing with his girlfriends back pack. The suspect didn't respond; he walked out of the men's room and exited the building.

The boyfriend then saw the suspect take his girlfriend's purse out from the back pack. The boyfriend approached the suspect and grabbed the back pack out of the suspect's hand. The suspect went to a vehicle in the lot and jumped into the passenger seat. The vehicle, driven by a male with a beard and baseball hat, left the lot heading up behind North Quincy High School on Hunt Street. The boyfriend was able to get the license plate of the vehicle.

The victim said that her black Coach purse contained an I-Phone 6 cell phone which she valued at $589.00. She was also missing her driver's license, Citizens bank card, Capital One credit card, Bunker Hill community college identification and $11.00 in U.S. currency.

The boyfriend and the victim provided similar descriptions of the suspect. Quincy Police communications broadcast a description of the suspect vehicle and shortly after, Officer McGowan located it at the Holyoke Street address it was registered to. Officer McGowan saw one male leaning on the front of this vehicle talking on a cell phone and another male in the driveway.

At this time, Sergeant Mark Kennedy and Officer Steven Dabilis arrived on scene to assist Officer McGowan. The victim and her boyfriend were brought to the scene by cruiser. The boyfriend immediately confirmed he was "100% sure" that they were the two men involved. The victim also stated that she was "100%" sure that one of the men was the thief and "80 to 90 % sure" about the operator. The clothing descriptions as well as the physical descriptions matched for the two suspects.

The suspect who took the back pack, a 26 year old Quincy resident, was placed under arrest and charged with "Larceny from a Person." Officer Millane searched the driveway and surrounding area but could not locate the purse or cell phone. Since it could not be established that the driver was aware of what transpired inside the restaurant, he was allowed to leave pending further investigation. Nice Work!

DEBT COLLECTION SCAMS: There are many techniques used by debt collectors and some of them are high pressure and/or illegal. Then there are the scammers who claim that you owe money. Their tactic vary but often the scammer may state that they are from a law enforcement or bogus government agency such as "Federal Crime Unit of the Department of Justice" attempting to retrieve money owed. The scammer may threaten to sue or have Officers come to arrest the victim if money is not paid. The scammer may also threaten to tell family members and employers about outstanding debt.

Obvious questions you should ask yourself:

*Do I recognize this debt?

*Why does the scammer want me to make payment by wire transfer?

*Why won't the collector provide a telephone number or address?

*Why can't the collector answer any questions that you have and you should have plenty?

*Why is the collector threatening me with arrest, which is illegal?

*Why would a law enforcement agency be involved with debt collection?

*Why haven't I been sent a written "validation notice", which has to include the amount of the debt, the name of the creditor you owe, and your rights under the federal Fair Debt Collection Practices Act.

*If the debt is legitimate but you think the collector may not be, contact your creditor about the calls. Find out if anyone else is working for the creditor.

*Remember, you can always call the local Police for help. (Excerpts from FTC)

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A workplace change doesn't seem to have turned out quite as you'd hoped. Never mind: Just treat yourself to a healthy dollop of that Aries self-confidence, and you'll soon view things differently.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Some of the support you might have hoped for in a difficult situation might not be there. But you have the strength to rely on your own capabilities if you must. Good luck.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A disagreement with a longtime friend can be painful, but it also can be a learning lesson. Insist on a full and complete airing of views. You'll both come away the better for it.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A stalled relationship can be restarted with some give and take on both sides. And while it could take more time than you expect, don't rush it. Be patient, and let it happen naturally.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) An opportunity to move a long-stalled project from concept to construction might be opening up for the Big Cat. Meanwhile, be prepared to spend more time dealing with family matters.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Use your Virgo organizational skills to line up support to help you deal with a sticky workplace problem. A personal matter also might be helped with friendly intervention.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Trying to resolve a workplace problem with a longtime associate can be difficult. Consider bringing in an impartial third party to help you both reach a mutually acceptable solution.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) This is a good time to assess your current career situation. Consider whether you have a chance to move up where you are now, or if you should look elsewhere.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) With education being a dominant part of this week's aspect, one of the things you might want to think about is taking courses to enhance your career opportunities.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You might have a problem trying to stay focused on a matter you'd rather not deal with. But the sooner you do, the sooner it will be resolved and out of the way.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) An unforeseen complication creates a difficult problem. But things get resolved once you use your ability to turn negative situations into positive experiences.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) The Pisces penchant for doing the right thing at the right time helps you deal with a particularly troublesome situation. Consider your best option, and act accordingly.

BORN THIS WEEK: Although you might sometimes seem rigid in your views, your love of justice makes you a trusted friend everyone can rely on.

Blessing of the Animals Oct. 25 at QCUMC

On Sunday, Oct. 25, Quincy Community United Methodist Church will hold its annual Blessing of the Animals worship service. Everyone is invited to bring their pet in person, or bring a photo of the pet.

"Some pets are very uncomfortable in unfamiliar places and among unknown people. In such cases, please bring a photo of your pet. Other pets are very comfortable among strangers and take a new place in stride. We want everyone – pets and people – to have a great time, so everyone has to make their own decision."

All pets must be on a leash or in a carrier.

In addition to present pets, everyone is also invited to bring photos of past pests. The photos will be placed on the altar during the service.

The annual collection of supplies for the Quincy Animal Shelter will also be included in the worship service.

"Throughout October, Quincy Community has been taking up a special collection for the shelter. The shelter told us what its greatest present needs are and Quincy Community has been collecting cat and kitten food, blankets, paper towels, bleach and cat toys over the past month," Jarek-Glidden said. "During the worship service, these will be placed on the altar."

The church is located at 40 Beale St., across the street from the Wollaston MBTA station, and is handicapped accessible through the entrance nearest the flagpole. For more information call the church at 617-773-3319.

Domestic Violence Awareness Sunday At QCUMC Oct. 11

On Sunday, Oct. 11, the 10:30 a.m. morning worship service at Quincy Community United Methodist Church will be dedicated to raising awareness about domestic violence.

"More and more people are beginning to realize that domestic violence knows no boundaries. It is unfortunately found among all economic and educational levels, all ethnic and racial backgrounds, all gender orientations and religions," the Rev. Dr. Susan F. Jarek-Glidden, the church's pastor, said.

"What's heartbreaking is the fact that domestic violence exists at all."

The church is proud to work with DOVE (Domestic Violence Ended) to help raise awareness of the issue. The church has also held DOVE's annual Domestic Violence Awareness Vigil.

Quincy Community United Methodist Church is located at 40 Beale St., across the street from the Wollaston MBTA station, and is handicapped accessible through the entrance nearest the flagpole. For more information call the church at 617-773-3319.

Scores & More: Week 2 Youth Football Highlights

By PATRICK McDERMOTT

Here are scores and highlights of Week 2 Quincy Youth Football League action.

WEST QUINCY ELKS vs. MILTON MUSTANGS

14-0 Milton Mustangs

For the West Quincy Elks, Brody Baker, Cydney Green, and Chase Morales, played tough in the loss. While they were able to move the ball early and often, they just couldn't cash in.

JV

34-8 Elks

After trailing 8-0 the Elks picked it up behind touch downs by Joe Brahimi, Malik Francis, Bobby Jaehnig and Amarion Robinson. The team benefited from solid blocking by Samee Akhouzine, Dallas Hudgins, and Xavier Seguinot. The defense played tough behind Aidan Dyer, James Hoare, Mike Nellany, Ben O'Mahony, Matt Pratt, Ben Snyder and Gabe Vilarino. Brendan Baker, Billy Hibbard and Riley O'Connell had a strong showing on both offense and defense. The Elks' lead was secured by a great read and reaction by Gianni Perea for a pick-6. Two-point conversions by Aldo Fernandes and Ethan Walsh also contributed to the victory.

Varsity

The West Quincy Elks ended their second game of the season victoriously following up their 24-0 victory week 1 against the Panthers. The game got off to a fast start with a nice corner route from Franco Calabro to Franck Yhomby. Stuart Dozier followed up with an amazing show of speed running for a 60-yard touch down. Franco Calabro continued the streak with another soft corner route to Landon Pierron.

Defensive monsters Thomas Conroy, Sean O'Toole and Milo Santangelo made it difficult for the Mustangs to move the ball. Playing well upfront were Rean Beqo, Wil Hingston, Eddie Lei, Jake McGahey, Cam Seviour and Keylani Taylor. Two-way studs Evan Dyer and Pat Devoy rounded out the Elks' performance.

The second half saw some nice runs by Evan Dyer and Ethan Voeun Ros.

MANETS DT Devante Williams applies heavy pressure to Apaches QB Danny Scolaro in the varsity game on Sunday.

A nice pitch and catch from Eoin Gormley (1 TD pass, 3 XPTs) to Aaron O'Toole for an impressive 50 yard touch down wrapped up the Elks' scoring.

SQUANTUM STORM vs. QUINCY POINT PANTHERS

Freshman

Storm lost to the Panthers, unable to get the offense going until the second half. Led by more than a dozen tackles and 100 rushing yards by #88 Benjamin Walinjom, the team got great efforts from QB Charlie Ambroult and Paul Glynn. With improved blocking from the line, including Marcus Moore, Robert Walinjom and Noel Sancho, the team continues to learn and grow.

JV

Storm suffered a similar fate as the Freshmen. Though controlling time of possession the Storm was unable to punch it into the end zone until the end of the game. The offense and defense were well balanced with contributions from Michael Gorman, Tommy Gates, Gavin Toland, Daniel Freeman, Liam Hines, Hunter McIsaac and Henry Cunniff. On 75 yards rushing by Paul Glynn, capped by a final run of 15 yards, which put QB Elias Walsh in position to punch it in for a TD. The team was depleted by injury and illness this week but stood strong throughout and played to the last whistle.

VARSITY

The Storm got their first win of the season on three rushing touchdowns and a 40 yard pass TD from from QB Tom Roache to Michael Adamson. Adamson punched in two of the other rushing touchdowns, behind blocking from Jackson Zhao, Michael Dooley, Kevin Dihn, Steven Wallace and Raymond Chau. Josh Jackson picked up the other rushing touchdowns and contributed as a lead blocker on both of the Adamson rushing TDs. The Storm defense got good play from our defensive ends Sean Jackson and Shane O'Connell. Erik Mayo had a big game, with multiple tackle and tackle assists as well as forcing a fumble which was recovered by Shane O'Connell. Tackle count was led by Michael Adamson and Josh Jackson, both making key stops during the game.

NQ APACHES vs. HN MANETS

MANETS-20 APACHES-0

The Manets got on the scoreboard late in the first half when Lukas Schaaf connected with Isaiah Steinberg for a 56 yard TD pass. Kicker Jake Galligan added the conversion kick to put the Manets ahead 8-0 at halftime.

The Manets took the ball to start the second half. Manets RB, Steinberg capped the drive with a 39-yard TD run. Apache DE, James Ward blocked the conversion kick and the Manets led 14-0, early in the second half. The Apaches Offense mounted some long drives throughout the game led by RB Tyler Le (110 yards on 12 carries). Manets DT, Devante Williams led the Manets defense with 2 sacks and a Fumble recovery.

Steinberg added the final score of the afternoon on a 43 yard TD run, late in the fourth quarter.

The conversion attempt failed as the Manets defeated the Apaches 20-0. The Manets saw some fine performances from Steinberg, Shane Murphy, Tyler Duncan, Williams, Ty Chafa, Trenton Sousa and Kevin Gallant. The Apaches were led by Danny Scolaro, Declan Geary, Michael Levine, Will Farrell, Tom McCormack, Thomas Le, Aiden Murphy, Will Whooley and Coleman Flaherty.

JUNIOR VARSITY:

APACHES-8 MANETS-2

The Apaches and Manets battled thru a scoreless first half. Both Defenses were stifling. The Manets got on the scoreboard early in the second half when the Manet defender tackled the Apaches Running back in the end zone for a Safety. Defense continued to be the dominate factor the game. Apaches DB, Scott Gutro led the Defense with some big stops on 4th down. Late in the second half, Apaches RB, Brian Gutro broke away on a 73 yard TD run to put his team ahead 6-2. Tony Le added the conversion as the Apaches (2-0) defeated the Manets, 8-2 in this Desmond Division matchup.

The Apaches Jayvees were sparked by the performances of Matt Kelly, Chris Tice, Matt Craig, Tony Le, Connor Plante, Clayton Corley, Michael Pollastretti, Harry Gaudiano, Scott & Brian Gutro, Billy MacDonald and Cooper Hansen.

FRESHMAN:

The Manets Freshman continued their unbeaten streak as they battled to a 14-0 victory over the Apaches at LaBrecque Field on Saturday. It was a defensive battle in the scoreless first half. Manets Return Man, Teddy Lynch took the opening kick of the second half back 63 yards for a TD. QB Dean Schaaf ran in for the conversion to put the Manets ahead 8-0.

Later in the second half, Manets RB, Chris Brady scored on a 52 yard TD Run. The Conversion attempt failed but the Manets won the ball game 14-0. The Manets were led by Max Van Tassel, Ryan Gomez, Schaaf, Owen Desmond, Lynch, Alex Rheault, Brady and TJ Manton. The Apaches got fine performances from Aden Le, JC Petrongolo, Ryan Messing, Matt Whooley, Brandon Riley and Grant Murphy.

NQ Falls To BL, Visits Hanover Friday

By BILL GRIFFIN

The offense took a step forward, but turnovers early in the second half proved costly for North Quincy against Boston Latin.

Latin quarterback Griffin Le threw for three touchdowns to offset a brilliant performance by North's senior tailback Aidan Brown and defeat the Red Raiders, 27-13 in a non-league road contest Saturday morning.

"I thought our offense was much improved over the opener against Bedord. We hurt ourselves with turnovers and penalties especially in the second half," said North coach Mark Nutley.

Brown scored two touchdowns. After gaining 65 yards in the second half against Bedford, Brown ran hard and well again against Latin, piling up 138 yards on the ground. Brown's four-yard TD run had North within 7-6 at the half.

Le threw a touchdown pass to put Latin up, 14-6 early in the third period, but Brown answered with a bolt of a 75-yard kick return for what looked like a touchdown, but it was called back because of a block-in-the-back penalty.

"That was a big play. It would have put us within two points. We turned it over on a fumble and an interception in the second half. That hurt us," said Nutley.

Latin then scored two straight TDs for a 27-6 lead. Senior quarterback Joey Fallon and Brown connected on a 27-yard scoring play, and sophomore Dara Griffin kicked the extra point to finish the scoring. The play finished a 72-yard scoring drive which featured several runs by Brown behind good blocking from his offensive line.

"Derek Huynh played a standout two-way game up front. Conor Pound played well defensively for us," said Nutley

Latin scored first for a 7-0 lead. North answered with a 65-yard drive. Brown ran well in the march, and Fallon found Tom Koch for a 15-yard completion to keep alive the drive.

"We moved the ball better. We have to cut down on the turnovers and penalties. That's what hurt us against Latin," said Nutley.

North (0-2) travels to Hanover for a Patriot League Fisher Division game Friday night at 7 p.m.

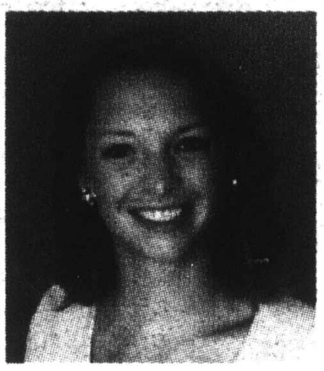
New School Program In Memory Of Beloved Teacher

Emily Zarnoch Remembered At First School Committee Meeting

By MIRIAM JOSEPH

The Quincy School Committee held its first meeting of the academic year Sept. 16 and Committeewoman Barbara Isola moved that the meeting be dedicated to the memory of Emily Zarnoch, the Central Middle School teacher who died in August.



EMILY ZARNOCH

Isola led a moment of silence and asked that all present remember Emily "in our hearts and our minds as we move forward." Zarnoch, popularly known to the student body as Ms. Z was killed by a hit-and-run driver while vacationing in Maine.

School Supt. Richard DeChristofaro announced that a new program, in Emily's name, will be implemented in the Quincy Public Schools this winter called BOKS', Build Our Kids' Success, an initiative of the Reebok Foundation.

BOKS' is a free before-school physical activity program geared towards elementary and middle school aged children to help jump start their bodies and brains for a day of learning.

The curriculum includes fun, non-competitive warm-ups, relay races, obstacle courses and games designed to incorporate functional movement skills and a healthy nutritional component.

The official BOKS' mission states: To promote the profound impact of physical activity on a child's mind, body and community.

DeChristofaro thanked Reebok for its announcement that "Quincy Public Schools would be granted or awarded $50,000 for four or five years in Emily's name to the BOKS' program. Emily Z's BOKS' is an early-morning exercise program, but it is really curriculum oriented."

For grades K-8, the program will run for 12 weeks, 2 days per week at every middle and elementary school, including, DeChristofaro said, the Beechwood and Atlantic schools, where Emily had been a student, as well as Central Middle, where she was set to begin her full time assignment this month.

Present at the meeting were John and Gwen Zarnoch, Emily's parents. John Zarnoch, who offered "to help in any way" he could with the program is a long-time employee of Reebok.

He said, "I just want to say thank you to everyone for this tribute and for the support we have received from the city of Quincy throughout this entire ordeal. She meant a lot to us... Emily was involved with BOKS' as well...her first love was to be a teacher and she had met with Cathleen Kelly over at Reebok.

"She loved the idea of getting kids out there, getting them active, being with them, so this is really a fitting tribute to the folks at Reebok to provide this funding. We are thrilled with the idea."

Emily Zarnoch was a much-loved 23 year-old Quincy teacher who was scheduled to start teaching seventh-grade reading this fall at Central, where she had been substituting for the past year. She also was coaching track and field, an interest she also held while attending North Quincy High.

Emily was walking home after spending the evening out with her boyfriend Stephen Cortez. They chose to walk so as not to drink and drive. Emily was struck by an SUV driven by a young woman whom an officer described as having smelled of alcohol.

"I think this will liven up the place," DiBona said. He referred to the current activity at the new Quincy High School, the Coddington Building and the new track, which had not been foreseen. "We're trying to do something on the other end of the city as well."

Also speaking in support of the project was committee-member Barbara Isola, who said she understood that the project was not to be a school project. "Never did I think that it was within our jurisdiction as school committee person that we would have any say in the project.

"I am pleased for the community at North Quincy High School and that part of the city, that we will have that facility and the parking...I know the parking for those students was absolutely deplorable...Teel Field wasn't really a parking lot...the kids were parking on dirt and when it snowed and when it was wet, they were in mud."

Mayor Koch addressed the intersection improvements which were referred to by all committee-members as impacting the safety of the school's students as well, specifically mentioning the new fence there "which directs the students where they are supposed to cross."

SUPERMOON SPECTACULAR – An orange "supermoon" rises over the eastern horizon as seen from Nut Island at the tip of Houghs Neck near sunset on Sunday. Besides the rare supermoon – which is 14 percent larger and 30 percent brighter than a regular full moon – there was also a full lunar eclipse Sunday evening. This marked the first time for this rare phenomenon since 1982 and only the sixth time since 1900. The next supermoon and total lunar eclipse will not occur for another 18 years in the year 2033. Palmucci Seeks Affordable Housing In Downtown

By SCOTT JACKSON

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci is seeking to eliminate the provision of Quincy's zoning code that exempts certain downtown redevelopment projects from requirements laid out in the city's affordable housing ordinance.

Palmucci introduced the proposed change at Monday night's City Council meeting. It was refered to the ordinance committee for further review.

Quincy's Inclusionary Zoning Ordinance currently applies to all residential projects in the city that require a special permit, variance or site plan review from any board or commission and include 10 or more residential units. Under the zoning code, 10 percent of units in applicable projects must be made affordable – targeted at residents who make less than 80 percent of the median income for the area. Developers can opt to make a cash payment into an affordable housing trust fund in lieu of designating 10 percent of units as affordable or donate land for the purposes of creating affordable housing.

Those requirements, however, do not currently apply to projects permitted under the Urban Revitalization and Development Plan for Quincy Center. Two have projects – the first with 169 apartments and the second with 56 condos – have been approved under terms of the URDP this year; neither developer was required to designate units as affordable or pay into the trust fund.

"The affordability of living in the city of Quincy has steadily declined in recent years," Palmucci's order states. "Residents living in affordable housing are in many instances young professionals or young families starting out…residential development in the Quincy Center District should be made affordable for residents of the city of Quincy and… residents of Quincy should have access to affordable living in the Quincy Center development district."

(NOT SO) FAMILIAR RING

Rings provide women with the chance to express themselves, whether it is with an engagement ring that announces an impending wedding or oversized cocktail ring that declares a sense of fun. Now that stackable rings have become popular, the style shifts from vertical to horizontal, with rings worn on multiple fingers and at various places on the finger, including above the knuckle. These smaller sized rings that are worn above the knuckle are called "midi" rings. "Brass knuckle" style rings epitomize the horizontal theme. This glove-off style features connected rings that span at least two or more fingers. Pinkie rings are also once again making a comeback among both men and women.

Koch-Phelan: 'Three For Four'

In boxing there's been the "Thrilla in Manilla" and the "Rumble in the Jungle."

We're dubbing the third Koch-Phelan mayoral match and political slugfest "Three for Four."

This marks three times in eight years that Thomas Koch and Bill Phelan have opposed one another for mayor of Quincy. But unlike the other two times – the winner on Nov. 3 will be elected for a term of four years.

KOCH

PHELAN

If you fell asleep before the polls closed on Election Night 2007 and didn't wake up until last week, you may have thought you were still dreaming. The same two names - Koch and Phelan - will be on the mayoral ballot again next month - just as they were eight and six years ago.

Koch, the incumbent, and Phelan, the former mayor, finished one-two to win mayoral nominations in the Sept. 24 preliminary election. Finishing "out of the money" were Councillor at-Large Doug Gutro and Anne Mahoney.

Koch topped the preliminary ballot with 6,670 votes (40.87 percent). Phelan was second with 3,514 votes or 21.53 percent. Gutro was third with 3,066 votes (18.79 percent) and Mahoney fourth with 3,037 votes (18.61 percent.)

Koch and Phelan supporters each interpreted the results favorably. For the Koch camp, the results were a strong showing city-wide with nearly 41 percent among a field of four well-known candidates. They also noted that the mayor won 28 out of 31 precincts.

In the other precincts, Gutro won two and Phelan one.

Gutro – a former Ward 5 councillor – won Ward 5 Precinct 3 (votes at the Adams Academy) and Ward 5 Precinct 5 (polling precinct Beechwood Knoll School.) The margins in Ward 5 Precinct 3 and Ward 5 Precinct 5 were 21 and 3 votes over Koch respectively.

Phelan was first in Germantown (Ward 1 Precinct 2) by 64 votes over Koch.

Koch's biggest margin of victory came in Ward 6 Precinct 5 in Squantum where he finished first 341 votes ahead of Mahoney – 582 to 241 votes. Phelan was third in Squantum with 186 votes and Gutro fourth, 107.

Koch polled more than 400 votes in Ward 3 Precinct 4 (438); more than 300 votes in Ward 1 Precinct 4 (323) and Ward 1 Precinct 5 (380) and more than 200 votes in eight other precincts.

Phelan's supporters also interpreted the vote totals positively. They noted that an incumbent mayor received only 40 percent of the vote and that 60 percent – or 9,617 voters – cast ballots for someone else.

Both camps are right.

And some observers in the city believe the third go-around between Koch and Phelan will go down to the wire on election night. Expect the hits to come fast and frequently between these two political foes.

One of the questions leading up to the Nov. 3 election is:

Who will Gutro and Mahoney supporters vote for? The 6,103 votes they polled collectively are up for grabs. They could ultimately decide the mayor's race. Gutro and Mahoney on Monday endorsed Phelan and urged their supporters to follow suit.

Turnout will be another significant factor in five weeks.

City Clerk Joseph Shea is forecasting 44 to 46 percent turnout Nov. 3. That's about 24,896 voters – or 8,547 more than the number that turned out for the preliminary election.

So if you add the Gutro-Mahoney voters with the voters who are expected to turnout Nov. 3, that's 14,650 total votes or nearly 59 percent of the forecasted 46 percent turnout.

Regardless of how you crunch the preliminary numbers, it appears the Koch-Phelan "Three For Four" will be a close contest.

THIS WILL BE the third time Koch and Phelan have squared off for mayor. Koch unseated Phelan in 2007 and won in a rematch in 2009. But it's not the most times two candidates have opposed one another on the ballot for mayor in Quincy.

That distinction belongs to political rivals Charles Ross and Thomas McGrath who faced one another four times for mayor during the Great Depression era. McGrath won in 1926 and 1928 and Ross won in 1932 and 1934.

In the first match-up, Ross and McGrath were both city councillors and were nominated in the city's first municipal preliminary election. Ross was the top vote-getter in the preliminary but McGrath won the final election by 466 votes. McGrath prevailed in a rematch in 1928.

In 1932 Ross mounted another challenge against McGrath. This time Ross was the top vote-getter in the preliminary – 1,593 votes ahead of the second-place McGrath. In the final, Ross unseated McGrath by 1,710 votes.

In 1934, Ross and McGrath were nominated in a preliminary election. Ross was re-elected to a second term, defeating McGrath by a margin of 1,914 votes.

POLITICAL FACT: Thomas McGrath is not the only Quincy mayor to finish second in a preliminary election and win the general election.

It's happened three other times – the last occurring 40 years ago.

- Special Election 1935: Thomas Burgin was second in a five-candidate field in the preliminary finishing behind acting Mayor Leo Mullin. In the final, Burgin was elected the city's 21st mayor by a margin of 4,915 votes over Mullin.
- 1942 – Charles Ross, the former mayor, finished second among five candidates in the preliminary election. The top vote-getter was Rep. Myron Lane – 328 votes ahead of Ross. In the final, Ross defeated Lane by 1,419 votes.
- 1975 – City councillor at-large Joseph LaRaia finished second in the preliminary election behind incumbent Mayor Walter Hannon by 1,911 votes. In the final, LaRaia defeated Hannon by 483 votes after a city-wide recount, reversing Hannon's 134-vote victory on Election Night.

WHILE SOME COMMENTS after the preliminary election naturally focused on the winners and losers, there was also much discussion – and disappointment – over the low turnout.

Only 30 percent of the city's voters turned out for the preliminary election – the number forecast by City Clerk Joseph Shea. The turnout in 2009 – the last mayoral preliminary – was 29.5 percent.

Don't blame the weather – it was an ideal day for fall with blue skies and no rain.

Don't blame the day of the week, either – much advance publicity made voters aware that voting would be Thursday, Sept. 24 instead of the originally scheduled date of Tuesday, Sept. 22.

Whatever the reason, we hope that every registered voter will take time over the next few weeks to acquaint themselves with the issues and all the candidates who are on the ballot Nov. 3.

In the case of the mayor's race, the winner will serve the city for the next four years. That's a long time – and voters won't have another opportunity to express support or dissatisfaction with how their city is being run until Election Year 2019.

There are also contested races in five out of six ward races on the City Council and a five-way field for three at-large seats. Two of those council seats are open – in Ward 3 and one at-large – and it's certain they will be occupied by new councillors in January.

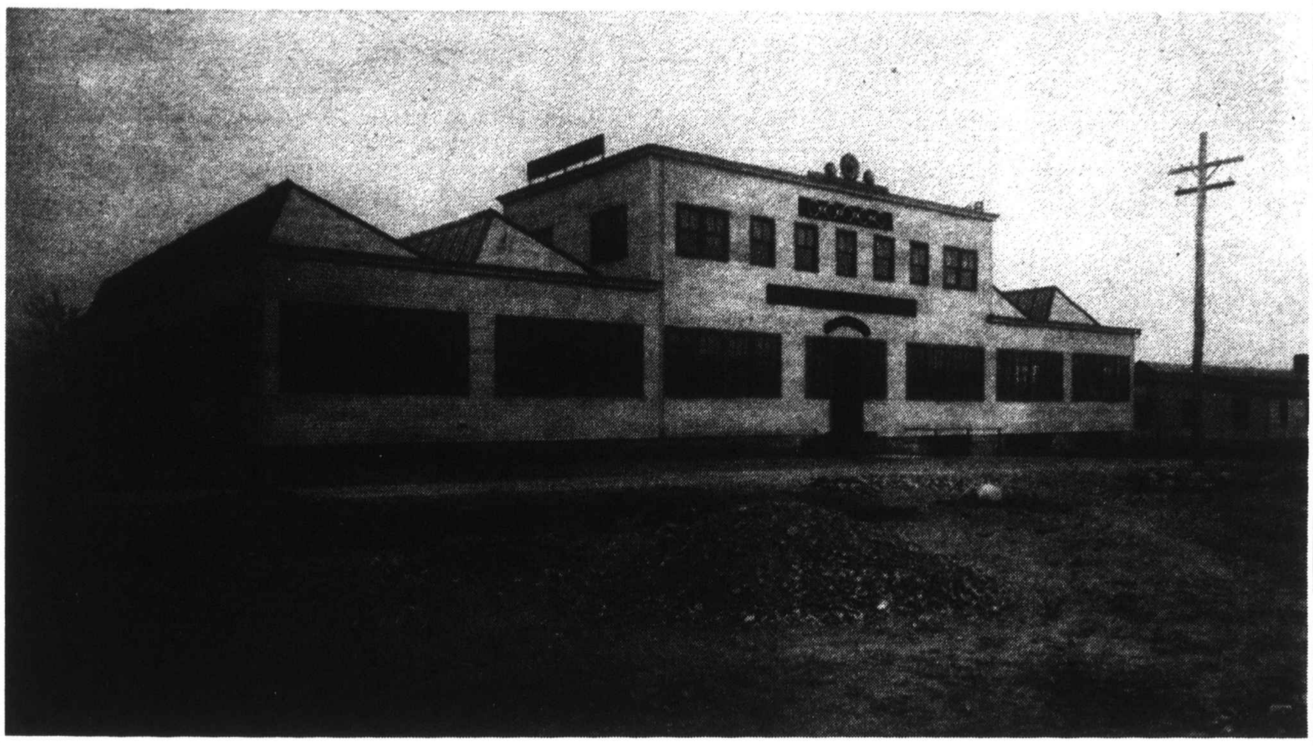
Tuesday, Nov. 3 – Election Day – will be here before you know it.

Candidates should offer specific solutions to issues facing the city and the wards. Provide a vision for how you will lead. Focus on the city's future.

And voters should be engaged in the campaigns and become educated.

Most off all, we encourage everyone to become part of the political process. Register to vote if you haven't. And take the time to cast a ballot Nov. 3.

Scenes From Yesterday



THIS IS A 1906 real photo postcard of the first Boston Gear Works factory on Hayward Street in Norfolk Downs. In 1905 company owner Frank Burgess, who lived in Wollaston, had moved some of his gear-cutting business from Boston to a small building on what is now Burgess Street. The next year he built this modern wooden factory building and moved the rest of his company into it. Over the next several decades the company's business grew so that its presence in North Quincy included over 20 acres of land and nearly 3/4 million square feet of manufacturing, warehousing and office space. Then in 1970 new corporate ownership began downsizing the company and 20 years later the last of the manufacturing portion of the business ceased at this location. That ended an 85-year period over which Boston Gear's factory provided thousands of jobs for workers from all over the greater Quincy area. Today, all the property in North Quincy has been sold and the company is now owned by Altra Industrial Motion of Braintree. But, 138 years after its founding in Boston in 1877, Boston Gear is still in business manufacturing gears at its factory that is now in Charlotte, North Carolina. BU Professor, Senator To Speak At Gas Leaks Workshop

Quincy Climate Action Network will sponsor a workshop Wednesday, Oct. 7 on a leading source of greenhouse gas emissions in Massachusetts: leaks from underground natural gas pipes.

In Quincy alone, 613 leaks have been reported. The two-hour workshop, for both municipal workers and the public, will start at 9:30 a.m. at the main branch of the Thomas Crane Public Library, Washington Street, Quincy Center.

Speakers will include Nathan Phillips, a Boston University professor of earth and environment, who will talk about his groundbreaking research on gas leaks. Also speaking will be state Sen. Jamie Eldridge, from Acton, who will discuss legislation he has filed on Beacon Hill to encourage gas utilities to repair leaks more promptly.

A manager from the Cambridge DPW will speak on how cities and towns can coordinate with utilities to hasten repairs. Officials from several utilities have also been invited.

Gas leaks account for 10 percent of the Massachusetts carbon footprint, as much as all the state's factories and retail stores combined, said Audrey Schulman, president of the Home Energy Efficiency Team, a Cambridge nonprofit that is helping organize the workshop along with QCAN and the Metropolitan Area Planning Council. According to Schulman, about 2.7 percent of natural gas in Massachusetts is lost to leaks, a loss that is charged to ratepayers.

Cities and towns should care about gas leaks not only because of their contribution to climate change but also because they kill street trees, at a cost of $3,000 to $6,000 per mile of roadway, Schulman added. In addition, they increase ground-level ozone, a major cause of asthma.

Hi!

My name is Abigail Bradbury Coughlin and I am a 5th grader at Squantum Elementary School.

Last week I had the opportunity to go to my first Red Sox Game with my family thanks to the generosity of a friend giving tickets to my dad. The Red Sox were winning when we left in the end of the 7th inning but when we got home they lost.

What I learned from this experience of traveling into Boston was that there are a lot of homeless people out there. As we walked to the game we saw a number of homeless people. As we left the game there was this one homeless man, a veteran, is sign said and he gave me the biggest smile.

It made me wonder first why is he homeless if he served our country, we need to do more we can't just forget about them, they fought for the freedom we have.

Second how can he smile at me when he doesn't have a house. Wow there are so many people out there that have houses and don't smile.

A smile goes a long way.

His smile left a lasting impression on me and I now have a mission to help the homeless whenever I can and especially veterans.

If you can help too that would be great. There are all types of programs, even if you don't have money. You can recycle phones and eyeglasses for veterans. Donate food to food pantries or warm clothing for the winter.

Homeless can always use warm mittens and hats.

Among the recommendations contained in the reports was a recommendation for the establishment of an office of business manager.

SHIPYARD BIDS FOR HIGH SPEED CARGO SHIPS

Donald D. Strohmeier, vice-president in charge of shipbuilding for Bethlehem Steel Corp, disclosed that if Bethlehem is the successful low bidder for the construction of high-speed cargo ships, the Fore River Shipyard will be considered to construct some of the cargo ships.

Strohmeier pointed out that workers are now available at the Quincy Shipyard to do this work.

WOLLASTON BEACH, early 20th century, will be part of walking tour Saturday, Oct. 3 from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Collection of Historic New England

Wollaston Walking Tour Saturday

Historic New England invites the public to take part in a Wollaston Walking Tour on Saturday, Oct. 3 from 11 a.m. until 1 p.m.

In 1770, Edward Pierce, a Dorchester carpenter, built a mansion for Col. Josiah Quincy. Originally surrounded by fields and pasture, the estate's boundaries once encompassed several hundred acres and reached from what is now Hancock Street to Quincy Bay. When the house was built, the area around it, now a densely populated neighborhood known as Wollaston, was very rural.

This walking tour illustrates how the area evolved over a 300-year period. Explore Moswetuset Hummock, the seat of the ruling chief Chickatawbut; see Quincy Bay and Boston Harbor through the eyes of Col. Josiah Quincy and General George Washington; and witness the development of an early twentieth-century middle class neighborhood that reflects a range of architectural styles. Tour Historic New England's 1770 Josiah Quincy House following the walking tour.

The tour departs from the Moswetuset Hummock parking area, East Squantum Street, near junction with Quincy Shore Drive.

The tour is $5 for Quincy residents and Historic New England members, $10 for nonmembers.

Registration is recommended. For more information or to register, call 617-994-5930 or visit HistoricNewEngland.org.

Girl Scouts Earn Animal Helpers Badge

More than fifty Girl Scouts from Quincy and as far away as Westford gathered at Pageant Field recently to learn about different working dogs. The girls earned the Animal Helpers badge at the event.

Judy Peacott, from FriendshipWorks, Inc., Pet-Pals Program, introduced the girls to her two therapy dogs, Fergus and Liam. She explained how animals are temperament tested before they can become licensed as therapy animals. Peacott said that she fell in love with this work the first time she and Fergus visited a nursing home.

Tom Rich, from Canines for Disabled Kids, brought his demonstration hearing dog, Millhouse, to teach the girls about service dogs. He explained what types of things service animals do for various people with disabilities; and how service animals go through extensive training before they can be placed with someone.

Judy Topping and Sue Webb, of Search Dogs Northeast, brought their search and rescue dogs to teach the girls trail safety, and how their dogs are trained to find missing people. They demonstrated how Black Magic, an air sniffing Labrador Retriever, and Suki, a Bloodhound, work in different ways to follow scent trails. They hid Quincy Girl Scout Amanda Powers in the woods next to Pageant Field. Both dogs found Amanda within minutes.

After each of the presentations, the girls got to meet and pat the dogs. The event was organized by volunteer Dorri Condon. As a community service project, the girls in Quincy Troop 74154 collected donations of dog toys, treats and training materials for the three agencies.

Steak Tips Over Mashed Potatoes

By MARIE

Even though some of the summer days were very hot, when the family got together, we still had to eat.

It may sound crazy, but one of the weekends some of us were together on the Cape, I brought mashed potatoes as my contribution. Who doesn't like mashed potatoes?

The grandchildren especially enjoyed them, and they were pleased and surprised to have them.

I had found a recipe where they used them as part of the barbecue.

MASHED POTATOES

3 pounds of potatoes (skin on or off) butter cream or milk
salt and pepper

There are lots of ways of making mashed potatoes, with plain yogurt or sour cream- but I just made them with butter and milk and then heated them when it was time to eat.

As the steak tips were on the grill, I heated the mashed potatoes.

When the steak was done, the potatoes were placed on the bottom of the dish and then the steak over them. It was such a delicious combination.

Watercress And Baby Arugula

By SUZIE

Here is a wonderful recipe from Dr. Perricone, who is a skin care expert. He carries a line of skin care products and recommends certain supplements for healthy and youthful skin. He also understands the relationship between what we eat and how our skin looks.

Here is a recipe that contains healthy fats, greens, and protein. If you are interested in learning more, he has written many books on this subject and they also have some really great recipes. Hope you enjoy this one as much as I do. This serves eight so you might want to half it if that is too much for you.

Watercress and Baby Arugula with Chicken, Goat Cheese and Pecans

(Serves 8)

Ingredients

1 cup pecans
1/2 cup plus 2 tablespoons olive oil
Salt
1/4 cup plus 2 tablespoons sherry vinegar
4 teaspoons Dijon mustard
1/2 teaspoon dried thyme
1/2 teaspoon dried oregano
Freshly ground black pepper
1 cooked rotisserie chicken, warm or at room temperature
9 cups loosely packed watercress, cut into 2- to 3-inch pieces
6 cups fresh baby arugula
3 cups torn fresh dandelion greens
1/2 red onion, sliced lengthwise into very thin strips
1 cup brined olives, such as nicoise or kalamata
1/3 cup brined capers, drained
8 ounces fresh goat cheese (may substitute feta cheese)

Preparation

Preheat the oven to 350 degrees F.

In a small bowl, combine the pecans with the 2 tablespoons olive oil and a good pinch of salt. Spread the pecans in a single layer on a baking sheet and toast for 10 to 14 minutes. Remove and set aside to cool slightly.

While the nuts are cooling, prepare the dressing: Pour the remaining 1/2 cup olive oil into a medium bowl. Whisk in the sherry vinegar, then the mustard. Whisk in the thyme, oregano, 1/2 teaspoon salt, and several grinds of pepper. Taste, and adjust the seasoning as desired.

Remove the legs and breasts from the chicken. Remove the skin, and chop the meat into coarse cubes. Set aside.

Combine the watercress, arugula, and dandelion greens in a large bowl. Toss in the red onion, olives, and capers, and then dress with 1/2 cup of dressing. Toss the salad, adding more dressing as desired. Toss in the cubed chicken.

Divide the salad among 8 plates. Crumble the goat cheese in large chunks over the salads, and then sprinkle with the pecans. Serve immediately.

Greek Feta Casserole

By MARIE

It seems like so many people are using feta cheese in so many ways-from salads to casseroles like the one in today's column.

My neighbor Janet made it for a dinner recently, and if you like lamb, you will enjoy this recipe.

GREEK FETA CASSEROLE

2 cups hot water
3 ounces (3/4) cups elbow pasta
1/2 cup crumbled feta cheese
1/4 cup milk
3/4 pound ground lamb
1 tablespoon crushed onion
8 ounce can tomato sauce
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
2 tablespoons vegetable oil

Cook the elbows, and set aside.

In a bowl, combine the eggs, feta cheese and milk. Add the drained pasta, tossing gently. Spread pasta mixture evenly in an 8 x 8 inch baking dish.

In the hot oil sauté the onion and lamb and cook until the meat gets brown. Stir in the tomato sauce and cinnamon and heat through.

Spread the meat mixture over the pasta mixture in the baking dish. Sprinkle a bit more of feta cheese over the top. Bake in a pre-heated 375-degree oven for 25 minutes or ~~until top~~ is bubbly. Cut in squares - delicious.

Columns up to 22 feet in length and 3 feet in diameter could also be turned and polished at the mill. At the turn of the century about 80 men were employed consisting of quarrymen, stonecutters, machine operators and engineers all skilled granite workers.

Christopher Spencer Cast In 'The 39 Steps'

Quincy's Christopher Spencer stars as "Goon 2" in The Company Theatre's production of Patrick Barlow's fast-paced comedy-thriller The 39 Steps, from Oct. 9 - 25, at The Company Theatre Centre for the Arts, 30 Accord Park Drive, Norwell.

This fast-paced whodunit draws its magic from the suspense of a Hitchcock masterpiece film combined with a spy novel, and a dash of Monty Python tossed in for theatrical good measure. The comedy-thriller casts only four actors portraying over 150 zany characters in a whirlwind tale based on the 1935 film classic. This typically British affair runs the gamut with an onstage plane crash, a train roof top chase, and a nation-wide manhunt spiraling to a death defying finale.

Tickets range from $24 to $26, group ticket prices are available. Show times at 7:30 or 8 p.m. from Thursday through Saturday, Sunday matinee performances will be held at 3 p.m.

For a complete performance schedule or to order tickets, visit www.companytheatre.com.

Yes Or No To GMOs? - A Message From The Health Dept.

By RUTH JONES
BSN, RN, BC, CP-FS

RUTH JONES

GMOs (or "genetically modified organisms") are living organisms whose genetic material has been manipulated artificially in a laboratory through genetic engineering. This relatively new science creates unstable combinations of plant, animal, bacteria and viral genes that do not occur in nature or through traditional crossbreeding processes. The technology is often called "modern biotechnology" or "gene technology", sometimes also "recombinant DNA technology" or "genetic engineering". It allows designated individual genes to be transferred from one organism into another, also between non-related species. Such methods are used to create GM plants which are then used to grow GM food crops.

GM foods are developed and marketed because there is some supposed advantage either to the producer or consumer of these foods. This is meant to translate into a product with a lower price, greater benefit (in terms of durability or nutritional value) or both. Virtually all commercial GMOs are engineered to withstand direct application of herbicide and/or to produce an insecticide. The initial objective for developing plants based on GM organisms was to improve crop protection. Another intention was for the production of bigger, better, faster, crops (corn, soybean) and animals who feed on these (cows, poultry, pigs, and fish). The GM crops presently on the market are mainly directed at an increased level of crop protection, through the introduction of resistance against plant diseases caused by insects or viruses or through increased tolerance towards herbicides. In the meantime, a growing body of verification connects GMOs with health problems, environmental destruction and impairment and violation of farmers' and consumers' rights.

In the U.S., GMOs are in as much as 80% of conventional processed food. For consumers, it can be problematic to stay up-to-date on food ingredients that are at-risk of being genetically modified. This is occurring because the list of at-risk agricultural ingredients is habitually changing.

The most at risk crops and products are, corn, corn flour, corn meal, corn oil, cornstarch, corn gluten and corn syrup, sweeteners such as fructose, dextrose, and glucose, modified food starch, soy, soy flour, lecithin, protein, isolate, and isoflavone, vegetable oil and vegetable protein, canola oil (also called rapeseed oil), cotton, cottonseed oil, sugar (anything not listed as 100% cane sugar), and GM sugar beet sugar that just recently appeared in the food supply. Some of the common ingredients derived from

There are several main issues of concern for human health from GM foods. First is allergenicity, the transfer of genes from commonly allergenic foods, thus possibly creating a new protein product that possesses the same allergenic properties. Secondly is gene transfer from GM foods to cells of the body or to bacteria in the gastrointestinal tract. This transferred genetic material has the risk of adversely affecting human health, and would be particularly relevant if antibiotic resistance genes, used in creating GMOs, were to be transferred. Lastly, outcrossing, the movement of genes from GM plants into conventional crops or related varieties in the wild, as well as the mixing of crops derived from conventional seeds with those grown using GM crops. These issues could have an indirect and critical effect on food safety and food security.

The fact that GMO's have the capability to escape and potentially introduce the engineered genes into wild populations, the endurance of the gene after the GMO has been harvested, the susceptibility of non-target organisms (e.g. insects which are not pests) to the gene product, the stability of the gene, the decline in the spectrum of other plants including a loss of biodiversity, and increased use of chemicals in agriculture, are all enormously troubling.

Most developed nations do not consider GMOs to be harmless. In more than 60 countries around the world, including Australia, Japan, and all of the countries in the European Union, there are significant restrictions or complete bans on the production and sale of GMOs.

In the U.S., the government has approved GMOs based on studies conducted by the same corporations that created them and profit from their sale. Many legislators have ties to Monsanto, one of the most powerful and influential conglomerates spearheading the production of GMOs.

The pervasiveness of GMOs in our lives is astounding. Beginning in 1980 Monsanto patented Round Up weed killer. In 1996 it began selling roundup ready soybeans, genetically manipulated to withstand and survive harsh herbicides. At that time 2% of all the soybeans in US contained their patent gene. By 2008 90% of soybeans in US contained it. Presently, in the U.S., GMOs are in as much as 80% of conventional processed food. Simultaneously, seed saving, the practice of saving seeds or other reproductive material from vegetables, grain, herbs, and flowers for use from year to year, began to diminish and has virtually disappeared in this country today. Subsequently very little public seeds are available anymore. Farmers complained that Monsanto investigated saved seeds and any contamination by GMO seeds and sued for patent infringement. This practice has been thought to be the cause of the demise of many farms in the U.S.

So what can we do to avoid GMOs? Read Labels. Seek products that are specifically labeled as non-GMO or GMO-free. Buy food labeled 100% organic. The U.S. and Canadian governments do not permit manufacturers to label something 100% organic if that food has been genetically modified or been fed genetically modified feed. Keep in mind that organic food is traditionally more expensive and different in appearance from conventional products. Also, just because something says "organic," it does not mean that it doesn't contain GMOs. Actually, it can still contain up to 30% GMOs, so be sure the label says 100% organic. Recognize fruit and vegetable label numbers. If it is a 4-digit number, the food is conventionally produced. If it is a 5-digit number beginning with an 8, it is GM. However, do not trust that GM foods will have a PLU identifying it as such, because PLU labeling is optional. If it is a 5-digit number beginning with a 9, it is organic.

Shop locally. Although more than half of all GM foods are produced in the U.S., most of it comes from large industrial farms. So you have a better chance of buying non-GMO products from local farmer's markets. Buy whole foods. Choose foods that you can cook and prepare yourself, rather than foods that are processed or prepared (e.g., anything that comes in a box or a bag, including fast food). Grow your own food. This way, you know exactly what was grown and what went into growing it.

If you're looking to stay away from GMOs in the meat you eat , make sure the cattle were 100% grass-fed or pasture-fed (sometimes referred to as grass-finished or pasture-finished). The same applies to meat from other herbivores, such as sheep. With nonruminants like pigs and poultry that cannot be 100% grass-fed, it's better to look for meat that is 100% organic.

If you are passionate about the GMO predicament, speak up, talk to your legislators, tell congress to enact and enforce more stringent food safety laws.

You can make a difference and can change the world with every bite.

Quincy Hearing Aid Celebrates 1-Year Anniversary Under New Ownership

Quincy Hearing Aid, 1515 Hancock St., recently celebrated its one-year anniversary under new ownership with a ribbon cutting celebration at their recently renovated Hancock Street location in Quincy Center.

Among those attending the event were Mayor Thomas Koch, patients of the practice, members of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce and other business partners.

Quincy Hearing Aid, a full-time audiology and hearing aid practice, was established in 1971 by hearing instrument specialist Robert Karas. Karas retired in August of 2014 after 44 years of service to the community.

Dr. Janice Powis, a board certified and licensed Audiologist, acquired the practice and has continued to see existing patients while managing to significantly grow the practice during her first year of ownership. While the practice's commitment to excellent patient care continues to be the focus, there have been a few notable updates to the space and philosophy of care.

In addition to refreshing the space to compliment the recent development efforts in Quincy Center, state-of-the art equipment including a full-sized sound booth have been added to accurately diagnose and treat hearing loss.

"I am so honored for the opportunity to serve the hearing healthcare needs of Quincy and Boston's South Shore. We are the only practice in Quincy dispensing hearing aids that is run and owned by a doctor of audiology," says Dr. Powis. "Our patients receive the benefit of doctoral-level expertise accompanied by a whole body and mind approach to treating hearing loss."

Dr. Powis is currently evaluating expansion opportunities in order to make her services more widely available to patients on the South Shore and in Greater Boston.

Quincy Hearing Aid has provided personalized hearing solutions on the South Shore and surrounding communities of Metro Boston since 1971. Quincy Hearing Aid specializes in diagnostic hearing tests, hearing aid technology and accessories, hearing preservation, tinnitus management, auditory rehabilitation, and customized musician's devices.

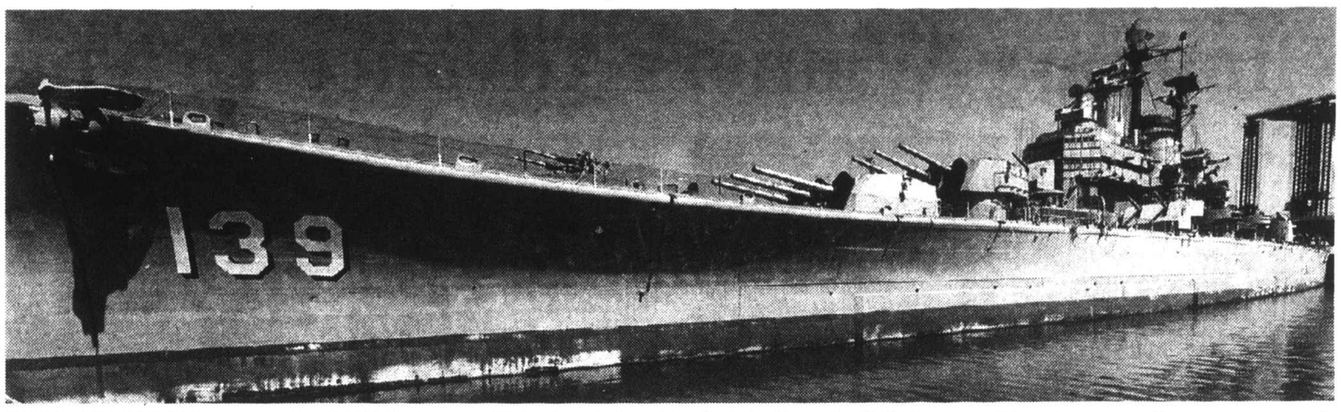
Quincy-Built Salem May Be Headed For Fall River

By SCOTT JACKSON



QUINCY-BUILT heavy cruiser USS Salem could be headed to Battleship Cove in Fall River - either temporarily or permanently.

- Quincy Sun File Photo/Robert Bosworth

The plan to relocate the USS Salem to an East Boston marina may be scuttled and the ship could instead be moved, either temporarily or permanently, to Battleship Cove in Fall River.

The USS Salem (CA-139) had operated as a museum ship in the Fore River Shipyard since 1995 after it was brought back to Quincy the year before. The heavy cruiser was built at the Quincy shipyard and launched from there in 1947.

The ship's owner had planned to move it to the Boston Harbor Shipyard & Marina in East Boston as soon as this year because of upgrades needed to the pier in the Fore River Shipyard, which prompted the MBTA to close the pier in September 2013. The MBTA has since sold the pier to construction magnate Jay Cashman.

The plan to relocate the ship to East Boston hit a hitch, however, because the pier there is also in need of work. Dan Noonan, a co-owner of the Boston Harbor Shipyard & Marina, said it could cost upwards of $1.5 million to fix the pier.

"I think the chances of the Salem relocating here are dwindling," he said Monday.

A message left Monday for Michael Condon, executive director of the organization that owns the Salem, was not returned.

The East Boston marina has five piers and a 1,000-foot long pier, the shipyard's longest, was going to be used for the Salem. The owners of the marina have been rebuilding piers there for the past 16 years and had planned upgrades to that specific pier, but additional work would be needed if it were to accommodate the Salem.

"We were fixing it to accommodate smaller vessels," Noonan said. "The Salem would need an entirely different program."

The pier is currently used for commercial purposes, including shipping cars to the Caribbean, which Noonan said provides $200,000 in yearly revenue. Noonan said he was willing to forgo that revenue to host the Salem – the marina is already home to the non-profit Nantucket lightship and he comes from a military family – but he cannot do that and pay for the pier work.

"We'd basically be giving all the revenue up," Noonan said, noting the Salem would not have been charged rent as a non-profit.

"We can't give up $200,000 a year and put up $1.5 million for it. We can't do both."

Brad King, the executive director of Battleship Cove, said he and the owner of the Salem have had preliminary talks about relocating the cruiser to the site in Fall River.

"They're very exploratory at the moment," King said Monday of the discussions with the owner of the Salem. "You can't just move a ship. They are so many things to consider."

King said there are several logistical problems that would need to be addressed before the Salem could move to Battleship Cove.

"The cost of towing is not a major concern. You've got to consider whether it will be permanently or temporarily moored," King said, noting a temporary berth has different requirements than a permanent one.

"It's quite a logistical problem. I'm not sure we have the electrical capacity to hook them up to our own system."

Battleship Cove is already home to two other Quincy-built ships: USS Massachusetts (BB-19) and USS Joseph P. Kennedy Jr. (DD-850).

The Massachusetts was launched in 1941 and saw action in both the Atlantic and Pacific theaters of World War II and was awarded 11 Battle Stars. The ship was scheduled to be sold for scrap in 1962 but Bay State residents raised funds to preserve the Massachusetts and it was donated by the U.S. Navy in 1965 and opened as a museum ship in August of that year.

The Kennedy was commissioned in December 1945. The ship was used for bombardment duties during the Korean War, took part in the blockade of Cuba during the Cuban Missile Crisis, and was a recovery vessel for the Gemini spacecraft program. Battleship Cove acquired the destroyer in 1974. The ship was used in the 2000 Kevin Costner film "Thirteen Days," about the missile crisis.

The Salem is longer than either of those ships, King noted, which will also have to be taken into consideration. The Massachusetts is 681 feet long and 108 feet wide at its widest point. The Salem is 717 feet long with a 77-foot maximum width.

A Des Moines-class heavy cruiser, the Salem was built at the Fore River Shipyard and launched in 1947. Two years later the Salem was commissioned and it would serve as the flagship of the U.S. Navy's Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean Sea in the 1950s during the Cold War before being decommissioned in 1959. It remained berthed in a reserve fleet for decades until being brought back home to the shipyard and outfitted as a museum ship.

As a museum ship the Salem was known for hosting overnight programs for Boy Scouts and other community groups.

votes or 40.87 percent. Phelan was second with 3,514 votes or 21.53 percent. Councillor at-large finished third – 448 votes behind Phelan – with a total of 3,066 votes or 18.79 percent. School Committeewoman Anne Mahoney was fourth with 3,037 votes or 18.61 percent.

Koch won 28 of 31 precincts and carried all precincts in Wards 2, 3, 4 and 6. Gutro was the winner in Precincts 3 and 5 in Ward 5 and Phelan won Ward 1 Precinct 2 in Germantown.

Turnout citywide was 30.21 percent with 16,349 voters out of 54,122 registered going to the polls.

Gutro, who vacated his councillor at-large seat to run for mayor, will finish his term but will not return to the council in January.

Mahoney, who unsuccessfully challenged Koch in 2011 – is midway through her third school committee term. She will remain on the school board and will have to decide whether to seek a fourth school term in 2017.

The Koch-Phelan matchup is the third time the pair have opposed one another for the mayor's seat. Phelan – who unseated former Mayor James Sheets in 2001 and was elected to two more two-year terms – was defeated by Koch in 2007. Koch turned aside Phelan in a mayoral rematch in 2009 for a second term and defeated Mahoney in 2011. He was unopposed for a fourth term in 2013 and is now seeking a fifth term.

Fresh off their preliminary election wins, both Koch and Phelan said they were pleased by the results. The two mayoral nominees also said they are ready to hit the campaign trail and focus on the issues as well as their records.

"I was very pleased with the votes last night," Koch said the day after the preliminary. "It was a difficult several weeks. We worked hard and we had a great team.

"I look forward to beginning to debate and have a dialogue with Mr. Phelan. It's something both of us are familiar with . . . we both have very clear records and I look forward to discussing the contrast between those records."

Phelan said he was thrilled with the results of the preliminary election and credited Gutro and Mahoney for the campaigns they ran.

"I'm thrilled. I was able to advance against an extremely strong field of candidates," Phelan said. "Doug Gutro and Anne Mahoney were worthy opponents that should be commended for standing up for change in the city. I congratulate them and all their supporters on a campaign well run."

Phelan said he would continue to focus on the issues raised during the preliminary campaign – increases in property taxes and water bills as well as overdevelopment in neighborhoods, among them – moving forward into the Nov. 3 election.

"The issues haven't changed," Phelan said. "Doug, Anne and myself have all touched on them. They're the issues people have talked about on their doorsteps. The city is spending too much on things we don't need and the things we do need have not been managed properly.

"I am going to continue to do what I've been doing," Phelan said. "Listening to people and providing them an option of a city that is well managed and lives within its means, cares about its neighborhoods and doesn't let development go unchecked."

Koch said the election should be about the future of the city.

"To me, it's about the future and how we deal with issues in our city," the mayor said, adding that his administration has made strides in the ongoing opiate epidemic as well as investment in schools, infrastructure, and public safety.

Koch said that as mayor his schedule is "chock full" over the next five weeks, but he will continue to go out and meet residents of the city.

"I'm going to continue what I've been doing," Koch said. "Door knocking, coffee hours, and meeting with residents to get the message out."

Koch and Phelan were not the only preliminary election winners Sept. 24. Voters in Wards 2 and 3 also nominated two candidates for councillor that will appear with other contested races on the Nov. 3rd ballot.

In Ward 2, incumbent Brad Croall and challenger James Connors were nominated for Ward 2 councillor. Croall won all six precincts in Ward 2 and polled 1,466 votes (73.08 percent). Connors – making his first bid for local office – received 425 votes (21.19 percent). Finishing third was political newcomer Gulistan Malik with 110 votes (5.48 percent).

In the race to succeed retiring councillor Kevin Coughlin in Ward 3, Ian Cain and Karl Roos won nominations and advanced to the Nov. 3 ballot. Cain, a first-time candidate, was first with 1,099 votes (41.32 percent) and Roos – a past school committee candidate – was second with 858 votes (32.26 percent.) Finishing third was community activist Sandra Verhault with 696 votes or 26.17 percent.

Cain won four of five precincts in Ward 3 – Precincts 2, 3, 4 and 5. His biggest margin of victory was 146 votes in Ward 3 Precinct 4 (Montclair School polling place) where he received 375 votes to Verhault's 229 votes. Roos was third in that precinct with 214 votes.

Roos was first in Ward 3 Precinct 1 (Covenant Congregational Church polling precinct) by 17 votes over Cain (227 to 210).

Croall, Connors, Cain and Roos were upbeat following their preliminary election wins and said they were looking forward to the campaign leading up to Nov. 3.

Croall, who works for John Hancock Retirement Services, said his finish in the preliminary is reaffirmation Ward 2 is headed in the right direction.

"Over the last three-and-a-half years, I've worked with a lot of great people and done a lot of positive things for the district. (The preliminary election) vote is a reaffirmation things in the district are trending in a positive direction," Croall said.

"I am grateful people took the time out of their lives to support me. I am humbled by the outcome."

The major issue in the race, according to Croall, is the ability to deliver services to constituents.

"The big issue is always remaining in touch with people, following up on people's issues and making sure their problems get resolved in a timely manner," he said. "I am going to continue to work hard during the campaign. I am blessed with a really supportive group of people," Croall added.

Connors, the school system's senior custodian, said he feels confident heading into final election after finishing second in the preliminary.

"I feel very confident. I'm a first-time candidate and I think I did very well," Connors said. "I'm very happy for all the people who came out and voted and all the people who helped me."

During the run up to the Nov. 3 final election, Connors said he intends to hit the streets and meet the voters in his ward.

"I plan to do a lot of door knocking. I want to meet as many people as I can personally," Connors said. "I believe that it is important instead of just leaving a piece of literature on a door."

Connors identified several issues he plans to focus on in the election.

"The downtown will be an issue for sure – the downtown development – obviously the dugs in our community and the streets and sidewalks," Connors said.

Cain, who works for a Cambridge-based technology company, said he was very excited by the results of the preliminary balloting.

"It was a wonderful, wonderful day. I am very excited by the results of the turnout," Cain said. "It was a difficult choice for the voters."

Cain said the main issue of the race is "mainline constituent services," an area he commended Coughlin for.

"I've been knocking on thousands of doors," Cain said. "Everyone says the same thing – Kevin Coughlin, the longtime city councillor, was very responsive. I have to maintain that same level of service.

"It's about streets. It's about sidewalks. It's about trees. It's about being a liaison to those basic services for whoever wins."

Cain said he will continue to meet with residents as the Nov. 3 election draws near.

"During the next few weeks, I'll be out on the streets again knocking on doors and meeting residents, putting out some mailers, and I'm planning a couple of events," Cain said.

Roos, a business teacher at Norfolk County Agricultural High School who previously worked in the private sector, called advancing to the Nov. 3 election a great win.

"It was a great win. I am thrilled to get through and I appreciate the effort from everyone," Roos said. "I had two great competitors in Sandy and Ian and I don't expect that to change. Voters will have to make a choice."

Moving forward, Roos said he plans to emphasize both his experience and work in the community.

"The big issue is who is going to be the best city councillor – who has the experience and shown a commitment to the community over the years, who is committed to the job of being a city councillor and doesn't want to use the position as a stepping stone," Roos said.

"It's about getting out that message," Roos added when asked what he would focus on over the next month.

Coughlin – who is retiring from the council – told The Sun he will not endorse Cain or Roos for the seat he has held for nearly 14 years. He said he reached out to all three candidates in the preliminary and said he would not try to influence the race in Ward 3.

"I'm friends with all three candidates," Coughlin told The Sun. "I promised each of them I would not influence their race. I thought each one of them was serious and passionate about wanting to serve and do the right thing. I respect that and understand how difficult it is to run a campaign."

Here's how the rest of the ballot will look on Tuesday, Nov. 3:

- Councillor at-Large: Incumbent Joseph Finn, 15 Williams St.; incumbent Michael McFarland, 27 Village Dr.; School Committeeman David McCarthy, 48 Whitney Rd.; School Committeeman Noel DiBona, 70 Chickatabot Rd. and political newcomer Nina Liang, 2 Williams Street.

McCarthy is vacating his School Committee seat to run at-large. DiBona was elected two years ago and is mid-way through a four-term term.

The five candidates for councillor at-large are vying for three at-large seats.

- Ward 1: Incumbent Margaret Laforest, 236 Rock Island Rd. and challenger John McCone, 111 Darrow St.
- Ward 5: incumbent Kirsten Hughes, 116 Willow Ave. and challenger Gina Ostis, 57 Estabrook Rd.
- Ward 6: incumbent Brian McNamee, 94 Newbury Ave. and challenger William Harris, 74 Ashworth.

There are also three candidates on the ballot for three school committee seats. They are incumbent Paul Bregoli, 80 Willow Ave.; incumbent Kathryn Hubley, 44 Marion St.; and political newcomber James DeAmicis, 66 Campbell St.

A fourth school committee candidate who filed papers – former QHS principal and School Committeeman Frank Santoro – dropped out of the race after the filing deadline in August.

Because of the hotly contested mayor's race and city council races, City Clerk Joseph Shea is predicting turnout of 44 to 46 percent for the Nov. 3 election.

According to campaign finance reports filed for the Sept. 1-15 reporting period, Koch has a sizeable lead in campaign cash heading into the general election in less than five weeks.

As of Sept. 15, Koch has a balance of $154,111. He raised $35,774 and spent $79,197 during the first two weeks of September.

Phelan's campaign finance report for the Sept. 1-15 reporting period shows a balance of $14,423. He raised $14,771 and spent $27,855 during the first two weeks of September.

The next campaign finance report filing deadline is today (Oct. 1) and would show activity from Sept. 16 to Sept. 30.

Group Hopes To Save Wollaston Theatre

Nearly 1,500 Have Joined 'Save The Wolly' Facebook Page To Spare Landmark From Demolition

By SCOTT JACKSON

A group of local residents is hoping to save the Wollaston Theatre from its expected date with a wrecking ball this fall.

Miao Kun "Michael" Fang – the owner of the 89-year-old building – hopes to demolish the Beale Street theater this fall because of structural damage sustained during the previous two winters, his spokesman, Stephen Crawford, confirmed late last month.

In the weeks since that news went public, a Facebook page entitled "Save the Wollaston 'Wolly' Theatre" has received nearly 1,500 likes and a Change.org petition to save the theater has been signed 887 times as of Tuesday morning. Jeffrey Martinous, a Stedman Street resident, helped organize the Facebook page and started the petition. He said the Wollaston Theatre deserves to be treated like a rare and unique item and is worth the fight to save.

"There are so few theaters like The Wolly remaining anywhere. Theaters such as The Wolly should be treated like all rare, unique items. Some things are worth the fight to save; The Wolly is one of those things. How ashamed of ourselves are we going to be if sometime in the near future we're all watching a wrecking ball swinging across the Wollaston sky smashing The Wolly to dust? That will be an atrocity indeed," Martinous wrote in an email.

"John Adams, John Quincy Adams, Samuel Adams, John Hancock and all the rest of our Founding Fathers are watching us right now, wondering if we have the mettle and perseverance to save the Wollaston 'Wolly' Theatre."

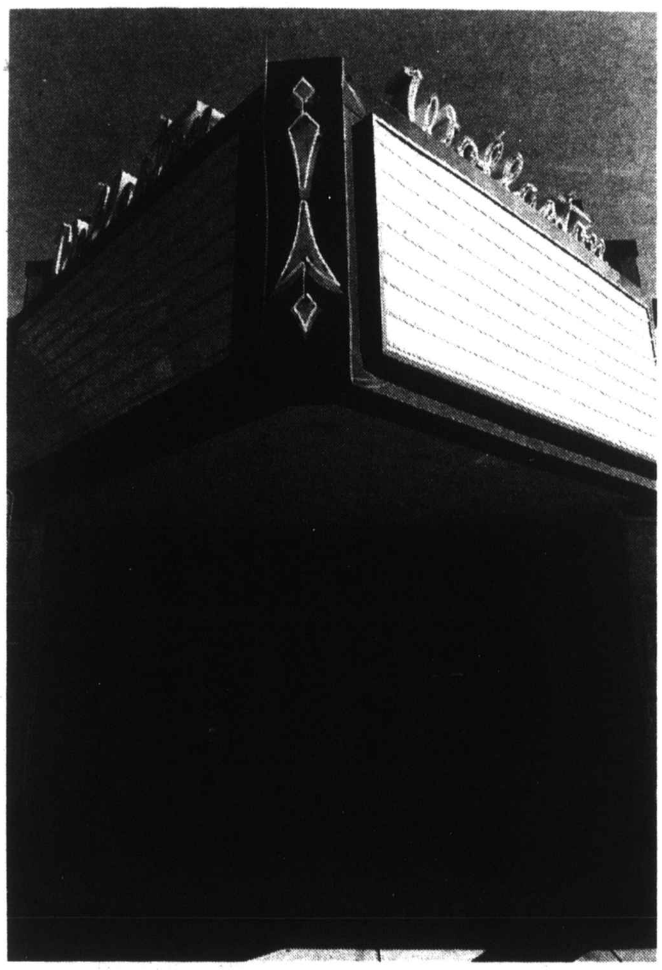
Martinous, in a phone interview, said he and other organizers of the Facebook group hope to set up meetings with residents in the near future; group leaders have also reached out to city officials. The group's first goal is to make city officials aware that preserving the building is a priority for the community and then the group hopes to persuade the owner to consider selling the site.

"What we're hoping to accomplish is something to save the theater. We would like to get enough people involved that the city realizes it's a priority," Martinous said. "We hope to get the current owner to be receptive to selling it. If he is, we would put together a plan to purchase it and refurbish it."

To do that, Martinous said the group would establish a non-profit to raise funds and also begin applying for grants from various organizations that emphasize historic preservation. The group may not be able to immediately raise $6 or $7 million, the estimated cost for renovating the theater when Street-Works opted out of an agreement to purchase it six years ago, but Martinous hopes to raise enough money to at least partially restore and reopen the building while continuing to raise additional funds.

"Hopefully we would raise enough to get it to a point where it could be used again and we could keep mining for grants to restore it to its former glory," Martinous said.

Crawford on Monday said he could not comment on the group's efforts. He did note, however, that Fang has begun reaching out to elected officials in the city.



A FACEBOOK PAGE entitled "Save the Wollaston 'Wolly' Theatre" has received nearly 1,500 likes and a Change.org petition to save the theater has been signed 887 times as of Tuesday morning. The building's owner plans to demolish the landmark building due to structural concerns.

Cultural Council To Unveil $2.8M In Funding Friday

The Massachusetts Cultural Council will unveil $2.8 million in funding for non-profit arts, humanities and science organizations, communities and education programs in Greater Boston tomorrow (Friday) at 9 a.m. at the Adams National Historical Park.

The celebration of the $2.8 million in funding will be held at the carriage house at Peace field, 135 Adams St. The event is part of National Arts and Humanities month.

Among those scheduled to attend are Mayor Thomas Koch; Sen. John Keenan; Rep. Ronald Mariano, the House Majority leader, and Rep. Tackey Chan; Anita Walker, the MCC's executive director; Discover Quincy Executive Director Margaret Laforest; and other leaders in the arts and culture from across Greater Boston.

The state budget for fiscal year 2016, which started July 1, included an additional $2 million for non-profit arts, humanities and sciences through the MCC. The restored funds allowed the cultural council to expand funding for cultural organizations, youth programs and community-based projects that link the arts and economic development, such as Discover Quincy does.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

PATCHES OF WHITE

When white patches appear on the tongue or inner cheek, it may be an indication of a "thrush" infection caused by the candida fungus (yeast). While small amounts of the candida fungus are present in the mouths, digestive tracts, and skin of most healthy individuals, they are normally kept in check by other microorganisms and bacteria. However, when illness, stress, or medications disturb this natural balance, the candida fungus can grow uncontrollably, causing thrush. Thrush can affect anyone, but those most vulnerable are babies, toddlers, older adults, and people with weakened immune systems. A decline in immunity due to a cold, a course of antibiotics, or the use of corticosteroids (to treat conditions such as asthma) can also lead to higher vulnerability.

Only your dentist can detect whether you have a thrush infection. You will be treated by professionals who have the experience and knowledge you can trust. If you're looking for a family dentist at this time, please call 617 479-6220. Our "personal touch" philosophy is reflected throughout our practice in many ways. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we're currently accepting new patients. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist.

P.S. While thrush may be effectively treated with anti-fungal medications prescribed by the dentist, the presence of a candida fungus infection may also be indicative of an underlying medical problem that may require further treatment by a physician.

Meeting On Blue Hills Dear Hunt Tonight

By SCOTT JACKSON

State officials will hold a meeting tonight (Thursday) for Quincy residents on plans to allow deer hunting later this year in the Blue Hills Reservation. The meeting is at the Lincoln-Hancock Community School's auditorium, 300 Granite St., from 6:30 to 8 p.m.

Hunting has been prohibited in the Blue Hills, but the Department of Conservation and Recreation is finalizing plans to allow deer hunting in the Blue Hills Reservation this year because of an overabundance of deer in the 7,000-acre park.

A May 2013 survey by the Division of Fisheries and Wildlife found there were at least 85 deer per square mile of deer habitat in the Blue Hills. DFW's statewide deer management range is six to 18 deer per square mile of forest; more than 20 deer per square mile can lead to negative impacts in northeastern forests.

Under DCR's draft deer management plan for the park, shotgun hunting of deer would be allowed in the Blue Hills Reservation for four days during the state's shotgun hunting season, which begins the Monday after Thanksgiving and last for two weeks. This year's deer hunt in the Blue Hills would take place on Nov. 30, Dec. 1, Dec. 7 and Dec. 8. The check in time for all hunters would be between 5 and 7 a.m. those days with check out at 4 p.m.

The plan would allow 120 hunters to hunt deer in portions of the park north of Interstate 93 each day. The deer management plan divides the park into six separate sections and the number of hunters per section is capped at roughly one per 30 acres.

The hunters would be allowed to use slugs this year; buckshot would be prohibited. Archery hunting may be allowed in future years.

Those applying to hunt in the Blue Hills Reservation must have a valid FID card and hunting license; they would be required to fill out an application and submit it to the DCR. A lottery would determine which applicants would be allowed to take part in the hunt. Successful applicants would have to attend a mandatory orientation session that would cover a number of topics, including safety considerations, area assignments, and other elements of the deer management plan.

As part of the plan, DCR has proposed closing Chickatawbut Road between Granite Street in Braintree and Route 28 as well as the entirety of Wampatuck Road beginning at 8 p.m. the Sundays before the hunt and ending at 7 a.m. the Wednesdays following the hunt. Hunters would be allowed to park on those roads to access the park.

Quincy CAN Candidates Night Oct. 6

Quincy Climate Action Network will host a candidates night Tuesday, Oct. 6 at 7 p.m. in the church hall at United First Parish Church of Quincy, 1306 Hancock St., across from City Hall.

QCAN has invited all candidates in contested city races.

Contested races on the Nov. 3rd ballot are mayor, city councillor at-large, and council seats in Wards 1, 2, 3, 5, and 6.

Questions to the candidates will involve city policy on the environment and energy, said David Reich, board chair of QCAN.

"As residents of a coastal city, everyone in Quincy has a personal stake in climate change," Reich said. "And if you have a stake in climate change, you will want to hear what the candidates say about their plans for slowing it and managing its effects."

Parkinson's Support Group Meeting

Gutro, Mahoney Back Phelan For Mayor

finished first and second, respectively, in the preliminary election; Koch received 6,670 votes (40.87 percent of all votes cast) and Phelan received 3,514 votes (21.53 percent).

Councillor Doug Gutro and School Committee member Anne Mahoney finished third and fourth in preliminary and were eliminated from the race; each earned approximately 18 percent of the vote. Standing outside City Hall Monday morning in front of several dozen supporters, Gutro and Mahoney said the Sept. 24 preliminary was a mandate for change as they endorsed Phelan.

"There is definitely a mandate for change in the city of Quincy – 60 percent of the voters came out and they voted for somebody other than Tom Koch. Bill Phelan won the nomination and we are here to say this city needs change, it needs a unification, it needs a new direction and that new direction has to be with a new mayor and that new mayor has to be Bill Phelan," Mahoney said.

"We have too much to give up here in the city of Quincy. We have a reputation that has been tarnished and torn and tethered by this current administration. We have finances we are not accountable for and we have to get our arms around that or we will not be able to reach the achievements we want here in the city."

"The three of us earlier this year saw what it turns out 60 percent of voters saw – that the city was completely off track," Gutro said. "Whether it's the fiscal mismanagement, whether it's the lack of plan for the downtown, whether it's the development happening all over the city and not where we want it, whether it's the spending issues or the lack of transparency and giving people a voice. Those are the issues that have united us for change.

"I've served under both administrations as a city councillor. I know how they treat the council as a body, how they're prepared, the voice they give to the public, the financial acumen they have, and on each and every item I've come to the conclusion that Bill Phelan is the man for the job."

Gutro and Mahoney said they would be willing to work with Phelan's campaign over the next month.

Phelan said he was humbled to have the support of his former rivals.

"I'm humbled by Anne and Doug's support today and we're united for change in Quincy and it's about the future of Quincy that we're united about," he said. "I look forward to the coming weeks of the campaign, working with Anne and Doug and earning the support of each and every person in Quincy."

Koch, in response to Monday's endorsements, expressed confidence he would earn the support of voters who supported Gutro or Mahoney in the preliminary.

"Roughly 78 percent of Quincy voters chose someone other than Bill Phelan last week, because they remember his record as mayor. I understand that today he gained two votes," Koch said in a statement.

"We are confident that voters who supported Anne and Doug will ultimately compare our records and choose to continue the forward progress we have made over the past eight years."

Quincy Community Action Best Chef Challenge Oct. 8

Cooking Competition Fundraiser At Granite Links Golf Club

Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. (QCAP) invites guests to cook up some fun at its Fourth Annual Best Chef fundraising event Thursday, Oct. 8 at 6 p.m. at Granite Links Golf Club in Quincy.

The competition features some of the area's most celebrated chefs in a battle of culinary skills.

Danielle Vollmar, WCVB-TV Channel 5 meterologist, will be the event emcee. The fundraiser will feature prizes and a friendly culinary competition for this year's best chef.

In celebration of QCAP's 50th anniversary, this year's event will also feature a "Tournament of Champions" with past Best Chef winners returning to the competition.

Best Chef champions include Paul Wahlberg of Alma Nove & Wahlburgers (Year One), David Todisco of the Tavern at Quarry Hills (Year Two), and Tony Derienzo of Abby Park and Novara (Year Three).

Joining them will be Ming Cao of the Fuji Restaurant Group and Bobby Sisson of Townshend Restaurant.

"This is our most important fundraising event of the year," said Beth Ann Strollo, QCAP's chief executive officer. "It's a great way to have a fun night out while helping to support QCAP's work and the tens of thousands of individuals that we help each year."

The challenge: In a race against the clock, the chefs must use secret ingredients commonly provided by QCAP's Emergency Food Center – the organization's food pantry. Using only a convection oven and a handful of portable burners, they must take these basic ingredients and create a gourmet dish. Past ingredients have included corn flakes, canned green beans, and peanut butter.

Assisting the cheftestants will be this year's Celebrity Chefs. Representing the Rotary Club of Quincy will be Dolly Di Pesa, Ed Keohane, Joan Keohane, George Montilio, and Marianne Peak.

Judging the Best Chef competiton will be Chazy Dowaliby, editor, Patriot Ledger; Boston Herald food writer Kerry Byrne, School Committeewoman and host of "Into the Frying Pan" Barbara Isola and Chef Marty McGovern, 2014 People's Choice Winner, and manager of the Neighborhood Club of Quincy. The judges will score the dishes based on taste, originality, use of secret ingredients, and plating. The chef with the most points will be crowned "Best Chef."

Guests can also weigh in on their favorite chef in the "People's Choice" competition. The participating chefs will be providing dishes that reflect the flavors and styles of their own restaurants. Guests can sample their dishes and vote for their favorite chef.

"It's a night of fun, entertainment and 'friendly' competition that everyone can participate in," Strollo said. "The Chefs are excited and always put on a great show for the crowd."

The night will also feature raffles and live and silent auctions, including a one week stay at the beautiful Costa Linda Beach Resort in Aruba; Putnam Club seats to the New England Patriots; Notre Dame vs. Boston College football tickets at Fenway Park; a family excursion package to the Great Wolf Lodge; autographed memorabilia; sporting and entertainment event tickets; jewelry; fine art; and golf, restaurant, and spa gift certificates.

Tickets are $100 per person and $175 per couple. Event proceeds will benefit QCAP programs, which serves 20,000 people annually in Quincy, Weymouth, Braintree, Milton, Hull, and surrounding Norfolk County, South Shore, and Metro Boston communities.

In addition to the Emergency Food Center, services include adult education and workforce development, financial education, including money management and credit repair counseling, job coaching and placement, Head Start, quality and affordable early education and care, family engagement activities, heating assistance and weatherization, homebuyer education, mortgage foreclosure counseling, affordable housing, homelessness prevention, and housing services.

Major sponsors include:

Domestic Violence Ended

OCTOBER IS DOMESTIC VIOLENCE AWARENESS MONTH

Millions of women each year are victims of domestic and sexual violence. Violence against women affects everyone- the victims are our sisters, mothers, partners, friends, clients and co-workers. Most people know someone who is or has been a victim of violence, even though the victim may not have disclosed the violence. It is hard to know how to respond to the victim and to the perpetrator, but peer and community involvement can be the most effective forms of intervention.

Through the month of October, DOVE will provide information in the Quincy Sun weekly on how you can help to end domestic violence. Listed below are some basic suggestions on what you can do. See DOVE's website for more information: www.dovema.org .

Myths and Facts about Dating Violence

Domestic violence usually only happens in married couples.
MYTH. As many as one-third of all high school and college-age young people experience violence in an intimate or dating relationship. Physical abuse is as common among high school and college-age couples as married couples.

While females can be abusive and abuse happens in same-sex couples too, it is much more common for males to abuse their female partners.
FACT. About 90% of known victims of relationship violence are females abused by their male partners.

People abuse their partners because they can't control their anger.
MYTH. People who abuse others are not usually out of control. They do it to gain power and control over the other person. They often use tactics besides violence such as threats, intimidation, psychological abuse and isolation from friends or family to control their partners.

People who are abused often blame themselves for their abuse.
FACT. Most people who are abused blame themselves for causing the violence. However, the fact is that NO ONE is ever to blame for another person's violence; violence is always a choice, and the responsibility is 100% with the person who is violent.

People who abuse are psychos/crazy.
MYTH. Abusers are "normal" people that we encounter in everyday life. They can be the smartest, quietest, coolest, or the best athlete on campus. What they have in common is their use of coercion and threats to control a dating partner or spouse.

DOVE is committed to partnering with diverse communities, families and individuals impacted by domestic violence.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Wednesday, September 16, 2015, at approximately 11:00 p.m., Officers William O'Neill and Dave Cooper were dispatched to the area of Goddard Street and Independence Avenue after the caller reported to the Quincy Police Dispatcher that there was just an attempted Breaking and Entering to motor vehicles on the street. The caller provided a description of the male suspect and added that he was possibly carrying a knife as he headed towards Independence Avenue.

Upon arrival, Officer Cooper spoke with the caller/witness and a second witness who confirmed that the suspect was in the parking lot of Adams Service at 17 Independence Avenue, a used car/auto service business. They said that the suspect appeared to be scratching at one of the vehicles with a shiny object. The suspect then crossed Independence Avenue through the parking lot of Supreme Liquors. As the Officers began searching the area, Sergeant Patrick Faherty also responded with additional units due to an increase in motor vehicle breaks in the immediate area. Officers Dan Francis, Dan Parisi, Robert Kelly and Steve Dabilis all responded to search the area.

A short time later, Officer Dabilis radioed that he had a suspect fitting the description on Phipps Street at Water Street. The suspect provided his name and address, which was just a few houses down from the crime scene.

The suspect claimed that he just came from the MBTA train station after being in Boston with a friend. When pressed for more details, the suspect said that he just met "Alex," who is homeless. Officer Dabilis pat frisked the suspect but he had nothing in his pockets. The witness was brought to the suspect's location to confirm that the suspect was the same person seen earlier by the witness.

As the witnesses were being driven over, they told the Police Officer that they saw the suspect looking into vehicles (at Adams Service) from the sidewalk, then walk between cars in the lot while doing something to one of the vehicles (near the sidewalk) with an object. The witness believed that the shiny object was a knife. She saw the suspect try the passenger door handle to a vehicle in the lot but could not gain entry. She stated that she clearly saw him lift the handle and heard the noise of it.

The witness said he was 70% positive of his identification of the suspect. The second witness said that she could not identify the suspect by his face but the clothing did fit. Both witnesses were transported back to their home and thanked for their assistance.

Upon returning to where the suspect was being detained, he was asked if he was on probation and he said he was not. He said that he lives with his girlfriend. The suspect said that he was at the Boston Common all day. When asked by Sergeant Faherty if he had seen the military helicopters flying around there today, the suspect said, "Oh yeah." Around 5 to 6 p.m., Sergeant Faherty pointed out that this was not truthful because the helicopters were there at about 11 am, due to a ceremony for Medal of Honor recipients. Officer Francis was notified by the Dispatcher that the suspect 43 adult and 5 juvenile arraignments, to include numerous charges for receiving stolen property, larceny, B&E and other offenses. It also noted that the suspect is currently on probation, which contradicts what he had said.

Due to the totality of the circumstances, probable cause existed that the suspect was the perpetrator of the attempted Breaking and entering to the motor vehicles. The suspect, a 27 year old Quincy resident, was placed under arrest and subsequently transported to the Police station where he was charged with, "Attempt to Commit Crime and Breaking and Entering into a Motor Vehicle Nighttime. Nice Work!

INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE SCAM: I have recently received numerous calls from citizens who are getting calls from people claiming to be from the IRS, demanding payment for late taxes. There have been threats that the local Police will come to your door to arrest you or you will be taken to court and put in jail. The IRS does not call you to discuss any issues they may have with you – their initial contact is by letter instructing you to contact a specific person within the agency. If you have caller ID, "Google" the telephone number to see who else has reported this fraudulent activity. When in doubt, call the Quincy Police Department at 617 479 1212 for assistance.

Snow Tire Tips, Repairing Bumpers

Ask John Paul: AAA New England's Car Doctor

I have a 2009 Acura TSX sedan. I love my car, but it is absolutely horrible in the snow. I am thinking about purchasing snow tires. My question to you is, will this even be helpful and if snow tires would help, would I need to invest in two or four tires? Any recommendations on a specific winter tire?

Winter tires will make a world of difference in the performance of your car. When adding winter tires, four tires is the recommendation. Four winter tires will not just improve your ability to get moving but will also greatly improve your car's ability to stop on snow and ice. As a side note, a co-worker of mine lives on a hill and owned a Mazda 6 and with the all-season tires couldn't make it to her home in the snow. She put Bridgestone Blizzak winter tires on her car and was able to make it home through the rest of the winter.

My car's bumper was recently hit and the paint was scratched, is it possible to clean this up without the entire thing refinished? I was quoted nearly $1,000 by a body shop to remove the bumper cover and have is repaired and refinished. Is there a cheaper way to repair it without doing it myself?

I would check with your local car dealership to see if they have someone who does touch-up repairs. I have seen some repairs performed by mobile paint and bumper repair companies that were nearly as good as a conventional body shop could provide.

My 2010 Ford Focus has a problem that from time to time I can't get the ignition key to turn. Usually jiggling the key while trying to turn it will get the car going. What can I do to fix the problem before I'm left stranded?

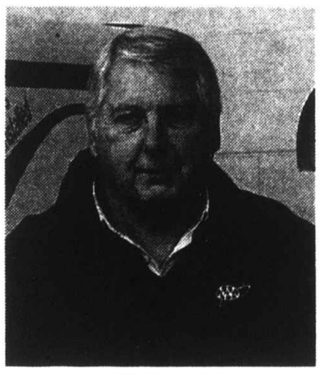
The problem is a faulty ignition; the lock module will need replacing. This was very common with the year Ford Focus. The ignition switch and lock cylinder will run about $150 plus an hour or so labor to install it.

Occasionally while driving the shift indicator "D" will start flashing. I drive a 2004 Honda Pilot and when it flashes there doesn't seem to be any unusual driving experiences. We just replaced the timing belt and had the transmission fluid changed. When this happens we usually turn off the engine and restarted it and everything is back to normal, why? Do you think the transmission will need to be replaced?

The flashing shift indicator is an indication of an electrical issue with the transmission In this case the transmission needs to be checked for trouble codes just like the engine would if a service engine soon light were illuminated. The problem could be a faulty shift solenoid, circuit or the computer itself and may not be a faulty transmission.

I own a 2011 Subaru Legacy, while in for its 30,000 check, the dealer told me that my car needs the front and rear differential drained and refilled. Is this needed? The old Subaru had over 150,000 miles never had this work done! My question is, at this many miles, is this really needed or are the tying to put a scare in me or trying to take advantage of an older person?

Subaru like many manufactures has two maintenance schedules; normal and severe. The service they are recommending is from the severe schedule and although it can't hurt may not be necessary. According to Subaru, owner's should use severe service intervals if they primarily operate their vehicle under any of the following conditions: driving less than 5 miles per trip or in freezing temperatures, driving less than 10 miles per trip, driving in temperatures 90°F, extensive idling or long periods of stop and go driving, using a roof-top carrier or driving in mountainous conditions and driving on muddy, dusty or deiced roads. Use the normal service intervals if the vehicle is primarily operated under conditions other than those listed above.



JOHN PAUL

I am thinking of replacing my ever so dependable 2001 Toyota Avalon with a car that would have similarly generous legroom as comfortable seats and ride. My wife's car, a 2010 Honda Accord an otherwise great car, but rides a bit too firm and legroom feels tighter, so it is not great for us on a road trip. I was pleasantly surprised when I test drove a 2015 Subaru Outback recently. It was quite comfortable and roomy with good visibility, and it offers some impressive active safety features like lane change warning and blind spot monitoring, rear cross-traffic alert, adaptive cruise control, and pre-collision automatic braking. I am seriously considering the Outback, but something just doesn't feel "right". On paper the car looks great but I'm not sure I would be happy with it. I am 50 and I think this latest safety technology could help me. In my search, all-wheel drive is not necessary, although based on last winter I would prefer it. I would like to keep the cost it under $45,000 and would appreciate your suggestions.

The Toyota Avalon in 2001 had about 41 inches of legroom. Three cars that can be ordered in all-wheel-drive that also meet or exceed the legroom of your Avalon are the Ford Fusion, Hyundai Genesis and Buick LaCrosse. Depending on what features you are looking for in addition to legroom, any one of these cars are easy to recommend. The Fusion is small on the outside but has plenty of head and legroom. The Buick and the Hyundai are good solid cars with their own specific personalities. As you found out from looking at the Subaru you really need to find the car that best matches your budget, needs, desires and not just get a car because other people like them.

I own a 2010 Toyota Highlander Hybrid that I use rarely. I have this SUV because I don't really need a car every day but do need a car/SUV from time to time. I ride a bike often and this Toyota seems Summer And Winter Blend Gasoline – Why Do We Have It?

By JOHN PAUL
AAA's Car Doctor

Every spring gas prices seem to skyrocket to the highest prices of the year. Why does this happen? In explanation, we hear the experts say that many of the refineries are "down for maintenance while transitioning from winter-blend to summer-blend gasoline," but what does this mean?

The difference between summer and winter-blend gasoline involves the Reid Vapor Pressure (RVP) of the fuel. RVP is a measure of how easily the fuel evaporates at a given temperature. The more volatile a gasoline (higher RVP), the easier it evaporates.

Winter-blend fuel has a higher RVP because the fuel must be able to evaporate at low temperatures for the engine to operate properly, especially when the engine is cold. If the RVP is too low on a frigid day, the vehicle will be hard to start and once started, will run rough.

Summer-blend gasoline has a lower RVP to prevent excessive evaporation when outside temperatures rise. Reducing the volatility of summer gas decreases emissions that can contribute to unhealthy ozone and smog levels. A lower RVP also helps prevent drivability problems such as vapor lock on hot days, especially in older vehicles.

The US Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) says conventional summer-blend gasoline contains 1.7 percent more energy than winter-blend gas, which is one reason why gas mileage is slightly better in the summer. However, the summer-blend is also more expensive to produce, and that cost is passed on to the motorist.

The switch between the two fuels happens twice a year, once in the fall (to winter-blend) and again in the spring (to summer-blend). The changeover requires significant work at refineries, so oil companies schedule their maintenance for those times when they will already be "down" for the blend switches.

As a consumer, the main thing to understand is that there are real reasons for the switch from summer to winter blend fuel. Important for homeowners is when you want you snow-blower to start it needs fresh winter blend fuel. Using that leftover gas for the lawnmower will almost guarantee that your lawn mower won't start in the middle of winter.

Ask John Paul: AAA's Car Doctor

pretty kind to the planet. Here is the problem, in the last couple of years it has developed an annoying condition that the battery goes dead. The original battery was replaced last year and I drive as little as possible to reduce pollution. At a recent trip to the repair shop they could find nothing wrong with the battery or charging system. They did recharge the battery and only suggested the problem was me not driving enough, any ideas?

The problem could be simply a result of your hybrid sitting idle for too long. Toyota recommends to their dealers if a hybrid car or SUV is going to be in storage that the accessory battery is disconnected. Short of disconnecting the battery; consider installing a battery charger such as the Battery Tender. These battery maintainer/chargers will keep the battery charged without over charging and are designed to be left connected when the car is parked. In addition many 2006-2010 Highlander hybrids have been recalled for an issue with Intelligent Power Module (IPM) inside the vehicle's electrical inverter module, although it may not be the cause of your vehicles problem if your vehicle is part of the recall it should be taken care of.

Apaches Capture Inaugural 'Yakoo Cup'

By SEAN HALPIN

There are many trophies commemorating great football rivalries, from SMU-TCU's "Iron Skillet" to "Paul Bunyan's Ax" in the Minnesota vs. Wisconsin series.

When the Squantum Storm met the North Quincy Apaches this past Sunday, they rolled out the new "Yakoo Cup" trophy. The trophy is named after NQHS Mascot "Mr. Yakoo" created by Dr. Allan Yacubian in 1957. It commemorates the rivalry and the alliance the two squads have had over the past 40 years, as many of the players go on to become high school teammates for the North Quincy Red Raiders.

The Apaches got on the scoreboard first, early in the opening quarter. Apaches RB Tyler Le capped the 45 yard drive with a 7-yard TD run. The conversion kick was blocked by Storm LB Josh Jackson as the Apaches went ahead 6-0. Squantum immediately answered with a 34-yard TD run by RB Mikey Adamson. The conversion attempt failed as both teams entered halftime tied at 6-6.

Squantum Stormed the field in the second half as RB Jackson raced down the sideline on a 39-yard TD run. The conversion attempt failed as the Storm went ahead 12-6 in the third quarter.

The Apaches answered with a 27-yard TD pass from QB Danny Scolaro to TE James Ward. The conversion attempt was stopped as the Apaches tied the ballgame 12-12, entering the final minutes.

The Apaches took the ball and drove deep into Storm territory with just under 3:00 left to go.

Storm DB Tommy Roache halted the drive by intercepting an Apaches pass. The Storm took the ball back only to turn in over on downs on their own 42-yard line. The Apaches took possession with 1:41 left to go. Apache QB, Scolaro hit Tyler Le on a 27 yard pass down to the 1 yard line. Scolaro rolled out to the right and threw a 1 yard TD pass to Tyler Le with 41 second left to go. Le rushed in for the conversion as the Apaches defeated the Storm 19-12, capturing the inaugural, Yakoo Cup trophy.

Bellotti Backs DeAmicis For School Seat

Norfolk County Sheriff and Quincy resident Michael Bellotti announces he is supporting James DeAmicis for a seat on the Quincy School Committee.

DeAmicis, a graduate of the Quincy High School Class of 2015, is running for one of the three available seats.

"We are always encouraging our young people to get involved in politics and government. This is a young man who is eager to help out, filled with enthusiasm and energy, and wants to make a positive difference to his community," Bellotti said.

"Furthermore, I believe his youth will be an asset to the Committee. He realizes what it is like to sit in a classroom, eat lunch in the cafeteria and what students want most out of an education. He is a highly respectful and earnest young adult who will be a great listener. If elected he can't wait to work with everyone, and especially with the Parent Teacher Organizations," said the Norfolk County sheriff.

DeAmicis, who is enrolled as a freshman at Suffolk University this fall, is studying American Politics. He has done several internships, including ones at the State House and Mayor's Office and has been active in many scholastic and community activities throughout his high school years.

"I hope people will have the opportunity to meet James along the campaign trail. I think they will come away impressed, just like I did," Bellotti added.

Elect Dave McCarthy for Councilor-At-Large

The city of Quincy has reached a pivotal stage where experience and new ideas are not only needed, they will prove crucial to our cities future. I have served on the Quincy School Committee for 12 years in pursuit of a singular goal—a thriving school system worthy of our children's potential—that goal is being met. I am committed to fiscal responsibility.

As your Councilor at Large every decision I make will be weighed against this question: 'is this in the best interest of the Quincy taxpayer's?'

Given the opportunity to serve as your Councilor at Large, I will get the results you deserve. Therefore, I ask for one of your three votes for Councilor at Large. On November 3rd, make your vote matter,

"Make it McCarthy"

Let us not seek the Republican answer or the Democratic answer, but the right answer...

Bill Phelan tried bullying state officials on his plans for a new Quincy High School. In the process, he lost $46 million in state funding for the project, and it took Tom Koch to actually get it built.

Because Bill Phelan fought instead of leading, he also lost 90 percent state reimbursement for Central Middle School and Sterling Middle School. And then didn't tell anybody about it.

100 Percent Job Placement Rate For 2015 Grads

Quincy College took part in this year's National Surgical Technologists Week held Sept. 20-26.

Students in the Surgical Technology program celebrated with a cake and a special Apple Facetime conference with Roy Zacharias, president of the Association of Surgical Technologists. The conference was made possible by the new Apple iPad program launched this year by the Quincy College program.

Trained, skilled surgical technologists play critical roles in operating rooms around the country, prepping the O.R., sterilizing equipment, and handling "behind the scenes" logistics that make the operating room function at maximum efficiency.

A career as a surgical technologist requires a set of clinical skills in order to properly handle surgical instruments, anticipate surgeon's needs as they operate. National Surgical Technologists Week was established by the Association of Surgical Technologists to recognize the contributions made by these professionals in assisting on millions of surgical procedures around the country each year.

Quincy College offers a 10-month long, hands-on certificate program to help students build the skills they need to launch a career in this growing healthcare field. Employment of surgical technologists is projected to grow 30 percent from 2012 to 2022, much faster than the average for all occupations. Advances in medical technology have made surgery safer, and more operations are being done to treat a variety of illnesses and injuries, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Nova Suites Opens For Business In Quincy Center

Renovated 106-Year-Old Downtown Building Offers 28 Extended Stay Suites

By SCOTT JACKSON

Located in a recently renovated 106-year-old building in Quincy Center, Nova Suites, one of the downtown's newest businesses, has been booked solid since opening just over two months ago.

LBC Boston – a company that has purchased more than $23 million worth of real estate in Quincy Center in recent years – opened Nova Suites at 3 Cottage Ave. in mid-July. Built in 1909, the building was home a violin shop and function hall and had been used as a rooming house since 1925 but had fallen into a state of disrepair.

Nova Suites boasts 28 extended stay suites, which have bold colors and a modern look and feel. The building features two executive suites, the largest room offered; two executive studios; 12 studio rooms; and 12 micro studios. Each room has a flat screen television, a refrigerator, stovetop, bath and Wi-Fi. Windows in the rooms, which offer guests views of Quincy Center, are tinted to help keep the rooms shady and provide additional privacy.

The first-floor lobby includes leather seats and a table for guests, a large flat screen television, and images of two iconic Quincy Center buildings – the United First Parish Church and Granite Trust Building.

The studios go for $110 to $120 per night and the executive suites have been going for $135 to $145, according to Ryan Malgeri, a partner with LBC Boston; there is a minimum three-night commitment. LBC Boston has priced the rooms to be more affordable than others in the Boston area.

LOBBY OF NOVA SUITES includes images of two iconic Quincy Center buildings – the United First Parish Church and the Granite Trust Building. It also has leather seats and a table for guests as well as a large flat screen television. The extended stay hotel originally opened as Miranova Suites two months ago but the owners now refer to it using the shorter name.

"We've been solidly booked for the entire time we've been opened," said Alex Matov, the managing partner for LBC Boston. "The idea is for us to [have] more aggressive prices than anyone else in the city."

Nova Suites caters primarily to business travelers, including those traveling internationally, who need to stay in the Boston area for the several weeks, as well as family members of patients who have extended stays at Boston hospitals.

"Their commute is very convenient to Boston. It's just a few stops away to the downtown and a lot of people are taking advantage of it," Matov said. "Not to mention, it is eight stops on the Red Line to Kendall Square, Cambridge."

LBC purchased the building on the corner of Cottage Avenue and Hancock Street for $4.4 million. The renovation took eight months – it was expected to take three to four months but more

Quincy College Unveils New Physical Therapy Asst. Laboratory

The Quincy College Physical Therapist Assistant program unveiled its new laboratory on the Plymouth Campus Wednesday with a ribbon cutting and grand opening celebration.

The Quincy College Physical Therapist Assistant (PTA) Laboratory will be the main laboratory and educational space for the brand new Quincy College Physical Therapist Assistant Program which is hosting its first cohort of students this fall. The Quincy College PTA program is one-of-a-kind in the Plymouth and South Shore region, one of only six programs in Massachusetts and one of only six other programs in the entire country that was newly approved last year to offer a PTA program.

During the grand opening guests will be able to tour the brand new, 900 square foot PTA lab. It is fully equipped with modern equipment and full of technology that is at the forefront of PTA training. This includes, but is not limited to, providing the students technology for completing electronic documentation and the ability to utilize a SMART Board for instruction.

"The state of the art equipment and technology built into the Physical Therapist Assistant laboratory at Quincy College affords students the opportunity to successfully prepare for and excel in the professional environment," said Christine Rodday, Physical Therapist Assistant Faculty at Quincy College.

The Physical Therapist Assistant (PTA) Program is a 2-year, 5-semester associate degree program. The inaugural class began this September with 12 students.

PTAs work under the direction and supervision of a licensed Physical Therapist. The PTA program is a combination of foundational education courses, technical education courses, and clinical experiences. Students complete three clinical affiliations during the program, and this allows them a chance to network and frequently creates job leads post-graduation. PTAs are employed by hospitals, outpatient facilities, and rehabilitation facilities to name a few and can work in areas specializing in a wide range of topics including geriatrics, pediatrics, neurology, and orthopedics.

The Physical Therapist Assistant (PTA) Laboratory is located on the Plymouth campus, 36 Cordage Park Cir., Plymouth. More information and registration can be found online at https://qcpta.splashthat.com/

"Being responsive to the residents of a local community is a critical part of public service," O'Donnell said. "My office is committed to providing outstanding customer service to the citizens of Quincy and all residents of Norfolk County. These office hours are part of that effort, providing a convenient way for residents to get their land document questions answered and have their land documents recorded without the imposition of having to travel to our central office in Dedham."

O'Donnell thanked Mayor Tom Koch, city councilors and the staff at City Hall and the Coddington Building for their cooperation "in allowing us to bring the Registry directly to the citizens of Quincy."

3 COTTAGE AVE.
NOVA SUITES

NOVA SUITES, featuring 28 extended stay suites, opened this summer at 3 Cottage Ave. in Quincy Center. LBC Boston purchased the building, formerly home to a rooming house, for $4.4 million and spent eight months renovating it. In total, the company has purchased more than $23 million worth of real estate in Quincy Center.

work was needed than originally expected. Company officials declined to say how much they invested in Nova Suites, adding that it was a "substantial amount" of money.

In addition to Nova Suites, the building also includes six other commercial spaces. LBC Boston plans to renovate those in the coming months; one such renovation, next to the Nova Suites lobby, is already underway.

Matov said the company also helped turn around what was a troubling spot for the city after purchasing and renovating the building. He said more than 50 calls a year were made to the building for emergency services over the last decade.

"This hotel opened two months ago. Before this, it was a very troubling spot for the city," Matov said. "Since we got here, it was a challenge to get rid of it but we've changed things around. Right now it's a completely different story."

LBC Boston's vision for Quincy Center includes more than Nova Suites.

In April of this year, Matov announced plans for a $25 million, 116-room hotel in the 1500 block of Hancock Street, next to Nova Suites. LBC Boston is still committed to that plan, Matov said during the recent interview; the company will begin further discussions with the city on that plan once the fate of the city-owned Hancock Lot comes into focus.

"It's a lengthy process. The process starts for the most part…with the rebuilding of the parking lot and parking garage. Once that will be situated, we're going to come back to the discussions with the city," Matov said. "But the idea is, yes, to make sure construction will go on the right-hand side of us and hopefully it will be a hotel."

The company plans further redevelopment at the parcels it owns on the Parkingway.

"There are other lots out there that we have purchased that we plan to develop later on – the Petco building, the IHOP building, the former A.J. Wright building," Matov said. "Eventually we do want to redevelop those as well."

"Quincy is a great opportunity for investing and we recognized that opportunity a couple years ago," Matov added. "We did our due diligence, we saw where the city was going and we decided to be part of that great success here."

Coach Paul Bregoli Reaches Milestone 200th Career Win

'The Most Important Thing To Me Is Being Around The Kids'

Paul Bregoli began coaching sports at North Quincy in 1973. He began coaching girls soccer in 1995. If North Quincy has a sport, chances are that Paul Bregoli has coached it.

He has coached more than a generation of athletes, touched their lives on the field, in the classroom and in life. He has forged relationships which remain unbroken. Recently, two week ago, Bregoli passed one of those signature milestones with his 200th win as a girls soccer coach, an accomplishment which gives pause not only for celebration, but also for reflection.

"A lot of coaches have won 200 games. A lot of them did it faster than I did as well," said Bregoli. "I still love the competition, but the most important thing to me is being around the kids. They constantly surprise you. I see a group arrive as freshmen and I can't wait to see how they develop as players, students and people. It's the best part of the job."

Players develop and change. Coaches develop and change. Bregoli is not the same coach he was in 1973 when he coached the freshman baseball team. There were coaching stops in freshman basketball, JV basketball, girls varsity basketball (112 wins in nine years), boys varsity soccer (seven tourney appearances in seven years) and, lastly, because a parent asked him, the girls soccer coaching job in 1995. His team has made the tourney 15 times in 20 years.

He has learned from all of them, and he wishes now what many people with great, ahem, experience wish.

"I wish I knew as a young coach what I know now," said Bregoli. "As a young coach, winning can be too important. You have to learn when to back off a player and give her room. You have to let her grow as a person. We lost to Scituate by a goal (recently). Fifteen years ago, I wouldn't have slept for a week. This year, it was only one night. I'm making progress."

One expectation that has remained constant has been academics. The single accomplishment that gives him the most pride is that all but one player who has come up through the program to senior year in 20 years has gone to college. The player, who didn't go to college, joined the Air Force.

"He is always talking to us about academics. He told us if we were having trouble with any subject, he would line us up with a tutor," said North senior defender Julia O'Donnell.

"I tell them as freshmen that there are no professional soccer players in the room. If they want to be ready to advance through that next door in four years, they have to be sound academically," said Bregoli.

"I've had players become nurses, teachers, coaches, attorneys, police officers. That's what is most important to me, what they do with their lives."

And there are the relationships. They are about trust. If a player trusts that her coach is doing what is best for her, all things are possible. Without it, nothing is possible.

"He can be hard on us at times, but it is for our own good. He just wants to make us better," said O'Donnell.

The trust does not vanish at graduation. It is eternal.

"I had a text from Mike McCormack who played for me and now lives in Newburyport. He congratulated me on my 200th. I haven't heard from Mike in ages," said Bregoli. "Courtney Campo (Stonehill) texted me to say how much she missed soccer at North.

"Recently, my girlfriend's niece lost her four-year-old daughter. The kids heard about it. After the Hanover game a (1-0 loss), they changed in the locker room, went up to the funeral home and paid their respects. I can't tell you how much that means to a coach."

NQHS GIRLS SOCCER team celebrates with Head Coach Paul Bregoli on his 200th career win. Bregoli began his coaching career in 1973 and has coached the NQ girls varsity soccer team since 1995.

"Every seven or eight years you get a special group like the 11 seniors I have this year. The older you get, the more you appreciate it," said Bregoli. "These are throwback kids. They play hard like the kids I played with in school. They're great people too. All you have to do is watch the way they support and treat each other. We elected four captains this year. We could have elected seven or eight."

"It meant a lot to be there for his 200th because we've come along with him since we were 12," said O'Donnell. "Everyone was happy for him. We dumped water on his head and I think we broke his phone. The phone part was accidental."

Bregoli is 67. It has been 49 years since he graduated from North as an all-scholastic in soccer and a guard on two great North hoop teams which won the Greater Boston League and went to the old Tech Tourney. Currently, along with coaching girls soccer, Bregoli serves on the Quincy School Committee, works as an assistant softball coach to former player Rachel Powers at Wheaton College, and is scorekeeper for the boys basketball team.

To make Wheaton's indoor practices, he leaves Quincy at 8:00 and returns in the dead of a winter's night near 12:00. It is not a gentle, easy life Bregoli has chosen, but it is one that he will keep as long as he is able.

"I figure I've taken a 1,000 bus rides. I always said that if I ever lost any of my enthusiasm, I would walk away because it's not fair to the kids," he said. "But I still love it. I look at our freshman class this year, and I can't wait to see how they'll turn out as seniors. The kids bring me back. Honestly, they make me feel like I'm 25 or 30.

"They make me feel needed."

TREATMENT BENEFITS FOR SENIORS

Those aged 65 years and older often find that chronic medical conditions and decreasing mobility conspire to lower their quality of life, particularly if they suffer from spinal conditions. The good news is that recent research involving Medicare recipients aged 65-plus with diagnosed musculoskeletal disease, dislocations, sprains, or strains shows that they derived measurable benefit from chiropractic treatment. Compared with study participants receiving only medical treatment for their conditions, those receiving chiropractic care were found to have fewer functional limitations, less difficulty engaging in such activities as lifting and walking, and a lower number of doctor visits. The chiropractic patients also indicated that they were more satisfied with their initial care, their out-of-pocket costs, and the information provided them.

Our diagnostics focus on the root cause of your illness. We don't mask symptoms with drugs and unnecessary medical procedures. The goal at FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC is to help you attain optimal health quickly, safely, and competently. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy, where we are on the cutting edge of today's chiropractic technology. Call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment and start feeling better. Enjoy life! If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. According to the study mentioned above, researchers concluded that the seniors receiving chiropractic care benefited from their treatment's "protective effect," which safeguarded them against future physical deterioration.

First-Place Presidents Run Unbeaten Streak To 10

QUINCY PRESIDENTS varsity volleyball players celebrate their 3-0 sweep over Duxbury in front of their home fans Monday night. Quincy Sweeps Duxbury For 5-0 Mark In Patriot League

By BILL GRIFFIN

It is the best of times for the Quincy girls volleyball team.

The Presidents are 10-0 for the first time since 2009. They are not only 10-0, they have rattled off 10 victories without losing a game. They not only have not lost a match, they have not lost a game. They are in sole possession of first place in the Patriot League as the season approaches its mid-season checkpoint.

And just one more thing. They beat Duxbury which just may be as important as all the rest combined.

Senior Nicole Jorgensen had 16 kills and Quincy showcased its balance and experience in an impressive and satisfying 25-19, 25-13, 25-22 sweep of Duxbury before a large crowd at the Quincy High gym Monday afternoon.

"Duxbury is the match we pointed to. It feels almost better than winning a championship," said Jorgensen who is one of 11 Quincy seniors who had never previously beaten Duxbury.

"I think it goes back three or four years since we beat them," said Coach Jacqui Niosi. "A rivalry has developed because Duxbury is always so good. They're always at the top of the league. To come into a battle of unbeatens and beat them means a lot. The kids are psyched."

Duxbury is 4-2 overall and 4-1 in the league. Quincy is 5-0 in league.

From the beginning of the season, Niosi has stressed a team concept beginning with a stout defense, and the formula has brought Quincy to an undefeated slot in first place. Still, Jorgensen stood above the rest against Duxbury and simply dominated the match.

A number of the 16 kills came from the howitzers she has been dotting the floor with for four years. But there was much more. There was touch and placement at the net. She blocked and she moved the ball to teammates. She used a flat-footed serve which produced accuracy and pace. She kept points alive with hustle and grit. On one sequence in the second game, she skidded and belly-flopped to the floor to keep alive a point which looked lost.

In the victory Jorgensen wanted most, she played her best volleyball. Enough said.

"It was a great save, and the best part was we won the point," said Niosi.

Experience helps, especially in these rivalry games with first place at issue. Quincy has 11 seniors. Duxbury has one. Many of the Quincy seniors have been playing with and against each other since middle school. It showed. The Presidents worked with teamwork and timing. Six players moved as one.

The experience helped

JULIA KLINCEWICZ had a pair of kills to help power the North Quincy girls varsity volleyball team to a 3-0 win over Scituate in Patriot League action Sept. 25. The victory improved the Red Raiders' season record to 6-3.

North Quincy Volleyball Sails Past Scituate

By JOE REARDON

Bus problems caused Scituate to arrive late last Friday for its match against North Quincy and the Red Raiders provided even more trouble for the Sailors that couldn't be fixed by checking under the hood.

Trina Liang registered 10 consecutive service points to go along with eight aces and a pair of digs to lead Kerry Ginty's Red Raiders to a 3-0 Patriot League rout of the struggling Scituate squad. Rebecca Thorne added nine aces and Remy Aucoin, Isabelle Flaherty and Julia Klincewicz all had a pair of kills as North Quincy rang up lopsided scores of 25-4, 25-3 and 25-12 to clinch the victory and improve to 6-3 on the season.

After missing the tournament last year, the Red Raiders know they have a very good chance of advancing into the postseason this time around.

"We're doing much better," said Ginty. "We've come away with a couple of good wins. Overall we're getting better as we should be. Our passing has improved a lot and that helps everything. We're still a relatively young team, but we have good court awareness and a general wherewithal to know where we are on the court. We were messing around with our lineup and we have a pretty set one now. We're improved. We're still not where we want to be yet, but we're getting there and getting better every day."

Probably the most encouraging aspect of the Red Raiders' game was how loose they looked playing and their constant communication; things that weren't always a factor last fall.

Flaherty can see the team getting better and believes North Quincy could be primed for a postseason bid. "In the beginning we were a little shaky trying to shake off last year," said Flaherty. "I'm really happy with how we've been progressing on defense. We've tried to set up a good offense. We've been focusing on team building. We've have team bonding after practice and things like that. We're a lot closer than we were last year and you can feel it on the court."

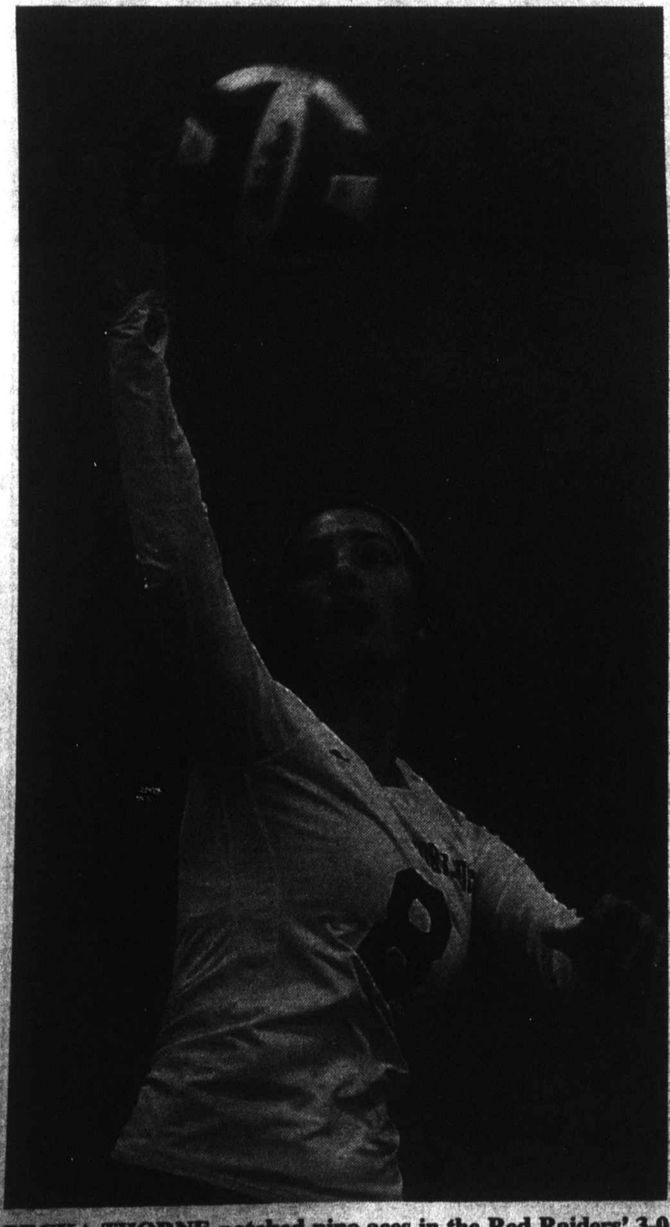
Flaherty has been the best player on the court this season. "She's doing everything for us," said Ginty. "She's playing amazingly. She's swinging out of this world. She's playing really good lately."

Scituate had no answer for Liang and Thorne in the first game as the pair dropped in points to put North Quincy up quickly 10-0. The lead stretched to 15-2 with Thorne putting up serves that had the Sailors on their heels. Samantha Caldwell closed out the opener with three points from the service slot.

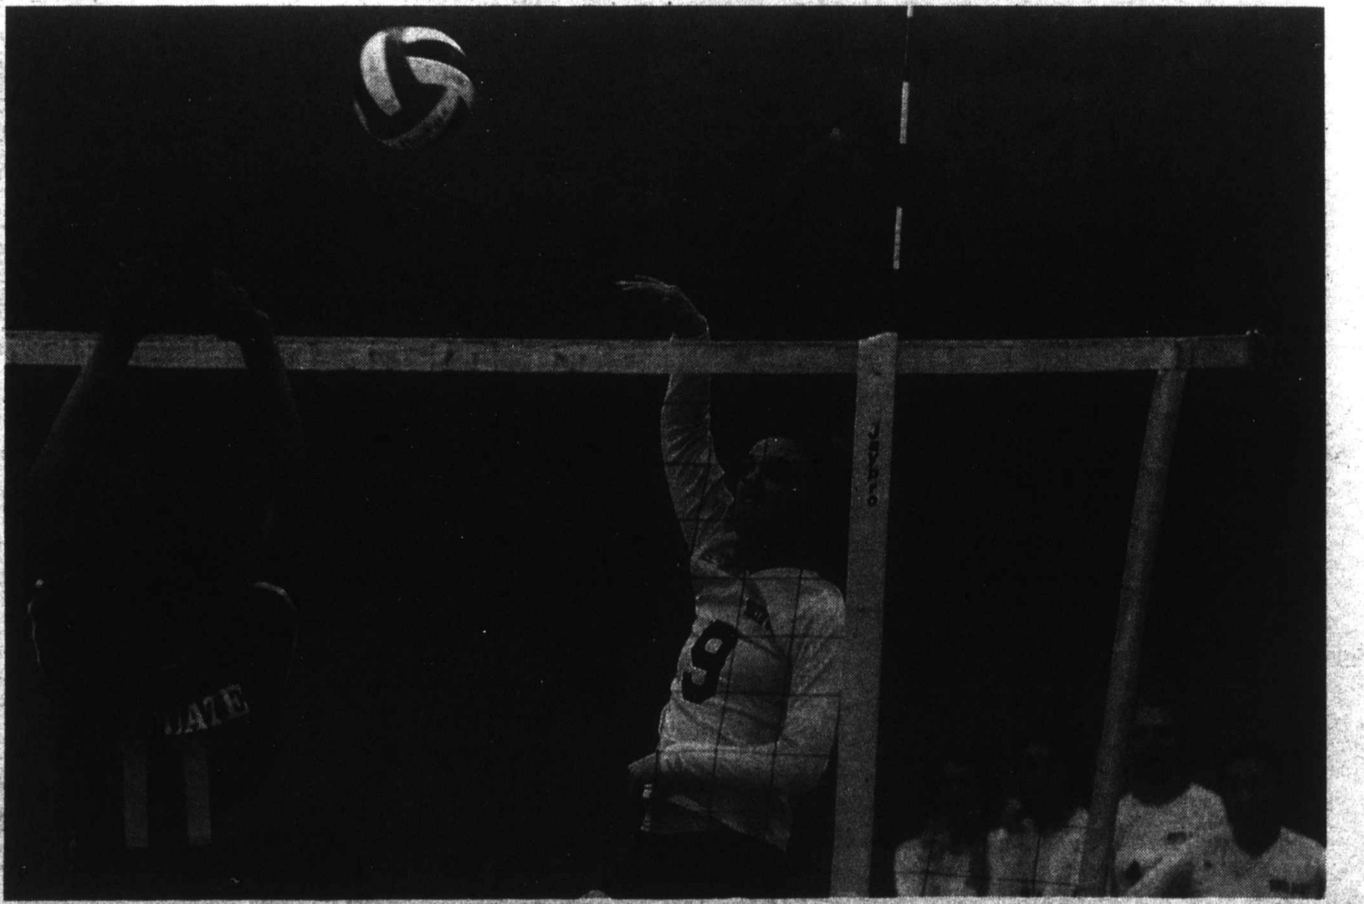
Caldwell was the story of the second game with her 13 points as North Quincy never allowed the Sailors to get into any type of rhythm. Scituate came somewhat alive in the third game and took an early 4-3 lead. The Red Raiders tied it at 4 and then pulled ahead with Thorne leading the way again with a 6-0 run that put the Sailors away for good. Liang ended it with a 3-0 spurt.

Ginty believes the Patriot League is getting stronger and Scituate is a team struggling with growing pains now, but will eventually become a strong squad. "The Patriot League is really competitive now," she said. "You know Scituate is going to be good. They have a lot of big kids and a lot of athletic looking kids.

"We just want to get better every single day and learn from our mistakes."



BECKA THORNE notched nine aces in the Red Raiders' 3-0 victory over Scituate Sept. 25.



ISABELLE FLAHERTY also had a pair of kills in North Quincy's 3-0 win over Scituate.

Presidents Play Physical But Fall To Plymouth N.

By BILL GRIFFIN

While his team was preparing for its game against Plymouth North, Quincy coach Bill Reardon's biggest concern was the sheer size of the Eagles who have the bulk of a small college team.

"They are so big that I just hope we can move them," said Reardon before the game.

Quincy answered the physical challenge. The Presidents battled Plymouth North to a physical standoff, but mistakes gave the Eagles' high-powered offense too many openings. Plymouth North took advantage of them to drop Quincy, 28-6 in a Patriot League Keenan Division game at Veterans' Memorial Stadium Friday night.

"The score not withstanding, I was proud of the way our kids competed. We battled and hung in there against a big, physical team. We never stopped competing. We had too many turnovers and penalties, and that was what hurt us," said Reardon.

Quincy (1-2) battled the visitors to a 0-0 standoff after the first period. Captain Mike Munore set the tone on the first play from scrimmage in the game by throwing a ball-carrier for an eight-yard loss. Later in the period, Quincy stopped the Eagles on a fourth-down play. Sophomore linebacker Brian Nguyen put good pressure on quarterback Cam Drew and Jahvae Handsom-Fields had close coverage down the field to force an incompletion.

"Mike's play was a statement play. It showed we weren't going to be pushed around. I thought he was the best lineman on the field," said Reardon.

It was good defense against an explosive opponent. Plymouth North (3-0) scored runaway victories over Aponnequet and Oliver Ames, totaling 79 points in offense in the two games before its meeting with Quincy.

"Our defensive coordinator Kevin Casey had a good game plan for them, and I thought the kids did a great job executing it, especially in the first half," said Reardon.

Plymouth North scored on runs by Myles Uva and Joe Walsh for a 14-0 halftime lead. Drew threw well in the second half and set up a pair of touchdowns with his passing.

Quincy scored in the final period. Senior Garrett Cronin had a 55-yard punt return to bring Quincy to the Plymouth North 12. On the next play, Cody Desmond found Dyreke Johnson open on a fade route for the score.

"Garrett played an excellent game at running back, linebacker and on special teams," said Reardon. "Tyrian Leonard had a good game at defensive end. Our center Declan Mayo was up against a nose-guard who was 6'4" and 260 pounds. Declan more than held his own."

In the first three games against Braintree, Milton and Plymouth North, defenses have keyed heavily on Handsom-Fields, a plus 2,000-yard career rusher who is a threat to score every time he touches the ball. Quincy tried to spring him to the outside, but with mixed results. Cronin helped by running well up the middle for several good rushes.

Desmond had six completions for 47 yards.

"We had a couple of plays to try to get the ball to Jahvae in space, but they didn't work as well as we hoped. Teams are really concentrating on him. We have to find a way to get him the ball where he can do some damage," said Reardon.

Quincy is at Silver Lake Friday at 7 p.m.. It is never a pleasant experience playing At Silver Lake. It is a long bus ride and the Lakers, especially quarterback Alec Snell, will be a good test.

Quincy deal better with the inevitable ebb and flow of a volleyball match. There are streaks and runs for each side. Jorgensen stopped several with powerful put-aways, and Quincy dealt well with the back-and-forth of the match because its seniors have seen and learned from them over the past three years.

"Experience is so important in a match like this," Niosi said. "I thought it really showed in the final game (when Quincy ran eight of the last 10 points to rally from a 21-17 hole.) We weren't afraid of the moment. We stepped up and weren't afraid to take a good swing at the ball. That comes from having played in a lot of big matches."

Quincy's balance is exceptional. The Presidents are certainly not perfect, but they do not have a clear weakness an opponent can target. Jorgensen. Sarah Gibbons, Anxhela Hoti are a powerful front line. Gibbons (six kills) has a soft touch and a good feel for the open space on the court. Hoti (three kills), is a strong finisher and an excellent server.

Maggie Parker (10 digs) swings between defense and net. Alicia Walker (12 assists) and Danielle Parry (six assists) are two skilled setters who know where the ball should go. Jessie Lei and Tien Le are two wonderful athletes on the back line who are quick to the ball, keep Quincy in points and get back everything that is possible to reach.

"I really think it begins with the team concept the kids are playing. Nobody is looking for all the winners or all the big shots. We play unselfishly. We know if we play defense, our offense will usually come along," said Niosi.

The first game against Duxbury was a tight battle until Parry and Walker opened it up with strong service games. Parry finished it with a touch volley at the net.

The front line of Gibbons, Jorgensen and Hoti, with a big assist from Parker, controlled the second game. Duxbury played its best volleyball in the third game, building a steady, narrow lead. The Dragons were up, 20-17 when Walker took control with serve. Parker and Gibbons made two terrific finishes at the net off key points to put Quincy in the lead. The Presidents finished it with a Le-Parry-Gibbons passing combination which produced an opening for the final point.

When it was over, Jorgensen talked about what the 10-0 start and the Duxbury win meant to the seniors who are taking the final run down the road as volleyball players.

"Doing this with a senior team, my classmates and teammates I've played with for four years makes this special," she said. "I played with and against a lot of them in middle school. We know each other. We are friends. This season is something I want to enjoy with them."

Quincy Blanks Scituate In Boys Soccer, 3-0

By JOE REARDON

Mark Spendlove wasn't at a loss for words during halftime of Quincy's Patriot League matchup against Scituate Monday afternoon at the stadium and some of them were of the salty variety.

"I kind of gave them a telling off at halftime," said the Presidents' head coach with a smile. "It wasn't pretty. I'm not sure I can repeat some of the things I said."

Spendlove wasn't at all happy with the way the Sailors were consistently beating Quincy to the ball during the scoreless opening 40 minutes and he knew if it kept up for very much longer Scituate was eventually going to find the back of the net and put the Presidents in a hole.

"I told them we had to start competing and had to stop standing around," said Spendlove. "We had to start winning the ball. I told them if they didn't start working in the second half against these guys they were going to roll over us. They were first to the ball every time. We were second best all over the field. We did the work in the second half and it paid off in the end."

Spendlove got his message across with his diatribe and it struck a chord with the Presidents as they came out in the second half to score three goals for a very satisfying 3-0 win. The victory improved Quincy's record to 5-2 on the season and after playing four games last week, the Presidents get a chance to somewhat recover and get their game legs back heading into tomorrow's match at Whitman-Hanson.

"We just have Monday and Friday this week which is great," said Spendlove. "We'll get some practices in and get going again. It's tough. Last week it was game, game, game, game. You've got to get the legs moving. We're coming off a hard week last week with Silver Lake, Duxbury, Hingham and Norwood. We knew at the end of the week we were dead and didn't have the legs. Today the energy still wasn't back in the first half."

Benito Carvalho, Tristan McCormick and Paulo Soares all had tallies in the second half to improve Quincy's record to 5-2. Goalkeeper Robert Smith was sharp when he had to be to pick up his third shutout this fall.

The speedy Carvalho had several chances in the second half before netting the eventual game winner. He sprinted in hard and got off a shot that was just over the crossbar 2:49 into the second and followed it up with another bid that sailed just high on a direct kick five minutes later. Quincy's best chance of the game up to that point came with 29:12 remaining when Carvalho again snuck past the defense using some stellar footwork only to have his shot on an open net rattle off the post.

Carvalho finally got something to show for his effort when he deftly dribbled past the defense and unloaded a shot into the corner from inside the box to put Quincy on the board 1-0 with 13:22 remaining.

There was a scary moment a few minutes later when Carvalho got his legs tangled with a Scituate player and fell to the ground. He didn't have time to get out of the way of a Sailor player attempting to clear the area and took the ball square in the face. Thankfully, Carvalho was able to walk off the field on his own power and Spendlove said he was experiencing some blurred vision on the bench.

The Presidents continued to attack the Sailors' net and were able to add to their lead. Kennedy Ramos came into the game and put pressure down the right wing for Quincy and it proved to be a key ingredient in the second half. Ramos pushed the ball past midfield and centered it into traffic where McCormick settled it and popped home a shot for a 2-0 advantage with 9:38 left to give the Presidents a little more breathing room.

"Kenny's only a sophomore and hasn't had a lot of playing time lately, but we know what he's going to do when he comes on," said Spendlove. "He has some wheels. That's the beauty again of a deep bench. We got some kids who haven't had a lot of playing time.

"I was very relieved when we got the first goal but even more relieved when we got the second one. We shoot ourselves in the foot sometimes and the way the game had gone we worked hard to get that first one."

Quincy broke Scituate's back on the final tally, this one coming on a direct kick that Soares deposited into the far side for the three-goal bulge with 7:16 remaining.

Smith did his job in the first half keeping the explosive Scituate offense off the board on the way to earning his third shutout of the season. No save was better than his first in the opening minute of the game when he deflected a shot wide on a breakaway bid by Mike Pasini from 20 yards out.

Scores & More: Week 3 Youth Football Highlights

By PATRICK McDERMOTT

Here are scores and highlights of Week 3 Quincy Youth Football League action.

West Quincy Elks vs. Quincy Point Panthers Varsity

Elks 38 Panthers 8

Coaches Justin Thorley and Mike Lally had the West Quincy Elks well prepared on both sides of the ball.

West Quincy got on the board early with a touchdown run by Franco Calabro. After his first TD was called back, Patrick DeVoy had a nice 20-yard TD reception from Calabro. Ethan Von Roeus showed his speed blazing up the side line with a 40-yard TD sprint. Stuart Dozier took a nice screen 50 yards to pay dirt. Then, a well-timed play call by Coach Thorley set the table for an electric 60 yard, untouched TD jaunt by Dozier.

Eoin Gormley kicked 4 extra points along with some scrappy play on the field. The Elks effort was rounded out by the usual tough play at corner from Sean O'Toole and non-stop, hard-nose sideline to sideline play by Evan Dyer on defense.

JV Elks 28 Panthers 0

The West Quincy Elks started fast and moved the ball well behind QB Amarion Robinson.

Joe Brahimi had an impressive 60-yard TD catch and run to get things going. Aidan Dyer had a 25 yard "beast-mode" TD run. Gianni Perea ran an explosive 6-yard touchdown.

After completing a few tight passes, QB Robinson rumbled for a touchdown. Offensive and defensive lines coached by Jimmy Jaehnig once again gave very strong performances.

Billy Hibbard is a two-way force who the ball always seems to find. Coach Sheldon Smith's secondary was locked down. MLB/RB Bobby Jaehnig along with Aidan Dyer were dual threats as always dishing out Elk physicality.

Houghs Neck Manets vs. Milton Mustangs Varsity

Manets 28 Milton 0

The Houghs Neck Manets (3-0) continue to impress with their second shutout in as many weeks. Manets came out of the gate fast with Quarterback Lukas Schaaf hitting running back Isaiah Steinberg on a 45-yard pass. Then 3 plays later Schaaf hit Derek Little on a 8-yard touchdown pass.

On their next offensive possession Steinberg ran 55 yards for one of his three touchdowns for day. Steinberg finished with 7 carries for 188 yards and three touchdowns.

Coach Mike Flavin received great play from Devante Williams, Trenton Souza, Mike Cugini, Steven Dunn and many others. Flavin said his team continues to get better every week from hard work at practice.

Manets play division rival North Quncy Apches Sunday at 1 p.m.

JV Manets 38 Mustangs 0

The Manets JV defeated the Mustangs 38-0 to improve to 2-1 on the season. It was an all-out team effort with touchdowns scored by Michael Cascarano (2), Campbell Tierney(2), Devin Desmond and 2-point conversions scored by Cascarano, Desmond, Kevin Feeley and Devin "Lil D" Lopez.

The defense shut out Milton's offense with sold performances by Zach Luggelle, Cinneide Santoro, and a key fumble recovery by Adam O'Neil. Next week the Manets look to avenge last week's 8-2 loss to division rival North Quincy Apaches.

Freshman Manets 34 Milton 0

Houghs Neck Manets freshmen (3-0) continued their unbeaten and un scored upon streak with a dominating performance Saturday. Running back Teddy Lynch, Quarterback Dean Schaaf and lineman Max Van Tassell were just a few that gave Coach Kevin Gomez top performances.

The Manet freshman team hasn't allowed a point since 2013. A streak they look to continue next week against rival North Quincy Apaches this Saturday.

Jimmy Cannon Wins For QNQ Cross Country

Coming off a first win is always motivation to keep a team working hard.

When QNQ cross country got off the bus in Plymouth they intended to win both ends of the match with the Eagles, but in the end superior depth got the best of Quincy.

The boys race featured a wire to wire run by Jimmy Cannon for the win with a close third by ever improving Peter Saccoach, but superior depth by Plymouth put 8 boys ahead of Aidan Golden and three more ahead of a banged up Kevin White and the result was a 24-37 loss on the grounds of the Plymouth Community Intermediate School.

Surprising freshman Kyle Ollman was 18th only 11 seconds behind white and AJ Nelson and Nick Ouellette also frosh were 23rd and 28th. Other finishers for QNQ were Kirian-Philip Koforuwola-Kuti (30), Ben Nutting (36), Alan Van Gorder(37), Shane Stokes (39), Eric Mei (40), Alex Ouellette (41) and Sean Scanlon (44). The boys record stands at 1-1.

The girls race featured two of the best runners on the south shore in Plymouth's Jordan Callahan and Sam Curtin both state level runners. But Abby Murphy showed little respect for her elders staying on their heels for most of the race finishing 3rd. Her time was under 7 minutes a mile - quite fast. Jackie Coleman was 11th and LaQueen Arias was 12th for QNQ. other finishers were Ciana Williams (16), Grace Anderson (18), Eve Anderson (19), Nora Comerford (25), London Nguyen (26) and Kiersten Irion (27). The QNQ have yet to get a win but are ever-improving.

The team hosted Duxbury Tuesday and Hingham Oct. 6. Hingham has the top boy in the league in Mike Durkin so a battle with Jimmy Cannon in cooler weather might result in some super performances and chance to break Patrick Gilmore's (Whitman-Hanson) course record of 13:20.

Jack O'Connor and Justin Daileader were a constant presence for the Sailors in and around the Quincy box, but weren't able to get off any high-percentage shots on frame.

"He's very solid this year," said Spendlove of his talented keeper. "What we're doing this year is we're clearing out for him very quickly so he doesn't have bodies in front of him. Rob's a great shot stopper. We clear the bodies out so he can see the shots. He's good at what he does."

After Hashim Hamdi misfired in close for the Presidents, Scituate very nearly broke the tie when Daileader redirected a shot that missed the inside of the far post by a foot. Leandro Batista had the final bid of the half with 4:52 remaining, but was denied inside the 20.

"It's our only game on grass all season, and it's the first time in awhile that we've had to deal with a two-game losing streak. It will be interesting to see how the kids react to that challenge," said Reardon.

It was clear before the season began that this was an inexperienced team which would learn and develop through the early games. There has been a thrilling win over Braintree, a narrow defeat to Milton and a decent showing against one of the league's powers in Plymouth North. Reardon has learned some things about his team.

"The first thing I've learned is that I love how they compete," he said. "Physically, I'm pleased with where we are. We play hard. We have to improve the mental part of the game. We need to play sharper, smarter football and cut down on the mistakes."

In other local football action last Friday night, the North Quincy Red Raiders bowed to Hanover, 56-0. North Quincy hosts Pembroke Friday night at Veterans' Memorial Stadium. Kick off is 7 p.m.

Recreation 3-On-3 Basketball Tournament Winners

The Quincy Recreation Department recently held its annual citywide 3-on-3 basketball tournament at the Fenno Street courts.

Teams earn the chance to represent their parks by finishing in the top three of their respective district tournament.

In the double-elimination tournament, games are played to 11 or highest score after 10 minutes and are officiated by Recreation Leaders. Girls and boys compete separately, and youngsters are divided by age group where they compete in the Midget (Ages 8-10), Junior (11-12), and Senior (13-16) divisions.

The tournament was directed by Sports Specialists Edward Grennon, Colin Ryan and Paul Carson.

The Midget division saw O'Rourke and Heron Road playground matched up in the championship. Behind the unselfish play of Daithi Quinn and Joe Campo, O'Rourke was able to claim the title. Also playing well for O'Rourke was Evan Devane, Christian Monteiro-Spagnolo, and Chase Morales.

Heron Road mounted a late comeback effort that felt just short, led by the hot shooting of TJ Manton. Also competing for Heron Road was Joseph Frye and Teddy Lynch.

In the Junior division, the championship saw two teams from Perkins playground looking to take home the title and bragging rights on the park. Matt Kelly and Scott Gutro showed great passing skills, and Will Cook played strong defense for Perkins A.

In the end, the size and shooting of the Perkins B proved too much, as they walked away victorious. Declan Geary and Ryan Tapper played especially well for the champion Perkins B, and Tyler Le wowed the crowd with his ball handling ability.

The Senior division was hotly contested, with several teams who could have easily taken home the championship. After a long, challenging road, the title game featured teams from Labreque and Fenno Street. The talent was apparent from the start, and the game was close until the final buzzer.

In the end, Kyle Murphy and Lebreque claimed victory over Fenno Street. Murphy and Jeff Petithomme lit it up from outside while Ugo Kamalu dominated the paint to lead Labreque to the championship.

Fenno Street was a tough out, as Dylan Richardson and John MacDonald used their athleticism and defensive ability to make everything difficult for Labreque. Also playing well for Labreque was Elmer Lainez and CJ Jaehnig.

The Girls tournament was competitive and exciting, and when the dust cleared O'Rourke and a combined Forbes Hill/Faxon park were the last teams standing. O'Rourke, led by Abby Dunn and Jenny Ayles, was able to win a close game. Also playing well for O'Rourke was Roseanna Piroli, Kailey Dalton, and Madison Ayles. They defeated a talented Forbes Hill/Faxon team who was paced by the scoring ability of Angelina Coletti and Paige Maze. Olivia Skinner and Tia DiBona also played well for the runners-up.

All champions and runners-up were presented certificates of excellence. The tournament was a success, as it was well attended and the youngsters all showed a great deal of sportsmanship.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Your moodier side might emerge this week. But the dark period should pass in time for the party-loving Lamb to go on a happy gambol with some very special people this weekend.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Yet again, you show your skill at being able to indulge in your love of the arts this week while still taking care of practical matters, including some still-unfinished business matters.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A potential change might appear to be what you've been looking for. In any event, consider both the negative as well as the positive possibilities before making any sort of decision.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Relationships continue to dominate your aspect this week on a mostly positive level, with just a few problem areas you can smooth over. Also, try to be flexible about travel plans.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) You love being on center stage, and while you absolutely purr at the sound of all that praise, be careful not to take on too many commitments at the expense of time spent with loved ones.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You might feel that you need to get involved in a matter concerning a friend or relative. But while the issues appear to be cut and dried, they might not be. Get more facts before you act.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A suggestion about a policy change could create heated reactions. Keep your mind open and resist joining in with naysayers unless they can show a real basis for their position.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) While potential career changes warrant your interest, don't ignore current job responsibilities. A personal relationship also can benefit from more of your attention.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Don't guess at what the facts might be if you hope to make the best decision possible. The wise course is to ask direct questions and act on the answers you get.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Your efforts involving that pesky problem should soon show positive signs of being resolved. This would allow you to shift some of your focus in another direction.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) While you enjoy well-deserved praise for getting a difficult job done, there's no time to relax. A new challenge looms. Expect more support from a once-strong critic.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You might still have explaining to do about your decision, but support grows as you continue to make your case. You also might want to start making plans for the upcoming holidays.

BORN THIS WEEK: You insist on making decisions based on facts, not on popular opinions. Have you considered a career in science?

Squantum Christian Fellowship

On Sunday, Oct. 4 at the 10 a.m. worship service, Squantum Christian Fellowship will devote the morning to a presentation of their work among Afghan refugees in Athens, Greece.

The team of 12 who worked at a refugee center in Athens Aug. 21 - 29 will give personal reflections on the outreach there, and also show photos of lives that were impacted. The Center is also involved in helping Kurdish refugees in Syria so there will be a DVD of the amazing work that God is doing there and how others can get involved.

The team included 7 men, 2 teenaged boys, and 3 women. They helped prepare meals that were served in The Center as well as in a local park where refugees congregate. The Center is open during the week for clothes distribution, bags of food and hygiene articles including vitamins and baby items, as well as English and German lessons.

The group from Squantum worked alongside the local team to organize resources for those days, teach language classes, provide a craft and games day for children, and renovate a room for displaying the clothes.

Team members say that the satisfaction and joy they experienced probably far outweighed their contribution, and each felt it was a unique personal blessing to be able to assist the local team in the never-ending needs of the refugee community.

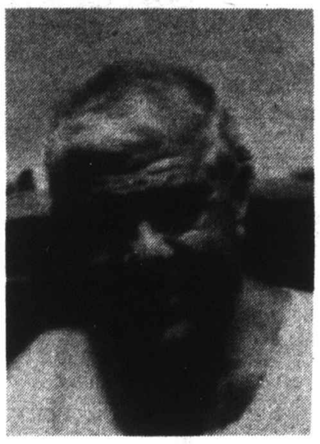
OBITUARIES

[illegible]ward K. Phillips



EDWARD K. PHILLIPS

A funeral Mass for Edward K. “[illegible]ie” Phillips of South Boston, formerly of Quincy, was celebrated Sept. 25 in St. Ann’s Church, Quincy.

Mr. Phillips died Sept. 20 surrounded by his family.

He attended South Boston High School and Newbury Junior College. He proudly served his country in the U.S. Marine Corps and was proud of his status of being his drill instructor’s “house mouse.” Mr. Phillips was an aide to Senate President William M. Bulger and served at the state Senate for more than 20 years and retired in 2002. He owned and operated the Seaport Bar and Grill and was one of the founding members of the Semper Fidelis Society.

He was very active in veterans’ issues. Mr. Phillips worked closely with the local Marine Corps recruiters and established a Marine of the Month program. In 2003, he was presented an Iraq flag from returning Iraq war veterans. This flag was on display at his restaurant and returning Iraq war veterans from all services signed their names. The final signature was General James T. Conway, then commandant of the U.S. Marine Corps. The flag has more than 2,000 signatures and is now placed in the Marine Corps Museum in Quantico, VA.

Mr. Phillips was passionate about helping veterans, politics, and especially his family. He enjoyed walking his dog Gunny at Castle Island and was well known in South Boston, as well as the State House and the restaurant business. He will be greatly missed by all who knew him.

QCUMC Launching Meditation and Potluck Program

At 6 p.m. on Saturday, Oct. 3, the Quincy Community United Methodist Church will launch a brand new program: An evening of meditation followed by a potluck supper.

"The evening is an expansion recovery programs' 11th step," the Rev. Dr. Susan F. Jarek-Glidden, the church's pastor, said. "That step encourages people to develop a deeper relationship with their higher power and the half-hour meditation is designed to do just that."

The meditation portion of the event will be led by the church's lay leader, Yvonne Duncanson. A potluck supper will be held following the meditation time.

"This is not just a 'one shot deal.' It will be held on the first Saturday of every month," Jarek-Glidden added.

Although based on recovery programs' 11th step, the evening is open to everyone, whether involved in recovery programs or not. The church is very proud to be an active part of recovery, sponsoring at least one recovery program each and every day.

The church is located at 40 Beale St., across the street from the Wollaston MBTA station, and is handicapped accessible through the entrance nearest the flagpole. For more information call the church at 617-773-3319.

Quarry Hills Vote Pushed To Nov. 9

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council could vote to approve a 269-unit apartment complex at Quarry Hills as soon as Nov. 9 after the developer behind the proposed project said Monday he would be willing to set aside more than a quarter-million dollars to signalize the intersection at the bottom of Ricciuti Drive, provided the state gives that idea the green light.

City Solicitor Jim Timmins said he would work with developer William Locke, Council President Joseph Finn, Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci and peer reviewers for the project over the next several weeks to draft a permit that the council could vote on Nov. 9 when it convenes again as the city's special permit granting authority. This is a departure from the process followed with other recent SPGA projects, such as the Avalon Quincy residential proposal, where the council would vote on a development and then approve the final permit several weeks later. No vote was taken at Monday night's meeting.

Rep. Bruce Ayers spoke about the need to improve the intersection in question, where Ricciuti Drive meets Willard Street, near the start of Monday's two-and-half hour meeting, calling it among the most dangerous in his legislative district; a southbound off ramp from Interstate 93 leads directly into the intersection.

"This whole corridor has been a problematic situation for a lot of us," Ayers said.

Because of its proximity to the off ramp, two state agencies – the Massachusetts Department of Transportation and the Department of Conservation and Recreation – would have input into any change at the intersection, along with the city. Ayers on Monday said he was concerned state transportation officials had not been contacted to gather input and said they should be given a chance to do so.

"It's a very dangerous intersection," Ayers said. "I think it needs further scrutiny – at least to have the state have an opportunity to weigh in on these traffic measures to make sure ample steps are being taken to protect public safety of motorists and pedestrians in that area."

Palmucci, whose ward includes Quarry Hills, said he was inclined to agree with Ayers and wait for the state officials to weigh in,

Senate Passes Bill Targeting Excess Opiates

By SCOTT JACKSON

The state Senate has unanimously approved legislation aimed at preventing opiate addiction by reducing the number of unused prescription painkillers that are diverted for misuse.

The bill was introduced by Senators John Keenan of Quincy and Jennifer Flanagan of Leominster, who were appointed by Senate President Stan Rosenberg earlier this year to lead a special subcommittee on the issue. The Senate voted in favor of the bill Oct. 1, sending it to the House for review. Gov. Charlie Baker has said he hopes the bill reaches his desk for approval by Thanksgiving.

The bill includes several major policy initiatives meant to curb opiate abuse, from a drug stewardship program for manufacturers to giving patients the explicit ability to request a smaller number of pills to increasing the availability of non-opiate painkillers.

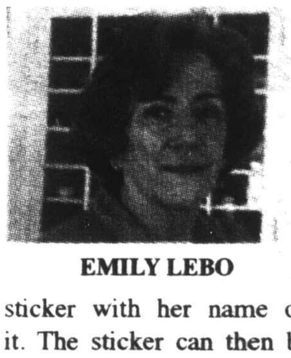
Lebo Seeking School Seat As Sticker Candidate

Former School Committeewoman Emily Lebo will run a sticker or write-in campaign in an effort to win one of the three school seats in this fall's city election.



EMILY LEBO

Lebo was elected to a four-year term in 2009. She was unseated in the 2013 city election after newcomer Noel DiBona topped the school ballot.

Lebo's name will not appear on the Nov. 3rd ballot. There are three candidates on the ballot for three seats: incumbents Paul Bregoli and Kathryn Hubley and political newcomer James DeAmicis. DeAmicis, if elected next month, would be the youngest resident elected to a local office in Quincy history.

Lebo would be the first resident elected by stickers if her write-in campaign is successful Nov. 3. She said she plans to mail out cards to registered voters with a sticker with her name on it. The sticker can then be placed on the ballot under school committee where it states "write in." A voter would also have to fill in the oval next to the write-in vote to cast the ballot.

In a statement Tuesday, Lebo said she decided to mount a sticker campaign after careful consideration.

"Acknowledging that with the recent withdrawal of an experienced and viable candidate, the voters and parents of children in Quincy have been left with an uncontested race," Lebo said, referring to former

Limited Tree Damage Reported

By SCOTT JACKSON

Limited damage to the city's trees was reported following several days of wet and windy weather that lasted through the weekend.

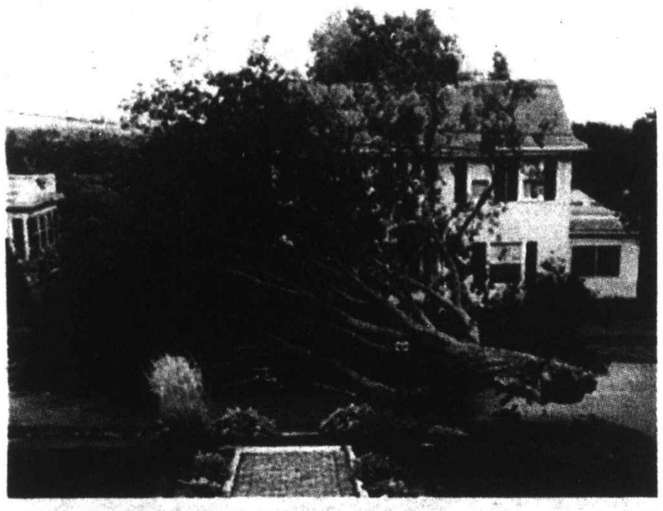
The inclement weather began the morning of Sept. 30 with heavy rain; high winds persisted through Sunday with intermittent showers. Chris Cassani, executive director of the Quincy Park Department, said 'limited' damage to the city's trees was reported during that period.

"We had limited damage," Cassani said. "Limbs were coming down throughout the week and into the weekend, but it was not on the order of the damage we saw last October. We were lucky."

A nor'easter that struck New England in late October 2014 caused damage to trees that cleanup crews reported was among the worst they had seen, Cassani said at the time; the Park Department received more than 100 calls for downed trees and limbs over the course of two days during that storm.

Two downed trees were reported during the recent weather event – one on Summit Avenue in Wollaston and the other on Spence Avenue in Quincy Point. Reports of downed limbs were scattered across the city, Cassani said.

"It was nothing out of the ordinary for how wet and windy it was," he stated.



WET, WINDY WEATHER Saturday caused two trees to fall including this 50-foot maple tree in front of 90 Summit Ave. Another tree was reported down on Spence Avenue in Quincy Point. The Park Department also responded to reports of downed limbs throughout the city. Photo Courtesy Bob Guthrie

QHS Principal Frank Santoro who had qualified for the ballot but dropped out of the race in August.

Lebo noted she has been an educator for the last 27 years and would bring a level of experience and maturity to the School Committee. Lebo said she has a history of working closely with the current School Committee members, the district administrators, and the staff of the Quincy Public School system.

Lebo's previous School Committee experience included working as the Chair person of the Special Education subcommittee. Additionally, Lebo worked to implement the state required Educator Evaluation System with both district and union representatives. She also said she "championed" the return and revamping of the Media Specialist positions for the middle schools and was also instrumental in forming and chairing the first Teaching and Learning subcommittee which is responsible for working closely with the district administrators on the formation of school and program improvement plans which are designed to benefit all students.

Lebo said there will be important issues facing the School Committee over the next four years, including the oversight of an annual $100 million budget.

"I believe with my background, I am well prepared to hit the ground running as a member of the Quincy School Committee," she added.

QPS Instrumental Music Department Seeks Instruments

Calling all used instruments!

The Quincy Public Schools Instrumental Music Department is growing as more students are becoming interested in playing a musical instrument. In order to ensure a successful program, we need to have extra instruments on hand for children who forget their instrument at home or to loan out when instruments are damaged and in need of repair.

Therefore, we are asking you to dig through your closets, attics and garages for gently used musical instruments. Your tax-deductible instrument donations will be repaired and used at all elementary, middle, and high schools in Quincy.

We are seeking Western band and orchestra instruments, including flutes, oboes, clarinets, saxophones, bassoons, French horns, trumpets, trombones, baritones, euphoniums, tubas, violins, violas, cellos, string basses, and most percussion instruments. At this time, we are not accepting recorders, guitars, drum sets, or pianos.

Instrument donation drop-offs will be accepted at Faxon Field on Tuesday, Oct. 13, between the hours of 6-7:30 p.m.

Please direct any questions about the program to qpsbands@gmail.com.

Adams Park Employee Charged With Bomb Hoax

Plainville Man Held After Threatening Co-Worker Due Back In Court Friday

By SCOTT JACKSON

An Adams National Historical Park employee charged with threatening a co-worker with an inert claymore mine following a disagreement is due back in court tomorrow (Friday) for a dangerousness hearing.

Bruce Beck, a 45-year-old Plainville resident, was arraigned Oct. 1 in Quincy District Court on charges of possession of a hoax device, assault by means of a dangerous weapon (a hoax device), and receiving stolen property worth more than $250. A plea of not guilty was entered on his behalf and Beck was ordered held without bail pending Friday's hearing.

Caroline Keinath, the park's deputy superintendent, on Monday said Beck remains a National Park Service employee and declined further comment when asked if he had been placed on leave, citing an active investigation.

According to Quincy police, officer Ken Wood and his explosive ordinance detection K-9 partner, Major, responded to the Beale House at 181 Adams St. after a report that an employee may have brought explosives to work around 7:50 a.m. on Sept. 30.

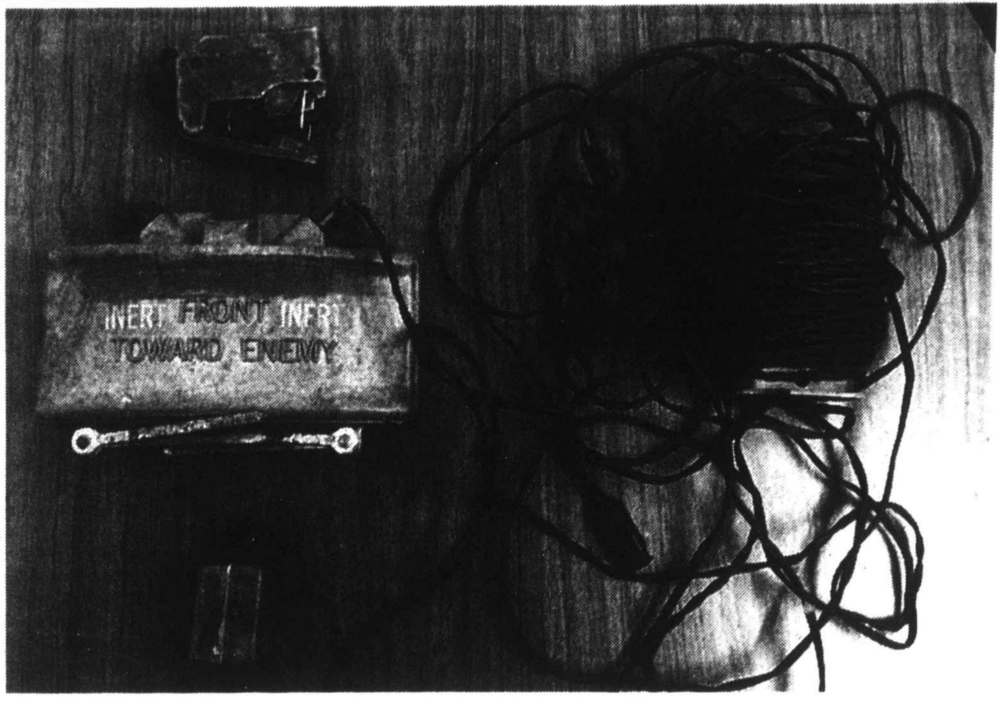
Witnesses reported that Beck and another employee had a minor disagreement the previous day, police said. Those witnesses told officers Beck entered a break room on Sept. 30 where numerous employees – including the victim – were located and slammed a green satchel on the table and began removing items one at a time, deliberately pointing each at the victim.

Those items included a blue claymore mine and an M57 electrical firing device (clacker), according to police. Beck began depressing the lever several times, which made a loud clacking noise, police said. Beck collected the items and returned to his work area once the victim reached for his phone.

Wood recovered the satchel from Beck. Inside, police said Wood found a blue training aid claymore mine and numerous military items – the M57 firing device, an empty small plastic box labeled "10 blasting caps," and trip wire wool spool. Wood was able to determine the items were not dangerous through his training and experience.

Wood's K9 partner, Major, and a Boston police bomb squad then searched the building and found no explosives. Beck's vehicle was also searched at the time and no explosives were found there either.

Beck's Plainville residence was then searched with the assistance of Plainville and state police, at which time a second inert claymore mine was located, according to Quincy police.



QUINCY POLICE have charged Bruce Beck of Plainville with bringing an inert claymore mine to the Adams National Historical Park where he worked and threatening a co-worker with it following a dispute. Beck pleaded not guilty at his arraignment and is due in court tomorrow (Friday) for a dangerousness hearing; he is being held without bail until then.

Enhanced 9-1-1 Service Available To Residents

Public safety officials in Quincy announce Smart911, the national public safety service, is now available to all citizens to enhance 9-1-1 emergency services.

Smart911 allows citizens to create a Safety Profile online that includes any information about themselves or their household that they want 9-1-1 to have in an emergency. When that citizen makes a 9-1-1 call, their profile is immediately displayed to the 9-1-1 call-taker, resulting in far greater emergency response and saved lives.

"Smart911 will allow both 9-1-1 call takers and emergency responders to have more detailed information about a citizen in need, leading to faster response times and ultimately more lives saved," said Police Chief Paul Keenan. "I am proud of the city of Quincy for taking the initiative to explore the opportunities available to us through technology in order to provide better services to their community."

Smart911 allows citizens to create a Safety Profile at www.smart911.com for their household that includes any information they want 9-1-1 and response teams to have in the event of an emergency. When a citizen makes an emergency call, their Safety Profile is automatically displayed to the 9-1-1 call taker, allowing them to send the right response teams to the right location with the right infor-

EMERALD-CUT DIAMONDS

Diamond lovers with a real sense of daring may want to consider an emerald-cut diamond for their next piece of fine jewelry. Only 3% of diamonds are emerald cut. Aside from being rare, emerald-cut diamonds are distinctive with an unmatched vintage look. The unique appearance of the emerald cut is created by the step cuts on the pavilion (the lower hemisphere of the gemstone) that lead up to a large, open table (the large flat surface at the top of the gemstone). As a result, emerald-cut diamonds have a 5% greater surface area than a round brilliant diamond of the same weight. This means that an emerald-cut diamond provides the look of a larger diamond at a lower price.

Emerald-cut diamonds vary from nearly square to a narrow rectangle. You can see imperfections in an emerald cut engagement ring more clearly than you would in a round diamond. Make sure your jeweler will do a thorough visual inspection of the stone before you purchase it. For more information, please call 617-773-3636. Our prices have always been more than competitive with no fake markups in order to offer huge discounts. We are located at 1402 Hancock St. in Quincy Center.

DeAmicis Hopes To Make A Difference

JAMES DeAMICIS

Next week, 2015 Quincy High School graduate James DeAmicis turns 19.

Next month, the Suffolk University freshman could become the youngest resident elected to local office in Quincy history.

DeAmicis is one of three candidates for three school committee seats on the ballot Nov. 3. A fourth candidate emerged Tuesday when former School Committeewoman Emily Lebo announced she is running a sticker or write-in campaign for one of the three school seats.

We don't know if DeAmicis will be successful in his school bid Nov. 3.

What we do know is he hopes his campaign will inspire a new generation of political activists in the City of Presidents when many his age are being prodded just to register to vote.

"If all goes as planned, I will be the youngest elected official in Quincy," DeAmicis said in a recent interview. "I'm hoping to inspire young individuals like myself to come forth and be a part of government whether it's run for political office or interning for somebody or just being a part of the public sector.

"I just really think this will inspire young individuals whether it's law or government or just service itself. I'm hoping that's what will happen and I'm really happy about that."

DeAmicis celebrates his 19th birthday next Wednesday, Oct. 14. Twenty days later – if elected Nov. 3 – he would become the youngest resident elected to local office eclipsing Michael D'Amico who was 20 when he unseated Ward 4 councillor Thomas Fabrizio in 1995.

But DeAmicis will be the first to tell you he's not a lock for that school seat. Yes, there are only three names on the ballot for three seats. But Lebo's entrance as write-in candidate certainly stirs the school committee election pot.

While DeAmicis could make political history Nov. 3, so could Lebo. If she is successful, she would be the first write-in candidate to be elected to local office in city history.

DeAmicis entered the school race earlier this year after School Committeeman David McCarthy announced he would vacate the seat he has held for nearly 12 years to run for councillor at-large. Frank Santoro, the retired QHS principal and former school committeeman, also announced he would run for the open school seat but after filing his papers in August to appear on the ballot, he withdrew from the race for personal reasons.

So, that leaves three names on the school ballot: incumbents Paul Bregoli and Kathryn Hubley who are each seeking second four-year terms and DeAmicis, a first-time candidate. We've said it before and we'll say it again: give the young man credit for gathering signatures to get his name on the ballot despite the long odds he would have had overcome had Santoro stayed in the race.

Coincidentally, DeAmicis was a sophomore at QHS when Santoro retired. He called the retired school leader a "really good principal."

"He has a good connection with the students and still does with many to this day," DeAmicis said referring to Santoro. "I remember all the times he'd be walking down the hallways with a smile on his face. He'd know every student's name. He always had such good advice. He cared about how our classes were going and what clubs we were in. He was very generous, too.

"I'm very grateful for having him as a principal for two years. I look forward to having his advice when I am school committee member. He is somebody who influenced my life and I want him to continue to influence my life."

When he first got in the race, DeAmicis says there were many who advised him to wait. But he stayed the course because he wants to make a difference.

"Whether I won or lost, me being a part of this race I was hoping it would inspire young individuals to come out and be a part of government. It never came across to me that right away I was going to win. I really had a lot of people who came up to me and said, 'it's a tough race. You're a young individual who is pursuing an education and doesn't have a background in any career. Why are you doing this?'

"I kept saying, 'I want to make a difference. I want to inspire young kids like myself to be a part of government. I just wished the people who did doubt me didn't doubt me as much. I wish they could have said, 'we wish you good luck, James. We'll consider you.'"

DeAmicis said some advised him to complete his education before turning to politics. He is studying for an undergraduate degree in American politics and pre-law at Suffolk.

"I said to them, 'why wait?' We're talking about how we need change in our schools. We need equal opportunity. We need someone who's going to voice opinions. Why not somebody who just went through the system? Somebody who knows the issues and someone who's going to work hard."

If DeAmicis is seated in January, he said one of the first things he hopes to accomplish is an open dialogue including conversations between the PTOs and the School Committee. "I can reach out to all these PTOs and be a service to them. I want to help them with their issues," he says.

Another initiative he says he would focus on is environmental education including solar energy.

"I want to expand the Green Team program across both high schools. I know there are budget concerns but I really believe as a city we're moving along in a green way but we need to worry about what's going to happen to the next generation when they don't have the tools they need to succeed with green isues."

He supports installing solar panels on every school building.

"But it's more than solar panels," DeAmicis continues. "We need to talk about how they are engineered. What is the history behind them? How do they work? It's more than just about global warming."

He also thinks the community service requirement for high school graduates should be addressed.

"Right now it's in a pretty good spot but we still have those students who don't have that push that's needed to make them understand how important community service is. I think we need to work on more education about how that requirement is so important to graduating as well as why it is meaningful.

"You should take something away from it beyond just being a graduation requirement. This is the impact you just made. That is why it's important. If they see that impact, I think it will encourage them to do even more community service."

DeAmicis also has a message for young adults and the importance of being civic-minded.

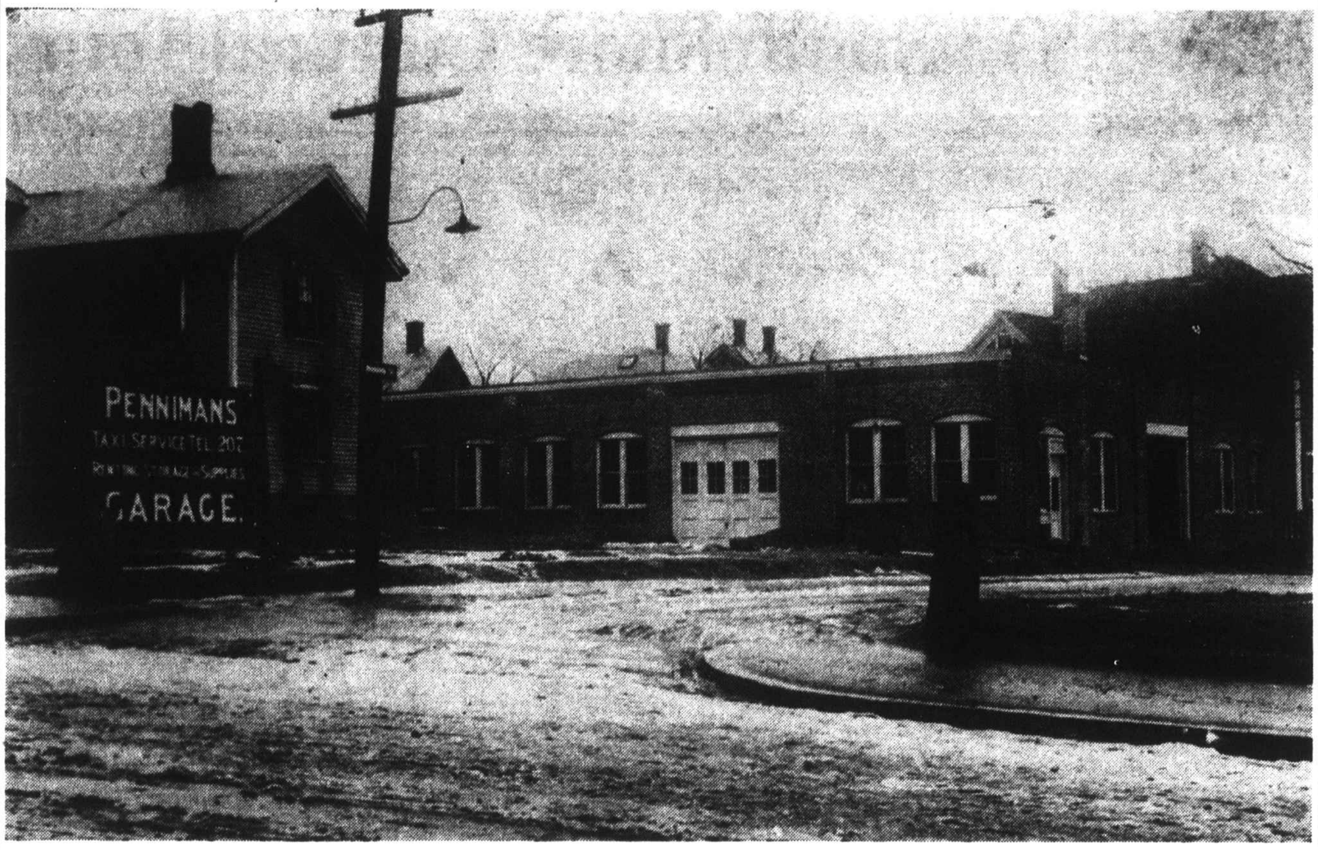
"The one important thing they can do is vote. You're given the opportunity to vote when you turn 18. I strongly suggest that if you are interested in government, then be a part of government. Do internships; volunteer for a campaign; get involved."

DeAmicis interned with Rep. Bruce Ayers when he was a sophomore in high school. He called it an amazing experience.

"A lot of students don't understand that these opportunities are out there. I'm hoping I can shine some light on that when I do become a public servant so that I can educate students if you are interested.

"Get more interested and get involved. The only way you can really find out if it's for you is to get involved."

Scenes From Yesterday



THIS IS A 1920 real photo postcard view of the Penniman Garage that was at 104 Washington St. on the corner of Wibird Street near Quincy Center. Starting in 1887, Charles H. Penniman had provided horse-drawn taxi service at the Quincy Depot and then he operated this garage until the late 1920s. On the back of this postcard Penniman noted that he had "just purchased a new Maxwell town car that he intended to keep for calling weddings and nice work." He lived with his wife in the house on the left. For many years the garage was home to the Quincy Automatic Transmission Co., but the site is now home to the Presidents Landing Condominiums. Today, on the right foreground of this view, a small island of land remains between Wibird Street and McGrath Highway. It was a much larger piece of land in the 19th century on which there were three houses including the homestead of the family of our library's first benefactor, Thomas Crane. John Adams Healthcare: A First-Rate Quincy Gem

I would like to make you all aware of a wonderful gem on Franklin Street in Quincy: The John Adams Healthcare Center.

I recently was a guest there and I can honestly say the people – all of them – were some of the kindest, warm, professional, concerned people you could possibly be with.

When you're not feeling so well and unsure of yourself that means so very much. They treat you like family.

If you have a loved on in need of rehab – full-time care or or not so sound mentally – believe me this place is first rate.

The Threat Of Carbon Dioxide In The Atmosphere

An area of climatic concern is in the middle of the North Atlantic wherein lies a blob of cold water. Unfortunately, the report did not state the salinity of this water.

Why this matters is because the Gulf Stream comes up from the south carrying warm water. This rotates past northwestern Europe warming the continent. Palm trees grow in southern Ireland and roses in Scotland while Great Britain is on the same latitude as Labrador.

At that point, due to cooling and relative increased salinity the Gulf Stream sinks and continues southward to continue its loop. The concern is that the blob of cold water may have as its source the melting of Greenland glaciers due to global warming.

If it is glacial fresh water, this would dilute the salinity of the Gulf Stream preventing the water from sinking and shutting down the Gulf Stream's circulation. Europe would plunge into a deep freeze.

I doubt that Quincy would escape this effect which could come within a decade. A person who is elected mayor for two terms may have to confront.

Those interested in the carbon dioxide content of the atmosphere which causes global warming could look at the website www.CO2now.org. From 2013 to 2015, CO2 content has risen from 395 to nearly 399 parts per million carbon dioxide.

The world is beginning to wake up to the threat of carbon dioxide in the atmosphere. The question is, whether or not the response will be in time.

Della Chiesa Tops Ticket, Burke's Strength Surprises

The surprising citywide strength shown by Ward Five Councillor George G. Burke featured the preliminary election in which Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa and Council President Charles L. Shea were nominated as mayoral candidates. The mayor led his challenger: 8,287 to 4,941.

Burke ran up a 8,049-vote to top the seven councillor at-large candidates. He showed power throughout the city, topping the list in five out of six wards.

Spirited ward councillor fights in Ward 1 and Ward 3 featured the ward council contests. Leo J. Hannon, a real estate broker, topped a list of five candidates in Ward 1 with 1,110 votes, while banker Frank McCauley polled 1,106. In Ward 3, John F. Koegler, 449 votes and Leo Burke, 439 votes, were nominated.

INCINERATOR SITE OPPOSED

A petition of 922 names opposing the location of an incinerator on the Swingle's Quarry property as recently proposed by Peter G. Ruscitto, was introduced in the City Council by Ward Four Councillor George B. McDonald. McDonald said some 300 more names would be added to the petition. McDonald recorded himself in "strong opposition" to the proposed incinerator site.

He explained his opposition was based largely on the fact that trucks would have to pass over streets that are winding and narrow.

United First Parish Church On South Shore Cultural Tour

By SCOTT JACKSON

The United First Parish Church was one of several stops on a recent cultural bus tour, led by the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, meant to highlight the role historic buildings can play in economic development.

Two-dozen members of the chamber joined local elected officials and leaders of community groups on the Oct. 1 visit to the Quincy Center church, which is also known as the Church of the Presidents because it is the final resting place of Presidents John and John Quincy Adams and First Ladies Abigail and Louisa Catherine.

Other stops on the tour included the Emery Estate in Weymouth; Braintree's Thayer Academy Performing Arts Center, Gilbert Bean Museum & Barn and town hall; and SouthField, where the tour stopped by the set of the film "Ghostbusters" and a naval aviation museum, among other sites. This was the second such cultural bus tour. In 2014, members of the chamber visited sites in Norwell, Duxbury, Cohasset and Plymouth.

Peter Forman, president and CEO of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, said Quincy leads the effort in tying historical buildings to economic growth, citing the plan to construct a new public park linking the church to City Hall.

"This is our second annual cultural bus tour. The purpose of it is to familiarize some of our leadership

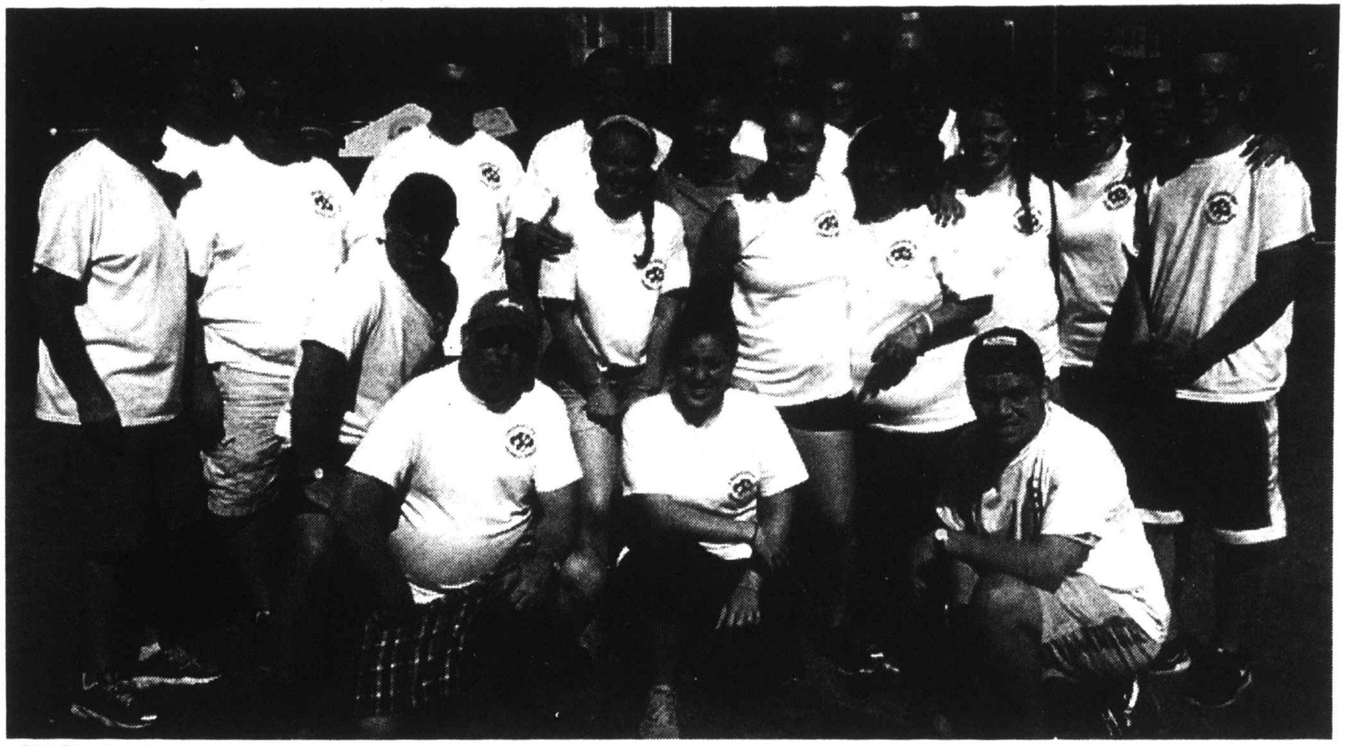
Quincy Police - Minton Family Yard Sale Big Success



MEMBERS OF THE Quincy Police Department joined up with friends of the Minton family to sponsor a community-wide yard sale recently at the Beechwood Knoll School. The event benefitted Dana Farber and the Jimmy Fund. The money raised is designated for families struggling with the financial burden that often goes along with the devastating diagnosis of cancer. Many people helped in so many ways, whether it was donating their time, donating items for the yard sale, soliciting gift cards/donations or sending in a financial donation. The yard sale raised over $5,000 and additional donations brought the total to nearly $12,000. Fundraising for this important cause will continue through Oct. 31. Anyone interested in supporting this great cause (not for research) can make a check out to: "Boston Marathon Jimmy Fund Walk" and send it to: Lt. Dan Minton, Quincy Police Department, 1 Sea St., Quincy, Ma, 02169.

WHAT'S COOKING
Marie & Suzie

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO and SUZIE FALCO

Italian Pizzelles

By MARIE

Today's recipe for pizzelles is one that my daughter Ann Marie bakes – a lot. She said that this cookie is usually made during the holiday season, but because her husband Dave is "addicted" to them with his morning coffee, she now bakes them at least three times a week.

Pizzelles are a thin round cookie made in a grill like device that has a pretty design on each one. The machine can be purchased at specially stores. She bought hers at Aiello's in Quincy.

You can also buy pizzelles already made in many markets, but they never are as thin or as flaky as homemade!

PIZZELLES

3 eggs
3/4 cup sugar
1 tablespoon Anisette extract
1 stick butter (melted)
1 1/2 cups flour

Beat eggs and add the sugar, butter and anisette. Add the flour and mix thoroughly. Drop 1 teaspoon of the mixture for each cookie and cook until golden. There is no need to flip them because they cook on both sides.

Magic Mushroom Powder

By SUZIE

Shiitake mushrooms have been used medicinally by the Chinese for more than 6,000 years. They are rich in B vitamins, pantothenic acid, B2, B6, niacin, choline, folate, zinc, manganese, and a wide variety of phytonutrients. Recent studies have determined that the bioavailability of iron from shiitake mushrooms may be even better than we thought as well.

(Certified organic shiitake mushrooms that have also been forest farmed—can make a great food choice in terms of sustainable... agriculture. Just look for the USDA's organic logo on your shiitake mushrooms to determine if they are certified organic.)

No health benefit is better documented for shiitake mushroom than immune support. Numerous studies have shown the ability of whole shiitake mushrooms to help prevent excessive immune system activity. On the other hand, an equal number of studies have shown the ability of shiitake mushrooms to help stimulate immune system responses under certain circumstances. In other words, shiitake mushrooms appear able to enhance immune function in both directions, giving it a boost when needed, and cutting back on its activity when needed. That's the beauty of herbs!

One especially interesting area of immune system support involves the impact of shiitake mushrooms on immune cells called macrophages. Macrophage cells are responsible for identifying and clearing potentially cancerous cells from the body. In order to carry out this task, they need to be "activated" in a particular way. Shiitake mushrooms are able to help macrophage cells achieve this activated profile so that they can do a better job clearing potentially cancerous cells. Researchers refer to this result as an "anti-cancer immunity" that is enhanced by shiitake mushroom intake. It is believed that adding shiitake mushrooms to your diet is likely to offer you anti-cancer benefits, especially with respect to prevention of prostate cancer, breast cancer, and colon cancer.

Here is a wonderful recipe for MAGIC MUSHROOM POWDER that can be used in place of straight salt in recipes, scrambled eggs, meat dishes, soups, chili, really, anything! This recipe is taken from the Paleo Nom Nom blog.

3 ounces dried porcini mushrooms
2 cups sea salt
3 tablespoons red pepper flakes
2 tablespoons dried thyme
1 tablespoon freshly ground black pepper

Dump your dried mushrooms in the food processor and pulse a few times to chop them up uniformly. If the lid of your food processor isn't on tight, a fine mist of mushroom dust will erupt from the crack, so check the seal before you continue blitzing.

Next, turn the processor on for 2 minutes or as long as it takes for the mushrooms to break down into a fine powder. (If you use a super-charged blender like a Vitamix, you'll finish in less time.)

In a large bowl, combine the powdered mushrooms, salt, red pepper flakes, dried thyme and freshly cracked black pepper.

Stir well to combine.

Once the red pepper flakes are evenly distributed, you're all set!

Store in little jars and give away as gifts or in a large jar for yourself!

Nancy's Kale Caesar Pasta Salad

By MARIE

Of all the vegetables there are, kale seems to be the most popular one in town. When we were growing up and had a large vegetable garden, we always had kale.

My mother would cook it with olive oil and garlic and it was always so delicious. Years went by before I saw it so often in the markets.

Today's recipe is for a kale caesar pasta salad given to me by my daughter Nancy. Kale comes frozen and one in which I like to use for this dish, but any way is delicious.

KALE PASTA SALAD

1 pound bow tie pasta
6 tablespoons mayonnaise
1/3 cup Parmesan cheese
3 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
1 tablespoon Dijon mustard
1 tablespoon olive oil
1 clove of garlic (crushed)
Salt and pepper
1 large bunch kale, stemmed and chopped (or frozen).

In a bowl, whisk the mayonnaise, and add the Parmesan cheese, lemon juice, mustard, olive oil, garlic and salt and pepper.

Cook the pasta according to directions. While the pasta is hot, add the kale tossing to combine. Add the dressing and toss gently until well blended. It is delicious warm

Vigil Underscores Mission To Combat Drug Abuse

By MIRIAM JOSEPH

The City of Quincy is on a mission to combat drug abuse. Quincy is no exception to the nationwide abuse of alcohol, prescription drugs, opioids and other illegal substances, and the city has recently revved up its attention to them.

At a recent candlelight vigil for victims of drug overdose, the number of public officials, clergy and agencies dedicated to drug recovery and treatment who were in attendance was evidence of that. Key among them was the City of Quincy's Substance Abuse Task Force which provides an opportunity to bring concerned people together and which is open to new organizations and ideas.

"The task force in and of itself was to bring all the parties together in collaboration," said Mayor Thomas Koch. "All the parties continue to do the work... they're out in the trenches. But what we have done more recently is formalize four quarterly meetings a year with the task force so that formally we are together and exchanging things.

"Even though everyone was talking to each other anyway, we've got some new infusion now because we have the treatment facility in Quincy, there are some new organizations, there are some off-shoots...the force has been working hard on this issue from day one, and we're working even better together."

The treatment center is the Phoenix House, a 64-bed facility providing recovery services with an on-site nurse practitioner; the house has been open for several months now. Established by the Gavin Foundation, which maintains several residential treatment centers in the state, the Phoenix House was built in response to the Massachusetts rise in opioid addiction.

Mayor Koch said, "John McGahan, president of the Gavin Foundation, one of the best in the country, right here in South Boston, comes to all our meetings now. They've been a resource to our schools, we're doing so much more now in our schools for programs, health interventionists, etc.

"There are so many people who feel helpless and want to do something. We had someone at our meeting today who lost a child a few months back and she wants to help—she doesn't want another parent to experience what she did."

Manet Community Health Center, with locations in North Quincy, Germantown and Houghs Neck is now in possession of the overdose-reversing drug Naloxone, more commonly known as Narcan, a life-saving drug formerly held only in the hands of EMT's, other first responders and emergency room personnel.

Manet's Program Director Kim Kroeger said, "We provide outreach to anyone who puts themselves at risk through injection drug use, including street outreach... we're in the streets of Quincy trying to meet people who put themselves at risk, talk to them about overdose prevention, and we try to offer services if they want treatment.

"We now give out Narcan to anyone in the community who wants it. We train people on how to use nasal Narcan, how to identify an overdose, and we can enroll them into the state pilot program where we can give them a kit, which includes two doses of Narcan. We like to train family members, anyone who would witness an overdose."

This year's vigil was led by long-time supporter Kathy Deady, activist and mother of a recovering addict, who recently received statistics from Lt. Patrick Glynn of Quincy Police Dept., that since January Narcan had been administered "'152 times with 92 saves.'" Despite this news, she still stressed 'hope' as this year's theme for the vigil.

Deady said, "This just isn't stopping! I just found out that there are four people here who have just had someone pass in the past week. If anything, the heroin use seems to be getting worse and worse! There are places to go now for treatment and the school department really has come a long way in their programs...they do a lot for the kids. There is more treatment now available in Quincy than ever before."

Norfolk County District Attorney Michael Morrissey took the podium at the event to read some of the 100 names of drug overdose victims. "In 2013, the District Attorney's office was notified that 64 people in the county had overdosed; in 2014, that went to 94, and just as I thought that couldn't get any worse, as I left the office today the number this year is 113 and we still have three months left to go," Morrissey said.

He noted that many people whose names were read at the vigil were from good families and had no criminal record. "Many people who try to go through recovery, and are between zero and 90 days out of recovery, become much more susceptible when they relapse...that's a high percentage of times those people will die of an overdose...they're trying to do the right thing,...it's really a long-term battle.

"Most of the crimes we see in the District Court and even in Superior Court, some of the serious crimes are driven by substance abuse issues...people trying to support habits, breaking and entering, assaults, thefts, etc. I think if you talk to the sheriff he'll tell you that many of the people in his jail awaiting trial or sentenced to the House of Correction also have substance-abuse issues."

Morrissey praised the efforts of all of these help agencies which are offered to users who pass through the courts. "If you're a drug peddler, a dealer, then you will go to jail, but if you are a user and you have a drug problem, then we have a variety of alternatives--diversion programs, recovery programs, and the Drug Court."

Norfolk County Assistant D.A. Laura Martin and Nancy Holler, both of whom lost loved ones to overdose, were instrumental in establishing the Quincy Anti-Drug Coalition, which Martin refers to as a service "about prevention and awareness which offers people resources that we know are out there.

"Nancy [whose son Brendan was an overdose victim] and I got a little tired of hearing all the sadness...it wears on you...and we said 'let's do something positive.' So we had a little break for the summer, but we asked the mayor if we had his blessing to start the coalition, and he said 'go for it' and was amazing, and supported us, along with the Quincy Police."

Martin explained, "Eleven years ago in August my brother Danny died three days after he left Bridgewater State Hospital detox and was supposed to start law school that month. Ever since then it's been my family's belief that you have to

OCTOBER IS DOMESTIC VIOLENCE AWARENESS MONTH

What You Can Do To End Domestic & Sexual Violence

Millions of women each year are victims of domestic and sexual violence. Violence against women affects everyone. The victims are our sisters, mothers, partners, friends, clients and co-workers. Most people know someone who is or has been a victim of violence, even though the victim may not have disclosed the violence. It is hard to know how to respond to the victim and to the perpetrator, but peer and community involvement can be the most effective forms of intervention.

Stopping the violence is good for business.

Domestic Violence has cost economies and companies millions of dollars in lost time, medical care, productivity etc. In the U.S., the cost of Domestic Violence to the economy is estimated at $8.3 billion a year.

If you are a business owner or a senior member of a company (e.g. a director, board member, senior manager), be pro-active in getting educated about how to intervene if you suspect or know that your employee or staff member is facing Domestic Violence.

Implement HR policies that makes provisions for the potential impact of Domestic Violence.

Massachusetts' Domestic Violence Leave Law, enacted 8/1/2014, provides employment protections for victims to use leave time to obtain medical attention, counseling, victim services, legal services, secure housing, obtain a protective order, appear in court, meet with a district attorney, attend child custody hearings, or address other issues related to the abusive behavior.

Contact DOVE for information and assistance with workplace violence policies and practices, or to help an employee who may be a victim.

Myths and Facts about Dating Violence

Boyfriends and girlfriends sometimes push each other around when they get angry, but it rarely results in anyone getting seriously hurt.
MYTH: Domestic violence is the number one cause of injury to women between the ages of 15 to 44 in the U.S. It causes more injuries than car accidents, muggings and rapes combined. Of the women murdered each year in the U. S., 30% are killed by their current or former husband or boyfriend.

While females can be abusive and abuse happens in same-sex couples too, it is much more common for males to abuse their female partners.
FACT: About 90% of known victims of relationship violence are females abused by their male partners.

DOVE is committed to partnering with diverse communities, families and individuals impacted by domestic violence.
We promote hope, healing, safety, and social change by providing a broad range of preventive and responsive services.

The Truth About Gluten

A Message From The Quincy Health Department

By RUTH JONES
BSN, RN, BC, CP-FS

RUTH JONES

Gluten-free products are increasingly popping up in many grocery and health food stores. This is great news for people with celiac disease, who for health reasons should not eat wheat with gluten. Yet remarkably, most of those who reach for gluten-free products do not have celiac disease and or even sensitivity to wheat. The market for gluten-free products is enormous. Many people may just perceive that a gluten-free diet is healthier. In fact, it isn't. For people with celiac disease, a gluten-free diet is essential. But for others, a gluten-free diet can lack vitamins, minerals, and fiber.

Authorities estimate that about 1% of Americans have celiac disease. The condition, caused by an abnormal immune response to gluten, can damage the lining of the small intestine and in turn, can prevent important nutrients from being absorbed. Symptoms of celiac disease include diarrhea, anemia, bone pain, and a severe skin rash called dermatitis herpetiformis. But celiac disease often has few or no symptoms at all. Subsequently, only about 5% to 10% of cases are diagnosed in the U.S.

How do you know if you have celiac disease? The only way is to be tested. The first test is typically a blood test that detects antibodies related to an abnormal immune response. If the blood test is positive, a biopsy is performed to confirm inflammation in the lining of the small intestines.

Those people who may be sensitive to gluten but don't have celiac disease may feel better on a diet with less gluten. So what's the harm with the rest of us trying a gluten-free diet a try to see how we feel? For starters, going gluten-free means saying no to many common and nutritious foods. Gluten is a protein found in wheat, barley, and rye. Gluten also surfaces in many whole grain foods related to wheat, including bulgur, farro, kamut, spelt, and triticale (a hybrid of wheat and rye). Some celiac disease specialists warn patients to avoid oats, as well.

Gluten itself doesn't offer unique nutritional benefits. But the numerous whole grains that contain gluten do. They're rich in an assortment of vitamins and minerals, such as B vitamins and iron, as well as fiber. Research shows that whole grain foods, as part of a healthy diet, may help lower risk of heart disease, type-2 diabetes, and some forms of cancer. The Dietary Guidelines for Americans recommends that half of all carbohydrates in the diet come from whole grain products.

There are a small number of whole grains that don't contain gluten, including amaranth, millet, and quinoa. But they are far less common than gluten-containing grains. Meeting the dietary guidelines goal can be a difficult task if you have to eliminate wheat, barley, rye, and other gluten-containing whole grains.

Because wheat is pervasive in the American diet, totally eliminating gluten requires embracing a whole new diet. You would have to eliminate most breads, crackers, breakfast cereals, traditional pastas, pastry goods, and an expansive range of processed foods made with small amounts of gluten. And any time you eliminate complete categories of food that you've been accustomed to eating, you run the risk of nutritional shortcomings.

A 2005 report from the American Dietetic Association cautioned that gluten-free products tend to be low in a wide range of important nutrients, including B vitamins, calcium, iron, zinc, magnesium, and fiber. There's little point in assuming that risk unless you legitimately have celiac disease or gluten sensitivity. There's also little point in eliminating just some gluten. For people who are sensitive, even trivial amounts can cause damage to the small intestines. So an almost gluten-free diet isn't going to alleviate the problem.

Choosing gluten-free foods has another disadvantage. Most gluten-free alternatives are significantly more expensive than their conventional equivalents. The bottom line is, If you think you may have a problem with gluten, get tested.

Thanks to the mounting selection of gluten-free foods, it has become far simpler for people with true gluten problems to eat healthy diets. Unfortunately, not all the foods being marketed are healthy. Some are high in saturated fat or cholesterol. Others may be high in calories but contain very little in the way of nutrition. A collection of herbal remedies have also surfaced, promising to diminish gluten sensitivity, but there is insignificant evidence that any of them are beneficial.

The foundation of a healthy gluten-free diet, as well as any diet, should be natural foods. Lean meats and fish, fruits and vegetables, and low-fat dairy products are all appropriate for people with celiac disease. Grains that don't contain gluten, such as quinoa and amaranth, are an additional healthy option. More and more products are being made with such grains, from breads and breakfast cereals to pastas.

Clinical trials of drugs that may help ease celiac disease, are currently being conducted. A vaccine for celiac disease is also under investigation.

The remedies under investigation are probably going to be useful mostly for lessening the damage caused by occasional lapses in the diet, rather than curing the condition. People with celiac disease will endure the task of having to eliminate wheat products from their diet. Fortunately, growing mindfulness of the prevalence of these conditions should continue to make that challenge a bit less complicated.

but only if it could be done in a reasonable amount of time.

"I don't want to say 'sure, let's slow this down, let's bring the state in,' but it's going to take three years for the state to do a study," Palmucci said. "I don't think that's fair to the applicant."

Ayers said he had spoken to both the city's and state's traffic engineers and they had agreed to a site visit, which he hoped would happen in the next several weeks, so he could provide councillors with state recommendations as they continued deliberations on the proposed development.

Mark Bartlett of Fay, Spofford & Thorndike, the firm retained by the Planning Department to peer review Locke's proposal, said the level of the service at the intersection is already bad. The proposed development, however, would not erode the level of service to the point where the state would consider installing a signal or other measures.

"We believe that the project is not necessarily going to be making this intersection so bad that it's going to trigger a warrant for a light signal or that type of activity by the state," Bartlett said.

The peer reviewers had recommended a road safety audit for the intersection, which the developer would have set aside $50,000 to pay for. City traffic engineer Deborah Finnigan, however, wrote in a letter to the council the $50,000 would be better spent going towards mitigation measures at the intersection without specifying what measures would be needed.

Locke's proposal includes two six-story buildings with 269 one- and two-bedroom market-rate apartments between them off Quarry Hills Drive as well as 430 parking spaces. Marian Manor previously received permission from the city to construct an assisted and independent living complex on site in 2007, but was unable to follow through on construction.

Locke addressed the council toward the end of the meeting after a motion had been made to continue deliberations to November without a permit being drafted in the interim. He said he was frustrated by the process because city officials had said there would be no undue delays in the permitting process.

Locke also said he was surprised the intersection at Ricciuti Drive and Willard Street would be an issue for his project because it was not an issue for other projects nearby, except for the hauling of dirt excavated from the Big Dig.

"With the exception of trucks that brought in the fill from the Big Dig, no one before us – the golf course, the clubhouse, the Villages at Quarry Hills and [Marian Manor] – were asked to rectify the intersection at Ricciuti and Willard," Locke said. "No one had mentioned to us that would be a major issue for this."

The developer said claims about the intersection made at a June public hearing by several Ricciuti Drive residents were exaggerated. Locke said a traffic study he commissioned found that 50 percent of cars were able to pass through the intersection in 15 seconds, 70 percent of cars get through in 30 seconds and between 88 and 92 percent get through within a minute. Thirty-three intersections in the city, he added, have crash rates that are at least 50 percent higher than the crash rate at Ricciuti Drive and Willard Street.

Locke said he had spoken to several different traffic engineers about the intersection in question and all concurred that the state would not allow a signal there. He told the council he would be happy to pay for one if the state did approve it. That signal would likely cost between $250,000 and $300,000, which Locke said he was willing to set aside as a condition of the permit.

"If you would approve this [project] at some point in the near future, we will pay for the light. If you can get the state to get the approval for the light, we will pay for it," Locke said. "I personally think it's not going to happen but if it did happen, I'd be happy to do it – absolutely thrilled to do it."

Locke added that he was also concerned about his ability to finance the project if the council did not approve it in the near future, saying 900 residential units already under construction in Quincy, which doesn't include an additional 492 proposed at Crown Colony.

"If we delay this further I can honestly tell you we risk our ability to finance the project," Locke stated. "I can tell you if there are 1,400 units going up at once in the city, we don't stand a chance in hell of financing this. If we get it approved in the near future, we can be under construction within several months on this thing."

In response, Palmucci said he would be willing to help move the project forward provided the developer was willing to set aside funds for future intersection work.

"If we can come up with a way in which we can achieve these goals and still allow this thing to move forward, I would be supportive of that," Palmucci said. "This is a good project. I'm supportive of the project."

QPS Enrollment Down Slightly

By SCOTT JACKSON

School Superintendent Dr. Richard DeCristofaro provided members of the School Committee with a preliminary update on enrollment and class sizes for the new school year during the committee's meeting on Sept. 30, and said enrollment has decreased by 56 students.

A more thorough presentation on enrollment and class sizes will be given during the next meeting of the School Committee on Oct. 14.

The Quincy Public Schools system had 9,339 students enrolled at the time of the Sept. 30 meeting. That number is down slightly from 9,395 at the same time last school year.

"That's not a significant difference," DeCristofaro said. "It's a difference of 56 students across the system."

Across the system's 11 elementary schools, the average kindergarten class size is 20 students. Classes in grades 1-3 average 19 students and fourth and fifth grade classrooms average 20 students.

At the city's five middle schools, DeCristofaro said more than half of all sections have fewer than 20 students and nearly four-fifths of all sections have 23 or fewer students. There are, however, some sections at Central and Atlantic they may need to be modified to bring their size down.

"Eighty-seven percent of our sections at middle school are 23 or less students in the class and 53 percent are 20 or fewer, which I think is extraordinary," the superintendent said.

"We do have a few sections at Atlantic and Central that we're working on to get the class sizes a bit down. We have a couple classes of 25 and 26…there is another section of 19 or 20, so we're looking to see if we can make some changes there but not disrupt our kids."

More than three-quarters of sections at the city's two high schools have 23 or fewer students though there are some sections with 30 students that may need to be addressed.

"Seventy-six percent of our sections are 23 or less. We go further, 91 percent are 25 or less," DeCristofaro said. "Again, there are some mation. Responders can be aware of many details they would not have known previously, and now fire crews can arrive at a house fire knowing how many people live in the home and the location of bedrooms, EMS can be advised of allergies or specific medical conditions and police can have the photo of a missing child in seconds rather than minutes or hours.

"When you call 9-1-1 even the simplest of details can be difficult to communicate in a time of panic," Keenan said. "By creating a Safety Profile before an emergency happens they are ensuring that we will have the information we need even if they can't communicate it."

With Smart911, citizens can link both home and work addresses to mobile phones, which can be passed on to responders in the field for more a detailed, rapid response.

Additional information including pets in the home, vehicle details in the event of an accident, and even emergency contacts can all be included in a Safety Profile. All information is optional and the citizen has the ability to choose what details they would like to include.

"The more information made available to 9-1-1 call takers the better," said Keenan. "Knowing how many people live in the home, where the bedrooms are located and even pets in the home can ensure we know who we need to help and where they might be."

Smart911 is currently available in 40 states and more than 1,500 municipalities across the country, and has been credited with positively impacting emergency outcomes including a missing child in which the girls photo and physical description were immediately available to 9-1-1 and responders, as well as a heart attack victim where an address and medical notes allowed responders to be dispatched to his location quickly.

Citizens are encouraged to create their Safety Profile with Smart911 to have their information immediately available to 9-1-1.

Smart911 is private and secure, is only used for emergency responses, and only made available to the 9-1-1 system in the event of an emergency call.

Koch To Hold Prescription Drug Abuse Forum Oct. 13

3 Bay State Congressmen Among Panelists

Mayor Thomas P. Koch will hold a Prescription Drug Abuse Forum in Quincy Tuesday, Oct. 13 bringing together a panel of leaders, including U.S. Representative Stephen F. Lynch, co-chairperson of the Congressional Caucus on Prescription Drug Abuse, professionals, and advocates committed to addressing the pressing issue of prescription drug abuse.

The forum will take place in the School Committee Room, Quincy Public Schools Coddington Building, 34 Coddington St. beginning at 7 p.m.

Among the other panelists are two other Bay State congressmen: U.S. Rep. Joseph Kennedy III (4th District) and U.S. Rep. Katherine Clark (5th District). Also scheduled to participate are: David W. Kelly, deputy director of the New England High Intensity Drug Trafficking Area; John McGahan, president and CEO of the Gavin Foundation; Joanne Peterson, founder of Learn to Cope, Inc.; Nancy Holler, member of the Mayor's Substance Abuse Task Force; Cheryl Bartlett, executive director, Cape Cod Regional Substance Abuse Prevention Initiative and Public Health; and Christine Leonard, executive director, Coalition for Public Safety.

October is National Substance Abuse Prevention Month, which highlights the commitment of local communities to raise awareness and work to confront the substance abuse epidemic.

The mayor's forum will highlight testimony from federal, state, and local officials, along with distinguished leaders in the abuse and recovery community. They will address current strategies to mitigate the impact of prescription drug abuse and discuss opportunities for further collaboration between the local community and all levels of government.

During Mayor Koch's tenure in office, the City of Quincy has been called a national model for combatting substance abuse by the White House. In April 2008, Mayor Koch commissioned Quincy's Substance Abuse Task Force, which has been recognized in the Commonwealth for effective community engagement on substance abuse issues.

The forum will present Quincy strategies, as well as the work of other cities and towns throughout Massachusetts.

'Christmas Through The Eyes On A Child' Parade Theme

Two Ward 1 residents have submitted the winning theme chosen for the 63rd Annual Quincy Christmas Parade.

"Christmas through the eyes of a child" was entered by Denise Bausemer of Bittern Road and George Norris of Manet Avenue and was selected from the 33 entries submitted to the Parade Committee in the annual contest to give the traditional event a theme. The parade theme is an important component to the groups and organizations that design floats and to the school children who take part in the Christmas Festivial poster contest.

Both theme winners and the poster winners receive the opportunity to ride the parade route in antique automobiles on the day of the parade. This year's parade will be the Sunday after Thanksgiving, Nov. 29.

The theme winners will also receive a commemorative plaque at the events annual award ceremony immediately following the parade.

The parade committee is accepting applications from groups, schools, and organizations who would like to participate in the parade by building a float. Floats are judged and cash prizes are awarded in several categories at the conclusion of the parade. Commercial floats may also be entered in the parade, however they are not considered for the cash awards and an entry fee is charged.

taken yet," Keenan said in a statement, "changing the way we approach prescription opiates at every step, from manufacturer, to prescriber, to dispensing, to individual patient choice and to the broader availability of alternative pain management options, all in an effort to turn around our overreliance on these products."

The drug stewardship program in the bill would make pharmaceutical manufacturers responsible for the safe disposal of unused pills. Companies would be responsible for funding and operating collection kiosks and mail back programs, or paying an annual assessment. If approved, it would be the first statewide stewardship program in the country, Keenan said, expanding on county-level requirements in California and Washington.

A second part of the bill, originally introduced as an amendment by Keenan, gives patients the right to have pharmacists fill certain prescriptions for painkillers with a lesser quantity than prescribed. All schedule II opiates – a class that includes drugs such as OxyContin and fentanyl – would be written in an "up to" format instead of a fixed quantity as a result. Pharmacists and prescribing doctors would both have to advise patients of their right to a lesser fill.

Keenan said his amendment met with initial opposition. He noted patients do have the ability to request lesser amounts currently, but it's not happening; patients are often encouraged to take a greater quantity "just in case" they are needed.

"With this amendment we are giving patients greater control over pain medications, recognizing that pain tolerance differs from patient to patient," Keenan said.

Another portion of the bill creates a voluntary non-opiate directive, which allows patients to record a legally binding order in their medical records that they should not be administered or offered an opiate.

Several proposals in the bill focus on pain management and reflect public feedback that drug safety should not come at the expense of legitimate chronic pain patients.

The bill would direct the recently formed Drug Formulary Commission to publish updates on non-opiate pain management drugs. It would also take steps towards a special program for primary care providers – the group that prescribes the greatest percentage of painkillers – to consult remotely with pain specialists. Another provision would require insurance carriers to develop pain management plans, which would promote alternatives to prescription painkillers, and for the Division of Insurance to review such plans to ensure adequate coverage and the removal of administrative red tape.

The bill was met with bipartisan support in the Senate. Sen. Bruce Tarr, the chamber's top Republican, said the bill would "help to prevent the human and economic costs caused by abuse of opiates and painkillers and…expand access to treatment and drug stewardship programs while reducing the over prescribing of opiates."

The Senate's bill is one of several steps the Legislature has taken in regards to opiate use.

A law enacted in 2014 that requires every insurance carrier to cover at least 14 days of detoxification and step down treatment when deemed necessary by a treating clinician took effect Oct. 1. Lawmakers are also acting on a spending bill that adds $27 million in new funding for addiction treatment and funding for a school-based risk screening program known as "screening, brief intervention, and referral to treatment," or SBIRT. The expansion of SBIRT was also a focus of the Senate's bill.

Police Lieutenant Placed On Leave

By SCOTT JACKSON

A Quincy Police Department lieutenant has been placed on paid administrative leave over allegations he was paid for working overlapping private details.

Quincy Police Chief Paul Keenan placed Lt. Timothy Corliss on paid leave last week after being notified of the allegations.

"He was placed on administrative leave and we're conducting an internal audit of all his payroll records," Keenan said Monday.

Corliss, a 22-year veteran of the department, is alleged to have been paid for multiple private details at the same time. Keenan said the allegations he was notified of did not involve Corliss working private details while on duty with the department and the internal audit has yet to find evidence of him doing so either.

"We're going to review all his records…but at this point we haven't seen any evidence of that," Keenan responded when asked if Corliss was alleged to be on duty while being paid for private details.

Keenan said many of the department's officers work private details when not on duty, such as providing event security or directing traffic in construction sites. Those details are paid for by the company that requests the detail, though the Police Department is responsible for assigning officers to the details and issues paychecks to the officers.

Brewster Employees Resuscitate Elderly Woman At Food Festival

By SCOTT JACKSON

Five Brewster Ambulance employees helped resuscitate an elderly woman who lost consciousness while choking on food during a recent food truck festival in Quincy.

Between 1:30 p.m. and 2 p.m. on Sept. 26, during the Quincy Food Truck Festival at Pageant Field, the woman began choking on piece of food, according to Mark Gassiraro, a field supervisor for Brewster. Brewster personnel at the festival rushed to the woman to begin the Heimlich maneuver, but she lost consciousness.

"She was choking to the point of unresponsiveness," Gassiraro said. "We were able to place her on the ground and started abdominal thrusts and she regained consciousness quickly."

The woman was then taken to a local hospital for precautionary purposes and she was later released.

Dave Kiley, also a field supervisor for Brewster, was the one who performed abdominal thrusts to bring the woman back to consciousness. Paramedic Tevin Murray; EMTs Matias Guerrero and Brian McCue; and Gassiraro also provided assistance.

Quincy Man Sentenced In Hatchet Attack

By SCOTT JACKSON

A Quincy man will serve seven to nine years in prison after admitting in court he attacked a local attorney with a hatchet in a Quincy Center garage in February.

Michael A. Kelly, a resident of 29 Miller Stile Road, pleaded guilty on Sept. 30 to charges of armed assault with intent to murder on a person over 60; mayhem; assault and battery with a dangerous weapon; and assault and battery with a dangerous weapon on a person over 60. Judge Kenneth J. Fishman sentenced Kelly to seven to nine years in prison on the charge of armed assault with intent to murder and five years probation on the other charges.

Prosecutors had sought a prison term of 14 to 16 years at the sentencing hearing.

Prosecutors had alleged Kelly attacked the victim – a Quincy attorney who was representing Kelly's ex-wife in court – on Feb. 24 at the Ross Garage. Kelly had missed a court date earlier that day, where he had been scheduled to make a payment to his ex-wife as part of a $30,000 judgment against him.

Around 5:30 p.m. that afternoon, the attorney was placing items in his car when Kelly sprayed the victim with wasp-killing spray and began striking him with a hatchet, according to prosecutors. The victim was able to wrest the hatchet away from Kelly and the scuffle continued until witnesses intervened and helped break up the fight.

Vigil Underscores Mission To Combat Drug Abuse

"I used to hate that term and get angry with people [who used it], but now I understand that unless you've walked through it or watched a loved one walk through it, then you really don't understand what it means."

Although Martin was intending to start a law firm with her brother, after his death she admits to taking a different turn. "So I went a little unconventional and saw my role as a prosecutor as a way to help those who are most vulnerable…in the District Court we're not dealing with the worst type of criminals, we're dealing with a lot of people who are just sick and need help."

Former addict Chris Conte who is eight years sober spoke of his passion for helping other people through his affiliation with these drug abuse agencies, "Today my past has become my biggest asset because it has allowed me to be able to help kids overcome the obstacles and hardships that have happened in their lives.

"A part of recovery is being of service to other people and that has been the most rewarding thing in my life. It is my hope that in the future we will be able to have some facilities which will promote abstinence, because the pain and the embarrassment and the guilt that we [addicts] feel isn't something that a pill is going to fix."

Deady assured the large crowd of supporters, family-members and friends of overdose victims that "addiction is a family disease and everybody here is family. Please, all of you, whose hearts are broken, don't just let your hearts be broken, reach out to someone."

Other agencies at the vigil not previously mentioned were: Impact Quincy, a program of Bay State Community Services, the Massachusetts Organization for Addiction Recovery, Quincy Recovery Center, Life Community Church, Adcare Outpatient Services in Quincy Center, Devine Recovery Center in Boston, Learn to Cope, a peer-led support network for families dealing with addiction and recovery and A New Way Recovery Center, both on Quincy Ave.

The evening closed with the reading of names, bell ringing, and a unified recitation of the entire Serenity Prayer by everyone in attendance. Because of inclement weather, the event was held indoors at the Crane Library, so the actual lighting of candles had to be eliminated.

The Oct. 14 meeting will also feature an update from the project team planning the new Reay E. Sterling Middle School. The City Council will receive an update from the same team five days later on Oct. 19.

The city's Sterling building committee met on Sept. 29 with representatives from architectural firm Ai3 and Joslin Lessér, the project manager. At that meeting, DeCristofaro said Ai3 and Joslin Lesser shared a preliminary design for the educational space plan with the committee.

"The committee asked several questions and were enthused, I think, during the meeting about the preliminary design of a new Sterling Middle School and the educational plan," the superintendent stated.

On Oct. 13, members of the building committee will meet with staff at Sterling to share the layout and request additional input on planned multi-use spaces and the new dining area, which will also be multi-use.

On Oct. 28, the building committee will make a presentation to the Massachusetts School Building Authority's subcommittee on facilities assessment. Following a comment period, the building committee will meet with the MSBA's board of directors on Nov. 18.

"At that time we certainly hope to move on to schematic design, which is pretty exciting – another significant step in the building and designing of a new Sterling Middle School," DeCristofaro said.

The school system will receive $250,000 from the state, which partially makes up for the loss of a $320,000 grant for full-day kindergarten.

In previous years, Quincy received $320,000 from the state's Quality Full Day Kindergarten Grant. Earlier this year, however, Gov. Charlie Baker cut the grant funding. The school system was given an additional $320,000 this year from the city's general fund budget to make up for the loss of the grant.

In July, the Legislature voted to partially restore the grant. DeCristofaro said $250,000 is for Quincy and that funding is now available. The School Committee's budget subcommittee will consider how to allocate the $250,000 at a future meeting.

Mayor Thomas Koch, the chairman of the School Committee, recommended the money be used for a one-time expense, such as new technology or books.

"We didn't think any of this money was coming, obviously, so we covered it in the budget. I just ask the committee to be mindful of where we best use this," Koch said.

"My reccomendation would be some one-time needs. I don't know it would be appropriate to add staffing or personnel at this point. I think there are some – whether it's technology, whether it's textbooks or other things – things that we're in need of. I'd certainly like us to consider that."

Two parent academies will be held later this fall for parents of elementary school students to go over the new, standards-based report cards being rolled out this year as well as to provide an overview of the ASPEN system.

The first is Nov. 17 at Central Middle School and the second on Dec. 1 at Atlantic Middle School. Both are from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. – parents and guardians are invited to stop by at any time during the academy.

Quincy Democrats To Honor Rep. Ayers At Breakfast Oct. 18

The 27th annual Quincy Democratic City Committee Breakfast will be held Sunday, Oct. 18 at the Quincy Sons of Italy, 120 Quarry St. from 10 a.m. to noon.

The 2015 Dennis F. Ryan Community Award will be presented to state Rep. Bruce J. Ayers.

"This award, given in the name of a gentleman who was passionate in his support and beliefs of the Democratic Party is awarded to an individual each year who exemplifies those principals through their words and deeds," said Committee Chairwoman Alicia Gardner on behalf of the Committee. "State Representative Ayers is such an individual and we are honored to recognize his contributions to the Democratic Party."

Gardner said Ayers, who served as Ward 6 city councillor before being elected state representative, has been a loyal Democrat for many years.

"Representative Ayers has represented the 1st Norfolk District in the General Court since 1998, was the Ward 6 City Councillor from 1992 to 2000 and has been a long-time member of the Ward 6 Quincy Democratic City Committee. Representative Ayers acted as a surrogate for President Obama during the 2012 re-election campaign and traveled to key battleground states such as Wisconsin, Virginia and Pennsylvania.

"Rep. Ayers is a small businessman owner of Ayers Handicap Conversion Center which converts vehicles for the handicap so that they may be more independent. He founded the Quincy Helping Hand program which provides free durable medical equipment. The City Committee board members and Ward Chairs were unanimous in their decision when Representative Ayer's name was placed in nomination. Representative Ayers has worked hard on behalf of the party and the Committee is pleased that it can recognize and honor the Representative in this way," Gardner said.

For tickets, contact: Alicia Gardner at 617-347-5106, or by email at, alicia.gardner6@gmail.com. Cost per ticket is $25.00 or a table of 10 for $200.

The Quincy Democratic City Committee is a Committee of 200 plus members and associate members. There are 6 Committees for each of the 6 Wards in Quincy. Members of the Committee are committed democrats who work hard to support democratic candidates and issues.

Those interested in joining a Ward Committee are asked to contact Alicia Gardner at alicia.gardner6@gmail.com.

and board members about the role that culture, arts and history can play in economic development and make people aware of some of the diversity we have with arts and culture on the South Shore," Forman told The Sun.

"Last year we did sort of the southern end of the South Shore and it was more about arts and music. Today, there is a little bit more focus on history and architecture and that reinforces the message that some historic buildings and iconic local structures can really be center points in building up a town green or a community.

"Quincy obviously leads that effort because this is so established and it becomes the anchor of a new Adams Green, which will rebuild all of Quincy Center. We have other examples in other towns where a building might not be as historic is still quite old and has anchored a town and is an iconic structure in that town."

"That [the United First Parish Church] factors in so centrally to the redevelopment of a vibrant city center is really exciting and it's sort of what makes Quincy Center and Quincy pretty unique from a lot of other cities," added Forman, whose father, the Rev. Charles Forman, preached at the church as visiting minister.

Mayor Thomas Koch welcomed officials from the chamber and other local community groups to the church. He touted the Adams Hancock Green, the planned public park between the church and City Hall, which will include water features, new statues of John Adams and John Hancock, and space for civic events. On the other side of Hancock Street, Koch said renovations to the 171-year-old Old City Hall building should be completed within

Keeping Social Security Updated Prevents Unwanted Surprises

By KRISTEN ALBERINO

Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

Most people love surprises, but many dislike change. It's just the opposite with Social Security. If you receive benefits, we want to hear about your changes.

Keeping us informed minimizes the chance that we learn about something later that could negatively affect your benefits. That's the surprise no one wants, because it creates overpayments that you must repay, disrupts payments, and can even jeopardize your entitlement to Social Security benefits.

Here is a reminder of some of the most common forms of information Social Security needs from you.

Your address and direct deposit information. We need to know your current mailing address and phone number so we can reach you if needed. This is especially important if you receive Supplemental Security Income (SSI) since where you live can change the amount of your SSI benefits.

When your direct deposit information is not current, it can cause headaches with missing or delayed payments. You can update your address or direct deposit information when you register for a my Social Security account at www.socialsecurity.gov/myaccount.

Your work. When you receive Social Security disability benefits or SSI for a disability, we have found you unable to work because of your condition. That's why we need to know if you take a job or are self-employed, or if you stop work or have any changes in work hours, or pay. If your work is substantial enough, it may affect your benefits. You may also need to report if you begin receiving or have a change in any worker's compensation or public disability benefits.

If you are receiving retirement or survivors benefits, be mindful of the yearly earnings limit before you reach Full Retirement Age (FRA), which is currently 67 years old if you were born in 1960 or later. For 2015, the earnings limit is $15,720. When you earn over this amount, we deduct $1 in benefits for every $2 you earn. That means if you earn $30,000, we will have to reduce your benefits by roughly $7,000. It's very important to give us a work estimate at the start of the year so that we can withhold what's needed. If we find out you had excess earnings at a later date, you could end up with a large overpayment that you will have to repay.

Your living arrangements for SSI. To receive SSI you must demonstrate financial need, in addition to meeting other requirements. Living arrangements may change how much money you receive. Social Security needs to know how many people are in your household and how expenses are shared. We also need to know if you receive any payments from other sources, and if you have savings that go over the SSI resource limit ($2,000 for an individual or $3,000 for a couple).

You can learn more about reporting responsibilities for people working and receiving disability or SSI benefits by reading our online publication Working While Disabled — How We Can Help and How Work Affects Your Benefits at www.socialsecurity.gov/pubs.

Some changes can be reported online at www.socialsecurity.gov. You can also notify us 1-800-772-1213 or contact your local Social Security office.

Our goal at Social Security is to pay you the right amount, on time, every month. With your cooperation to keep us informed of changes, the likelihood of any unpleasant surprises that could derail your benefits will be greatly minimized.

the next month.

Those projects, the mayor said, go hand-in-hand with the city's plan to redevelop the downtown.

"All this is part of a major economic redevelopment of our entire Quincy Center. When you go back and look at the rollout of the Quincy Center project and all the public meetings we did, charettes that were done, there was a great call by the public and developers for good civic cultural space in the community," Koch said.

"This is going to be a real centerpiece, if you will, of all that activity. As we rebuild the downtown and the downtown becomes once again the heart of the city – the center of commerce but also the part of the city where great civic activities happen and great cultural activities happen – it brings the entire community together and we're looking forward to that."

Quincy, Koch added, recognizes the value of arts to the community. He said the city is fortunate to have the Quincy Choral Society, Quincy Art Association and Quincy Symphony Orchestra.

"[They are] wonderful organizations," Koch said. "People work so hard to share their gifts and talents. They add tremendously to the culture of this great city and that's one of the attractions of living here and doing business here."

Members of the Quincy Choral Society performed two songs at the church, including the Star Spangled Banner, accompanied by a trio from the Quincy Symphony Orchestra. The Quincy Art Association hosted an art gallery featuring more than a dozen paintings and photographs from local artists. Jim Cooke, a John Quincy Adams reenactor, read "The Hour-Glass," a poem penned by the sixth president. Quincy's JP Fuji Group provided sushi for those in attendance. A National Park Service ranger gave a guided tour of the nearby Hancock Cemetery.

The Rev. Rebecca Froom, the United First Parish Church's minister, talked about the history of the church from its founding in 1639 to the current day. She also said the church hosts a number of cultural events, such as concerts.

"In addition to being an active church with Sunday morning services and religious education we also do host cultural events, either renting our space or some things we host ourselves," Froom said. "From classical concerts in this space (the sanctuary) to ska concerts in the basement. We have a coffeehouse series for folk artists called Stone Temple Coffeehouse that has periodic concerts, including one coming up on Oct. 24."

Gary Haynes, who oversees the visitors program at the church, said more than 6,000 people have taken tours since the start of the season on Patriots' Day. The church has welcomed visitors from all 50 states plus the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico as well as 31 foreign countries.

"It's quite amazing managing this program. The visitors – not from the United States but from all over the world, from all four corners of this earth, from Asia, West Africa, Europe, the Middle East – the knowledge they have about John and Abigail Adams," Haynes said.

"They're so moved when they can actually visit the tombs of John and Abigail and also John Quincy and his wife Louisa Catherine."

Haynes said other highlights of the tours are the sanctuary's elaborate plaster ceiling, which was restored in 2001; memorial tablets for the four members of the Adams family entombed in the church as well as Charles Francis Adams, who served as ambassador to the United Kingdom, and Col. John Quincy, for whom the city is named; and the presidential pew, pew number 54, where John Quincy Adams sat during church services.

Karen Giovanniello, president of the 300-member Quincy Art Association, was among those who attended the tour stop inside the church. The art association, she said, was happy visitors from elsewhere on the South Shore attended and would learn more about what goes on in Quincy.

"We're very happy to have all these folks come and see what Quincy is all about and we had some wonderful speakers – everything was short and sweet – and there are a lot of smiling faces around here," Giovanniello said.

The Quincy Art Association promotes the arts in the community in several ways in addition to the annual Quincy ArtsFest, held every September at Pageant Field. The association offers lessons for everyone from beginners to experts and gives at least four demonstrations a year.

"We have an incredible faculty. The instructors we bring onboard for our class, they're absolutely incredible. They're remarkable at what they do and they're very good at teaching novices to experts," Giovanniello said. "Our kids' classes have really taken off. We're thrilled to have more and more children come to the art association, because after all they're our future so we welcome them.

"We do demonstrations. We try to do four a year and if we come up with some other folks who like to do demos we will have more than four."

Now And Then, It's Important To Take A Look At Quincy's Finances.

Now

- Tom Koch protected the City during the worst economic crisis since the Great Depression. Today: The strongest, most stable finances in recent history.
- Wall Street agrees, upgrading the City's bond rating and praising a "very strong economy," "strong management," and "strong budgetary performance."
- The real estate experts at The Warren Group report that Quincy has one of the strongest property value trends in the entire region.
- Despite what his opponent says, Mayor Koch's collaborative partnerships with state and federal officials lead to millions of dollars in grants for many of the projects getting done today.
- That means that even with all the work being done — Quincy has the lowest debt of any City in Massachusetts.
- It's the same on taxes — almost no city has kept property tax increases lower than Quincy. That's straight from the Massachusetts Department of Revenue, not from misleading campaign material.
- Tom Koch repaired the relationship with state officials, leading to tens of millions of dollars in state grants for the new Central Middle School, Sterling Middle School and major school improvements citywide.

Then

Independent audit finds City's finances "significantly deteriorated" under Bill Phelan. Why?

- Bill Phelan hid more than $4.5 million in taxes by using Water and Sewer fees to pay for police and fire department budgets.
- Bill Phelan didn't budget any money for his $60 million no-bid Honeywell energy deal that led to a state investigation.
- Bill Phelan left the Water and Sewer Department with a $3 million deficit.
- Bill Phelan did not budget for $1.7 million in debt payments in an election year.
- Bill Phelan did not budget $1.7 million for employee contracts he settled.
- All of this was uncovered by an independent audit, and the Massachusetts Department of Revenue ordered these shell games to be stopped when Mayor Koch took office.
- Now Bill Phelan is trying to mislead you about his own tax record by blaming his mess on Mayor Koch.
- Bill Phelan tried to prevent an independent review of City finances by signing a three-year contract with his hand-picked auditing firm on New Year's Eve 2008, just days before leaving office.
- His well-known conflicts with state officials lost us millions and millions in state funding for school projects.

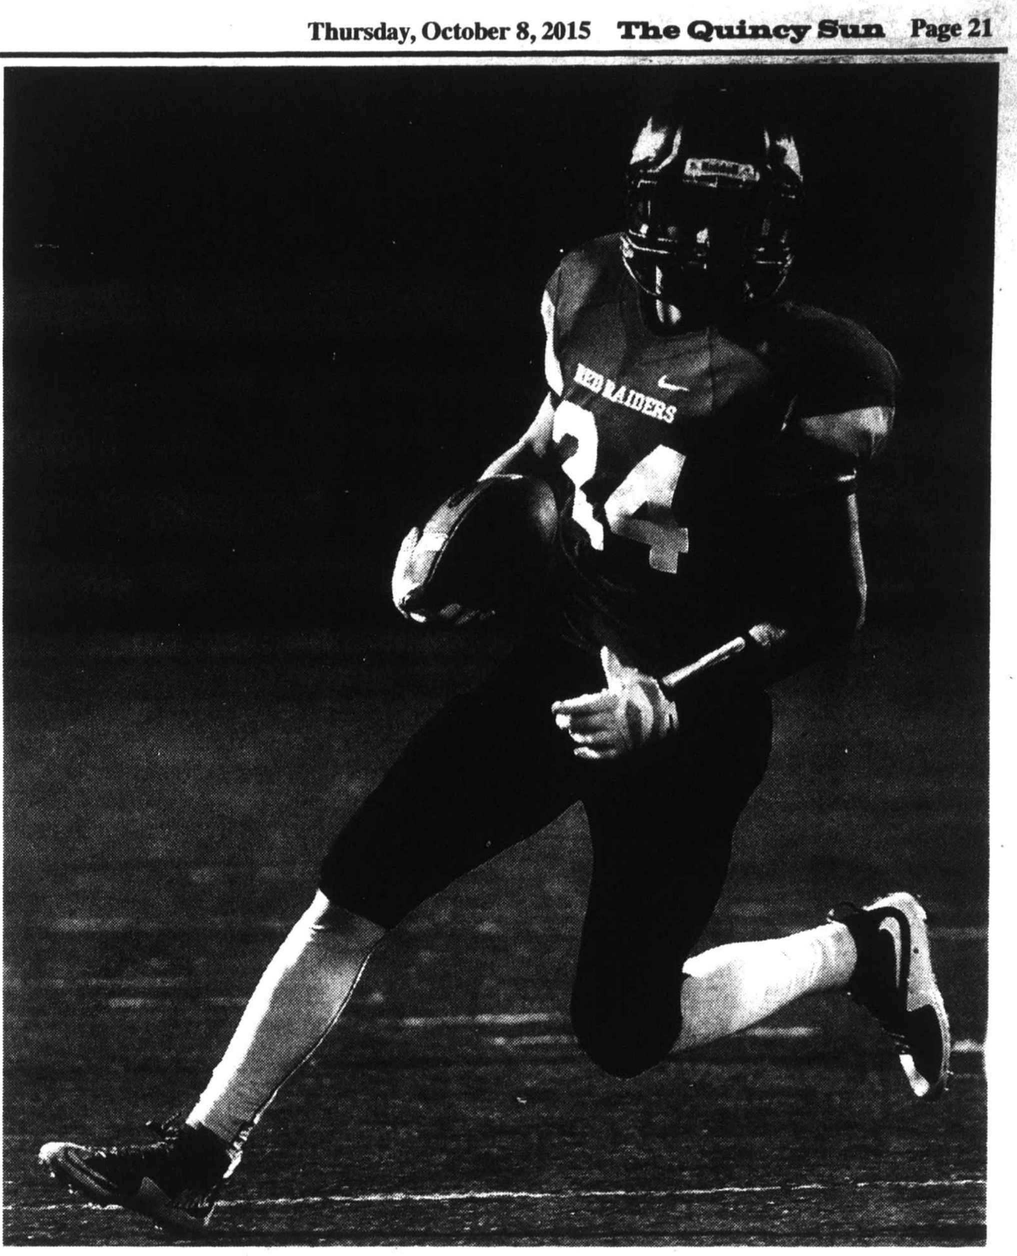
North Quincy Pounds Pembroke, 41-6



AIDAN BROWN rushed for 219 yards on 23 carries including touchdown runs of 50 and 55 yards as the North Quincy Red Raiders rolled past Pembroke, 41-6, for their first win of the season last Friday night at Veterans' Memorial Stadium. Quincy Sun File Photo/Robert Bosworth

By BILL GRIFFIN

It was a dark and stormy night. Cold, wet gusts cast a ghostly glow as they sailed passed the stadium lights. It was a night for all creatures, perhaps two-by-two, to seek shelter, but for North Quincy it was a fine time to step out and play its best football of the year.

Aidan Brown had 219 yards on 23 carries including touchdown runs of 50 and 55 yards. The defense held Pembroke to three first downs and 55 yards total offense through three periods. Joey Fallon went 4-4 for 123 passing yards and scoring strikes of 51 and 30 yards.

Liam O'Connor had 79 yards on five carries and a touchdown run of 51 yards. Tom Whooley (51 yards) and Jake Grady (30) yards added touchdown receptions as North rolled past the Titans, 41-6 in a Patriot League Fisher Division contest on Senior Night Friday at Veterans Stadium.

"I was very pleased. We came out and controlled the game physically. Our line did a great job on both sides of the ball. The key is to build on this and gain some momentum going forward," said North coach Mark Nutley after the Red Raiders went to 1-3 on the season.

North's first task preparing for Pembroke was to rebound from the 56-0 loss to Hanover. Easy solution. Bury the evidence.

"We took the film and told the kids to bring an article of clothing they wore that day. We brought the film and clothes outside, we dug a hole, and we buried everything in the ground," said Nutley.

Thankfully, Brown didn't slip into the hole while they were covering the earth. He is a remarkable story. As a senior, this is his first year as a running back. Starting with the second half of the opener against Bedford, he has gained 566 yards and scored five touchdowns. He had 145 yards against Hanover who is as good as anyone in the Patriot League.

He has the instincts of a running back, the feel for when to bounce a play outside or take it up hard in between the tackles. He has the speed of a sprinter and can hit from anywhere on the field. He can catch the ball like a wide receiver because he was a wide receiver. And most importantly, he simply won't go to the ground. Several times against Pembroke, he moved and carried tacklers for five, eight, ten yards because he just would not let the run die.

"Those plays were want-to plays. He just wanted to keep going. I liked the way he ran tonight. He got the dirty yards, the tough yards between the tackles," said Nutley.

Late Score Haunts Quincy Again At Silver-Lake

By BILL GRIFFIN

There must be something about that bus ride down to Silver Lake. The word "haunted" comes to mind.

Two years ago, Quincy rolled down to Kingston, dominated the game on the ground, had chances to put away the victory only to lose on a score in the final minutes of the fourth period.

JAHVAE HANDSOM-FIELDS gained 150 yards rushing on 17 carries but the Quincy Presidents bowed to Silver Lake 13-12 on the road last Friday night.

Friday night was deja vu all over again. The Presidents ruled the line of scrimmage, pounding out nearly 300 yards rushing, but Silver Lake scored with 53 seconds left in the game to edge the Presidents, 13-12 in a Patriot League Keenan Division contest.

Two teams. Same place. Two years apart. Story of game repeats itself. Groundhog Day? This is all getting a little weird.

"It was eerily similar to the game two years ago," said Quincy coach Billy Reardon. "I thought we moved the ball really well. We had a chance to put away the game in the first half. It came down to the end, and they got the late score again to beat us."

The Presidents took a 12-7 lead with 3:00 left in the game on a five-yard TD run by Jahvae Handsom-Fields. Quincy had a chance to squash the Lakers' winning drive in its early stages, but the chance barely slipped away.

Quincy forced Silver Lake into a fourth-and-12 situation deep in Lakers' territory thanks to a big first-down sack from Mike Munroe. However, the Lakers completed a pass deep over the middle to keep the drive alive.

"We were missing our starting linebackers (Sean Curran Cross and Domenic Coleman) for the entire game," said Reardon. "We had kids step up and replace them. They did a good job, but we missed the starters. It showed on that passing play."

The game, unfortunately, turned on a controversial penalty in the final seconds. Dyreke Johnson apparently made an acrobatic interception which would have finished the drive, but was called for pass interference which put the ball at the Quincy five. Pass interference calls which decide games can be weak. It usually better to let the players decide it.

"The official said Dyreke went through the receiver to get the ball. I thought Dyreke touched the ball first. The call hurt, but we had chances earlier to to put away the game and not bring

HELP FOR ARTHRITIC KNEES

According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, more than 700,000 knee-replacement procedures are performed annually in the United States. "Knee arthroplasty" is commonly performed to relieve pain and restore function to osteoarthritic ("wear and tear" arthritis) knee joints. While no one questions the value and effectiveness of total knee replacement surgery in cases where the knee joint is damaged beyond repair, surgery should be undertaken only as a last resort. Until that point is reached, research shows that chiropractic knee adjustments can benefit people suffering from osteoarthritic knee pain by decreasing pain intensity and lessening clicking and grinding sensations. When the first signs of knee pain occur, chiropractic treatment may help forestall surgery.

At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we provide safe, gentle and effective chiropractic care for those suffering from knee pain. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy, where we strive for excellence through superior patient management and education. Please call us at 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. Your case will be evaluated, the procedure will be explained and demonstrated, and your questions will be answered. We will only accept you as a patient if we feel we can help.

P.S. Chiropractic treatment can help relieve pain and limited function in patients with osteoarthritic knees by restoring normal joint alignment and gait, reducing inflammation, and recommending activities that promote flexibility and mobility.

Their defense has been as certain as the sun rising in the East and as stout as a wall built with concrete and mortar. It is as if their net has been boarded and nailed shut.

North Quincy's girls soccer team has given just two goals in its first eight matches. There are no questions about the defense. Not a one. On Saturday against Pembroke, the Red Raiders added to their package. They played crisp and fast on the attack, moving the ball with quick, accurate passes, creating a fistful of chances and producing a beautiful and complete soccer effort.

Molly Kate Cannon dealt with the howling gale and delivered two picture-perfect corner kicks. Ali Coleman and Mandy Hazelton cashed them into goals. Sinead Hanley added a third by picking the far corner with a bullseye from 18 yards. Keeper Shannan Kennedy and her band of defenders supported the attack for a 3-0 Patriot League Fisher Division win over the Titans at a cold and windy Veterans Stadium

"That was our best overall game of the season. The defense has been great and today we played our best offense. The key for us is to move the ball quickly off the foot. It's when we hold on to it and try to be too fancy that we get in trouble," said coach Paul Bregoli whose team went to 5-2-1 with the win.

In other action last week, North gained a rare point from Keenan Division powerhouse Duxbury with a 0-0 tie on the road. Hanley, Annie Doherty and Emily Anglehart scored in a 3-0 win over Middleboro

"That is the first point I can ever recall us getting on the road against Duxbury," said Bregoli who has coached North for 20 years.

Let's begin the Pembroke tale with the offense. Coleman usually takes the corners for North, but she has been dealing with a leg injury. Bregoli looked around at practice one day, saw Cannon, decided she already does everything else for the Red Raiders, and made a decision. What's one more thing? Why not let her take corners as well?

Good thinking. Midway through the first half, Cannon boomed a corner against a wind that was strong enough to knock down structures. It sailed at the perfect speed and height to an open Coleman at the far corner of the net. Coleman headed it home for a 1-0 lead which North probably could have protected for a week.

Just over ten minutes into the second half, Molly Donahue forced another corner with an excellent rush down the right wing. Once more, Cannon stepped up. She sent a twisting drive into the pile in front. After a bit of scrum, Hazelton gathered possession and knocked it home for a 2-0 lead.

"You cannot take two better corner kicks. The wind just made them more amazing. Molly Kate has been taking corners for three games. She has four assists," said Bregoli.

The artistic highlight came with 18:30 left. Coleman made a spot-on thru pass to Hanley breaking clear in the middle. Hanley controlled, dribbled a step

QNQ Cross Country Highlights

Quincy-North Quincy Cross Country runners keep improving in leaps and bounds but a second win keeps belong elusive.

Such was the case against visiting Duxbury. In the boys' race Jimmy Cannon and Peter Saccoach continued in their front running taking 1-2 and an ever-improving Aidan Golden came in 5th, nearly a minute faster on the 2.5-mile Pageant Field course than two weeks ago. But the Dragons put six runners ahead of Kevin White and eked out a 28-31 victory.

Other boys were AJ Nelson (18), Nick Ouellette (20), Kirian-Philip Kofoʼruwola-Kuti (23), Shane Stokes (31), Conor Mortimer (36), Eric Mei (37), Sean Scanlon (38), Victor Chu (39), Alex Ouellette (40), and Ethan Graney (43).

On the girls' side freshman Abby Murphy battled through most of the course with Duxbury sophomore Katie Cass, but Murphy pulled away over the last half mile to secure a win in 16:46, a time eclipsing Julia Bryson's freshman-best on the Pageant course. Senior LaQueen Arias was 5th, Jackie Coleman and Ciana Williams were 8-9. Other finishers were Grace Anderson (12), Even Anderson (15), Kelly Zeng (17), and Nora Comerford (23).

This meet sets the stage for an epic battle versus Hingham in QNQ's last home meet. The Harbormen boast league top runners Mike Durkin and Jack Muldoon again Jimmy Cannon and Peter Saccoach. Meet was Tuesday (10/6).

The team will also take part in the Smegs Legs race on Saturday, Oct. 10 before embarking on three straight road meets and then the league championship at Silver Lake.

The Iraq veteran is looking to continue his streak against the hard punching Culp and propel his way into the world rankings.

Scores & More: Week 4 Youth Football Highlights

Here are scores and highlights of Week 4 Quincy Youth Football League action.

VARSITY:
MANETS-28
APACHES-0

The Houghs Neck Manets scored on their first series when Shane Murphy ran for a 15 yard TD. Later in the first half, Manets QB Lukas Schaaf threw a 20 yard TD pass to TE Devante Williams, Jake Galligan kicked the extra points to give the Manets a 14-0 halftime lead.

Late in the third quarter, Manets RB Isaiah Steinberg ran for a 70 yard TD. Galligan added the conversion kick to extend the Manets lead to 22-0. Steinberg added another score in the fourth quarter as the Manets (4-0) defeated the Apaches 28-0.

The Apaches were led by the strong efforts of Danny Scolaro, Thomas Le, Mikey Levine, James Corkery, Will Farrell, Ryan Tapper, James Ward, Thomas McCormack, Tyler Le, Johnny Cristiani, Coleman Flaherty and Andrew Bradley. The Manets saw great performances from Steinberg, Shane Murphy, Devante Williams, Stephen Dunn, Kevin Gallant, Aidan O'Donahue, Derek Little, Kevin Ferent, Trenton Sousa, Mike Cugini and Tyler Duncan.

PANTHERS-19
MUSTANGS-0

An impressive outing for the Panthers varsity team this week.

The Point Panthers took a 6-0 first half lead when RB Proudley Louis scored on a long TD Run. Michael Coote scored a second half touchdown to extend the Panthers lead to 12-0. Later right and caught the corner with a laser of a low drive.

"A perfect shot. I was happy for Sinead. She has been just missing, just high, just wide, but she was right on for that one," said Bregoli.

The offense was more than the goals. North passed and cut and put on offensive pressure. Hanley was a force in front of the net. Kara Carchedi and Jill Hallisey added hustle and created good chances on goal. Haley Houlihan ran the field and played well enough to score twice.

"Right now, Haley is snakebit. She is just missing, but she will break out," said Bregoli.

And now for the defense. Not only have the Red Raiders permitted just two goals, they haven't given any on 11-on-11 situation. The goals came off a direct kick (Hanover) and corner kick (Scituate). Kennedy was terrific again earning her sixth shutout of the season and the 20th of her career which is just eight games into her junior year. She has had a fine view of what makes this defense so good.

"I think it's because we play smart," she said. "We know each other so well that we can cover almost anything. I've been playing with Molly Kate, Julia (O'Donnell), Kerin (Coleman) and Ciara (Viscione) for three years. Everyone knows each other. That definitely helps."

Her best effort came with 11:25 remaining in the first half, just minutes after she had returned from sitting with a minor injury. Kennedy cut down the angle on a Pembroke attacker. She went high and barely tipped the ball with her left hand on a shot which was ticketed for the top corner. The ball dropped free at her feet. Viscione battled and tied up the rebound until Kennedy had to time grab and secure it.

"Give Ciara the credit for that. She was the one who wouldn't let go of the rebound," said Kennedy.

Defense is more than the keeper and the back line. It is the entire team. At the center of it all is senior Marissa McGue who gives the Red Raiders precious control of the middle of the field in each game they play. She supports the defense by stopping rushers and thru passes. She starts the attack with accurate passes to the wing and cutters who have an open patch of ground through the middle.

She does everything so well. When Kennedy went out with her injury, McGue stepped up and played goal for seven minutes. She had more trouble putting on the goalie's jacket than she did playing the position. After the match, there was a bit of joking about whether Kennedy and McGue would share the shutout.

"Give it to her," smiled Kennedy. "I thought she looked great out there other than putting on the jacket and all."

"It's Shannan's shutout. You have to play a quarter to share the shutout," said Bregoli, ever the realist.

Kennedy and her defense were outstanding in the Duxbury tie, especially in the first half. Cannon had two assists and McGue one in the win over Middleboro.

North is at Hingham today (Thursday) at 4 p.m.

The city's four varsity soccer programs will be featured in a double-header Saturday at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

In girls soccer, North Quincy and Quincy will square off at 5 p.m.

In boys soccer, Quincy will battle North Quincy beginning at 7 p.m.

Raiders Pound Pembroke

"The transition from wide receiver isn't that hard because a lot of the cuts and moves are the same. I just try to keep my legs pumping, keep grinding, and keep the play alive," said Brown.

Fallon was excellent in and out of the pocket. On the touchdown pass to Whooley in the first quarter, he rolled right, bought time for the play to develop and threw a strike which caught Whooley in full stride behind the secondary. On the TD throw to Grady, he set up quickly in the pocket and fired a spot-on dart on a seam pattern for the score and a 20-0 halftime lead.

It was no fun throwing the ball on the wet and windy night, but Fallon threw it well.

"He did a god job on the bootleg. He was patient and let the play develop. He not only threw the ball hard, he was right on target. This was not an easy night to throw," said Nutley.

It all all begins up front. Ryan Manning, Jack Ryder, Derek Huynh, Seamus Broughton, Conor Pound, Tom Koch, and Grady cleared the holes for Brown, handled the rush to give time for Fallon and made all the runs and passes possible.

"The offensive line was super. I had big holes all night," said Brown.

On defense, North had people flying to the ball all night. O'Connor and Grady had fumble recoveries, and Whooley had an interception to stop threats in the first period. Koch covered the field and delivered solid hits at linebacker. Huynh and Manning played excellent two-way games up front. The secondary, led by John Le, Chris Donaghey, Jake Petersen and Whooley gave no openings, no creases in which to throw.

"What I liked about our defense tonight is we had a lot of people going to the ball, a lot of gang-tackling which was something we didn't do in our first three games. Ed DeWitt had a good game plan for us on defense," said Nutley.

North was up, 20-0 at the half on Fallon's two-TD passes and 50-yard scoring run by Brown. The Red Raiders clicked in the second half on scoring runs of 55 and three yards by Brown and a 51-yard run by O'Connor. Pembroke's Brandon Sheehan scored midway through the fourth period.

"It's great to come together as a team like this," said Brown. "It's an amazing feeling to do it on Senior Night with our parents and families watching us."

In ceremonies before the game, North's seniors were introduced and honored along with family members and friends. North's seniors are: Fallon, Whooley, Petersen, Le, Brown, Grady, Ryder, Huynh, Broughton, Pound, Christian Roman, Joel Lawless, Bo Levine, John Griffin, Joe Shuris, Joe Zingg, and Connor Crammond.

Game Notes – North visits Middleboro Saturday for a 1:00 kickoff...Sophomore Dara Griffin had a great night kicking in the tough conditions. He nailed five extra points and dropped a kick dead on the Pembroke four...North had five scoring plays over 30 yards and four over 50 yards...Brown averaged 9.4 per carry. O'Connor ran well off the wing and averaged 16.0 yards per carry.

it down to the final minute," said Reardon.

Silver Lake went in from the five to take away the 13-12 win.

Quincy (1-3) showed its best running game of the season. Handsom-Fields had 150 yards in 17 carries. Garrett Cronin had 68 yards in four carries, including a 45-yard scoring run in the first period. Quarterback Cody Desmond had 67 yards in six carries, including a 50-yard quarterback sneak to set up the go-ahead score late in the fourth period.

That adds to 285 yards on the ground which is usually more than enough to win a football game.

"It was our best running game of the season," said Reardon. "Garrett has really emerged as a good back. Both he and Jahvae have good vision and instincts. Cody loves running that quarterback sneak."

Quincy went up, 6-0 in the first quarter on Cronin's run. He swept right behind a pulling Mike Munroe and fullback Tyrian Leonard and broke it all the way for the score.

At this point, Quincy had a chance to break open the game. The Presidents marched to the Silver Lake five. A fade route to the corner of the end zone just missed connecting. The Lakers took over and drove to a touchdown just before intermission for a 7-6 lead.

"We could have been up by two touchdowns. Instead we trailed going into the half," said Reardon

After a scoreless third quarter, Desmond's quarterback sneak behind Munroe and Declan Mayo brought the ball to the five. Three plays later Handsom-Fields went in from the five behind Leonard, Isaiah Uzamere, and Jhonata Sousa for a 12-7 lead which held up until the final minute.

Quincy is six points away from being 3-1 after narrow losses to Milton and Silver Lake. They have established a ground game and have gained experience playing on the varsity level at varsity speed. However, the Keenan side of the league is just brutal with Plymouth North, Whitman-Hanson, Hingham, and Duxbury.

"We watched the film Saturday and saw some good things. We told the kids they should hold their heads high," said Reardon. "But the injury bug has started to bite us, and we need some people to step up and play a bigger role for us."

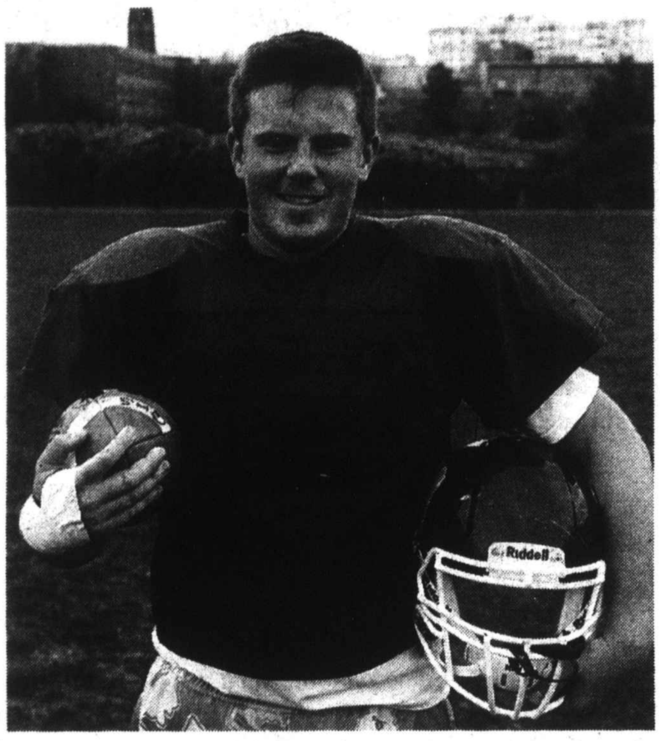
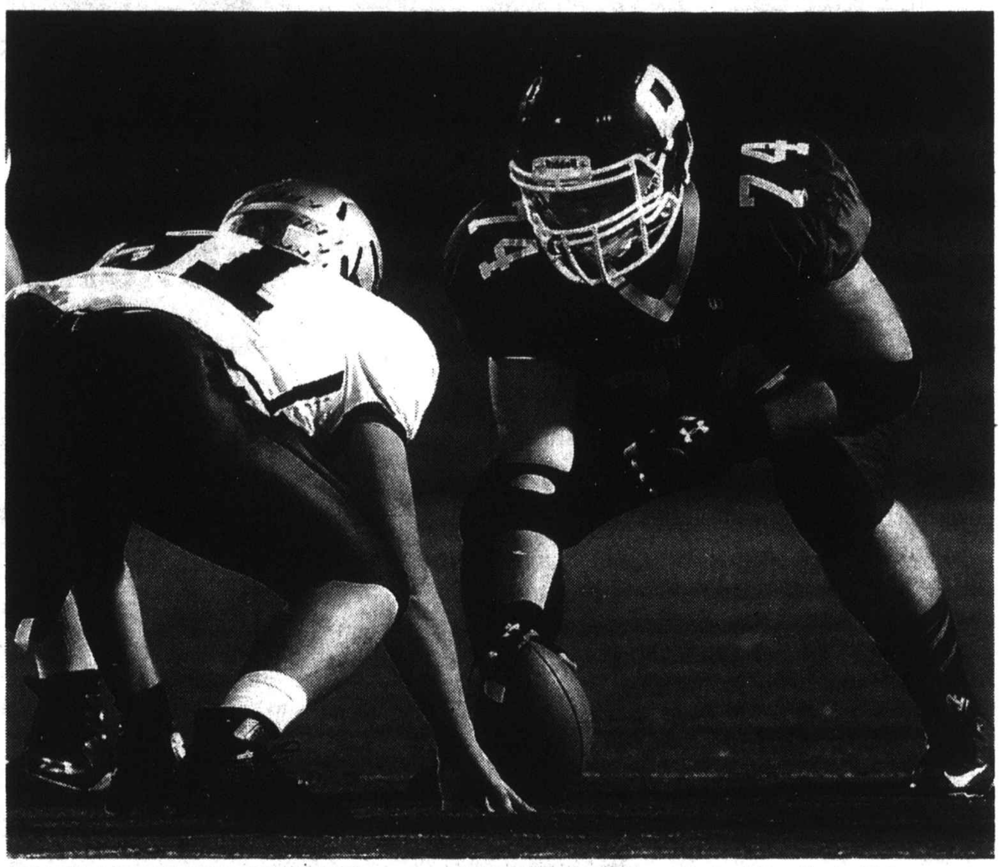
Quincy's Declan Mayo Inspires On, Off Gridiron

Legally Blind Football Player Overcomes Vision Challenge; Grateful Condition Has Stabilized

By BILL GRIFFIN



DECLAN MAYO, a Quincy high school senior, has overcome macular degeneration to be a leader on the Presidents' football team and an inspiration on - and off - the football field.



QUINCY VARSITY FOOTBALL center Declan Mayo gets ready to hike the ball to quarterback Cody Desmond. The senior, who is legally blind, is grateful because his vision condition is stable.

Quincy Sun Photos/Robert Bosworth

When Declan Mayo was eight years old, the baseball began to blur during games played in the evening. During hockey games, the puck would slip in and out of his vision. In school, the whiteboard and class papers grew more difficult to read.

His parents took him to the Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary in Boston. A specialist told the Mayo family that Declan had Stargardt's, a form of macular degeneration in which the cells of the eye die and cannot be replaced. There was no cure.

For five years, from ages eight to 13, his vision declined. For five years, a young boy felt his vision slip away. When he was far too young, he had to face a disability and a choice which would terrify most adults. Would he control his condition or would it control him? There were early times of confusion and doubt, but he quickly and firmly made his decision.

"I was a little confused when I first heard it because I was so young, but I knew I didn't want to let it stop me from living my life," he said. "I never would have made it without the support of my parents, family, friends, doctors and teachers. They have been unbelievable. It was because of them that I learned to cope with it. I didn't want to let it stop me."

He played hockey as long as he could until he simply could not see the puck. When he was 13, there was a great blessing which showed that good things do indeed happen to good people. His vision stabilized. He started playing football. This year as a senior in high school, 10 years after getting his diagnosis, Declan Mayo leads Quincy out of the huddle and takes his place at center on the offensive line.

"I cannot imagine how difficult it must be for Declan to play football. He is legally blind. He has very little peripheral vision," said Quincy coach Bill Reardon. "It's nothing he talks about a lot. He wants to be looked at like any player who has strengths and weaknesses. He loves the game, and he's a good football player."

When Mayo lines up, he can see the players on each team, but he has trouble picking out faces. On defense, there are times when he can't see who has the ball, so he fills his gap, holds off the block and tackles anyone who happens to pass by his path.

"My teammates are a huge help to me," said Mayo. "They make sure I have the right call. At practice, if coach puts up a drill, they let me know what it is and how he wants it run. During film study, they'll let me know if I made the right block on a play that's being shown."

The challenges extend to the classroom and to his studies at home. He cannot see the whiteboard. He cannot read papers which teachers pass out to students in class. He has a visual aid. Teachers e-mail him material from the board. He puts the e-mails and class papers in the visual aid which enlarges the materials so that he can read them.

"The visual aid comes from the Massachusetts Commission for the Blind," said Mayo. "There is a closed circuit TV in each room and it is connected to the aid. My teachers are great about being aware of what I need."

Homework is a more difficult task. There are no TVs, no visual aids. It is an issue, an issue every night of effort and time and patience and not giving in to what is hard to.

"My homework probably takes me twice as long as most kids," said Mayo who hopes to pursue a business career at UNH, Vermont, UMass or the University of North Carolina. "It just takes me that much longer to figure out the words."

Mayo is optimistic and grateful. Two weeks ago, he put on a pair of glasses which enabled him to read newspaper-size print at 5-10 feet away. Five years ago, this would have been the stuff of dreams. The future is full of promise, promise that Mayo is ready to touch because he has lived ten years of believing that all is possible if he works at it.

"I'm grateful because I have the best possible vision of anyone with my condition. The doctors think it will remain stable," said Mayo. "So many others have it much worse than me. There's a lot of research going on, and there's talk of a cure some day. I'm not sure about that, but I hope so because it would help so many people whose vision is worse than mine."

Hockey was his first love. He loved the skating, the speed, the hitting. It was the hardest sport for him to stop playing. His final hockey tour with the Quincy Bantam A All Stars took him fittingly to one of the most famous rinks in the world, to Lake Placid where the United States shocked the Soviet Union in the 1980 Olympics.

"It was unbelievable just to skate on the same ice. This is where The Miracle on Ice happened," said Mayo. "I scored a goal up there, on that same rink where we beat the Russians. I was on top of the world."

Why was it fitting that Mayo scored a goal at Lake Placid? Isn't that where the announcer Al Michaels celebrated with those words no American will ever forget? Remember listening when he said: Do you believe in miracles? Yes!

Fitting?

It was perfect.

in the ballgame, Panther RB Joseph Osgood scored a TD and QB Sean Dwyer added the conversion on a fake field goal, as the Panthers got their first win of the season, 19-0 over the Milton Mustangs. A strong Panthers defense protected their den on every possession.

The Panthers were sparked by the efforts of Sean Dwyer, Sean Butts, Proudley Louis, Brandon Tran, Rolinsky Saint Cyr, Joseph Osgood, Billy Nguyen, Manny Maloof and Adam Reinhart.

ELKS-30
STORM-16

The West Quincy Elks game against the Squantum Storm was a tale of two quarters.

The Storm came out swinging against the undefeated Elks, eating through the entire first quarter on a long drive that netted 6 points. The TD came on a final run by Michael Adamson but it was a total team effort across the line, with blocking from Kevin Dihn, Jackson Zhao, Steven Wallace and Adam Higgins. An attempt at an extra point was no good on a pass from QB Thomas Roche to tight end Erik Mayo. The defense held the Elks on the next possession, with outstanding play from brothers Josh and Sean Jackson and Shane O'Connell. The team wasn't able to capitalize on the next possession but pinned the Elks near their own goal line and was able to force a safety.

After trailing 8-0 in the first half, the Elks played an inspired second half, scoring quickly with Stuart Dozier continuing his running streak with a touchdown to turn things around. The Elks came back immediately by getting the ball back on a successful onside kick. This also netted points for the Elks and the momentum had changed hands for the remainder of the game. QB Franco Calabro then hauled in three more touchdowns to Dozier, Landon Pierron and Franck Yhomby against a strong Storm defense. Milo Santangelo had two remarkable fumble recoveries helping the Elks score an impressive 30 points in one quarter. Two-way play heroes this week were Evan Dyer and Pat Devoy. Sean O'Toole was also a standout player this week. Eoin Gormley kicked in three extra points.

The Storm never gave up though, with another rushing TD later in the game by Josh Jackson, as well as a fumble recovery by Michael Dooley. The varsity team has played well against every opponent so far this year but is still looking to put together a complete game.

JUNIOR VARSITY

The Apaches Brian Gutro returned the opening kick of the second half, 55 yards for a TD. His Brother, Scott Gutro added the conversion as the Apaches closed the Manets lead 16-8. Late in the game, Devin Demand capped a drive with a 1 yard TD Run as the Manets (3-1) defeated the Apaches (3-1) in this division matchup.

The Apaches saw fine performances from Kiera Sleiman, Billy MacDonald, Harry Gaudiano, Michael Pollestretti, Dylan Rizzo, Connor Plante, Brian Gutro, Scott Gutro, Matt Leonard and Matt Craig. The Manets were lead by the efforts of Devin Desmond, Zack Luggelle, Campbell Tierney, Mike Cascarano, Kevin Gomez, Joey Manton, Andrew Engren and Devin Lopez.

PANTHERS-20

ELKS-32
STORM-8

The West Quincy Elks JV team secured another win behind quarterback Amarion Robinson. Robinson was effective, completing a touchdown pass to newcomer Joe Brahimi and hitting up Bobby Jaehnig for a diving two-point conversion. Brahimi contributed 2 more touchdowns to help his team stay ahead. Malik Francis and Aidan Dyer also added touchdown runs to the board. Strong two-way play by Riley O'Connell and Billy Lee Hibbard help secure the Elks lead.

The Storm were strong in the first half. Leading the charge was Daniel Freeman, who got the Storm on the scoreboard. The team was poised to get a second touchdown behind running back Joey Dyer and QB

What is Vehicle-To-Vehicle Technology?

By JOHN PAUL
AAA's Car Doctor

Now in development, vehicle-to-vehicle (V2V) communication systems use a GPS receiver, a radio/antenna and a computer to share automobile location and movement information with other V2V-equipped vehicles up to a quarter mile away. That information is then analyzed and used to alert the driver to potentially hazardous situations. Warnings can be provided in a variety of ways, including sounds, visual icons, control feedback and seat vibrations.

More advanced systems may also employ vehicle-to-infrastructure (V2I) communications that allow the car to receive driving condition information from traffic lights, road signs or even the highway itself. Common notifications might include traffic congestion, speed limits, or height restrictions on bridges and tunnels. The combination of V2V and V2XI technology is often referred to as V2X.

When V2X capabilities are integrated with advanced driver assistance systems, the vehicle could take control of the brakes and/or steering to avoid a collision if a driver fails to react in time. Unexpected emergency situations combined with ineffective driver reactions result in millions of crashes every year.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration projects that V2X systems could help prevent up to 81 percent of collisions involving drivers not impaired by drugs or alcohol. As V2X-equipped vehicles begin to appear on our roadways, shared information could also be used to smooth traffic flow, reduce congestion, improve fuel economy and cut emissions.

Automakers, technology providers, research institutes and governmental agencies are all engaged in developing V2V and V2I technology. The Department of Transportation is expected to decide whether V2X systems should be among the safety features built into our vehicles. Given its potential benefits, there is a good possibility your next new car will employ V2X communications to help you be a better driver.

Recently I drove a 2016 Volvo XC90 and it had some of this technology. As an example if I failed to react to a car stopping in front of me the car would stop. If I turned left into traffic and there was a car coming and a collision was imminent the car would stop. If the driver failed to buckle their seat belt and you shifted into reverse the car wouldn't move until the driver was buckled up. There was even a phone app that would allow the owner of the car to monitor its location, lock and unlock the doors and get warning such as the doors weren't locked or the car is running.

Are these systems without issues? No. Recently some hackers demonstrated how through a flaw in one vehicle's software that major functions of the vehicle could be controlled without the driver's permission.

Fall Automotive Care

Antilock Brakes, High-Mileage Cars

Ask John Paul: AAA New England's Car Doctor

I own a 2014 Chevy Cruze LS, it has a manual transmission and so far I have 16,000 miles on it. Should the brakes "lock up" even when I have antilock brakes? Since I have owned the car the brakes did indeed 'lock up' when I had to stop quickly on a dry road.

Antilock brakes using a combination of sensors and computers will limit the amount of brake lockup but may not eliminate it completely. During a panic stop you may hear some tire chirping but the car shouldn't skid. Remember the purpose of ABS brakes is to allow you to apply the brakes while still having control of the car so you can both steer and stop.

I wonder if you would be willing to give me your opinion on what to do about my 2008 Saab 9-2 T wagon. I love, love, love this car. I bought it from a dealer with 1,200 miles on it and it now has 47,000 miles on it and it has been serviced regularly. I winter in Florida so it sits in my garage in Massachusetts for four months in the winter. I can't decide whether to drive it to Florida for the four months I am there and leave it outside in my lanai for eight months or trade it in for a new car? My other concern is finding a mechanic and parts in the area. What should I do?

I think your car is much better off in a garage for four months in the winter than in the Florida heat for eight months. Lack of use of a car can actually cause its own share of problems. Of course the best choice is to have someone drive/exercise the car for 30 minutes once every three weeks or so. Regarding finding a mechanic and parts for your Saab 9-2, your Saab is really just a well disguised Subaru WRX. Anyone familiar with servicing a Subaru will be able to service your Saab.

I have heard of winter and summer gas for cars and how they are chemically different. I was wondering if items like, lawn mowers, snow blowers, generators, chain saws and leaf blowers do any better with summer gas. Should we buy summer gas now, for our yard machines to be prepared for winter?

Just like cars your power equipment will perform better with seasonal gasoline. Winter gasoline is formulated to start in colder temperatures. Using gasoline left over from summer is almost guaranteed to give you a starting problem with any of your winter machines. When using power equipment it is always best to use fresh fuel for best performance.

This may seem like a silly question but the recommended tire pressure for my car's tires is 32 PSI in all tires. According to the dash display the tires are about 5 PSI overinflated. Where I am confused is that when I get the oil change the tires end up at 37 PSI not the 32 PSI the owner's manual calls for. What do you recommend?

It has been my experience that the tire pressure sensors (TPMS) are quite accurate, but that is not to say there may not be a problem. My recommendation it to check the tire pressure with a gauge when the tires are cool and adjust the pressure to 32 PSI. Once you have the tires properly inflated then check the dash display. If you see a discrepancy in the readings double check the actual reading with another tire gauge, if both gauges agree then there must be a problem with the TPMS.

JOHN PAUL

I'm looking for a car to get me to the train, about seven miles a day, but would like to spend as little as possible. I am okay with something over 100,000 miles, but do need a car with some size. I do see that 2000-03 Buicks, Lincolns, and Cadillacs can be had for about $5,000 with around 150,000 miles on them. What are your thoughts about buying a car with high miles?

Any one of these cars can be good or bad choices, it really depends on how the car was maintained and driven. Recently I saw at a great looking 2000 Toyota Camry that sold for $3,500. This Camry was very clean, had the original paint (no prior body work) and appeared well-maintained. To my surprise the car had 230,000 miles, but it sounded like it would last another 100,000 miles. All in all I thought the car was well bought.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Wednesday, September 30, 2015, at approximately 6:30 p.m., Officer Jay Borden was dispatched to a large apartment complex in the north end of the city to investigate a report of a past Breaking and Entering.

Upon arrival, the Officer was escorted to the apartment by the Desk Concierge. Officer Borden observed that the wooden door was split open and the locking mechanism was strewn about the floor. The Officer announced his presence by yelling, "Quincy Police" and then conducted a protective sweep of the apartment to insure no suspects or victims were inside the residence.

As he checked the apartment, he smelled a strong odor of raw marijuana. He then discovered three large clear trash bags on the floor of the bedroom all filled with marijuana. Officer Borden requested that patrol Sergeant J.P. Kelly respond to the scene.

Officer Bossart arrived on scene to assist and he discovered more marijuana on the living room table. He also observed some white powder residue, believed to be cocaine, with a straw and razor blade on the TV stand in the living room.

Just prior to Sergeant Kelly arriving, the female owner of the unit arrived. When asked if she knew who may have tried to break in, she said, "No." Sergeant Kelly arrived on scene and after being updated, contacted members of the Drug Control Unit. The victim was allowed to enter her apartment to see if anything appeared to be missing. After a brief scan, the victim said that nothing appeared to be out of place other than the door being damaged. DCU Detectives Powers and Glennon arrived on scene and introduced themselves to the victim. They explained to her that due to the large amount of marijuana on scene, they were called to the scene. The victim said that she has a medical marijuana card which she showed the Detectives. Detective Powers explained to her that the medical marijuana card allowed her to possess a 10 ounce supply of marijuana for 60 days. He further explained that the marijuana that was discovered in plain view for all to see was more than 10 ounces.

The Detectives questioned the victim about the break and determined that there were no known suspects at this time. There was no noticeable evidence that the apartment had been entered. Detective Powers advised the victim, now suspect, that she was being placed under arrest for "Possession with Intent to Distribute Class D (Marijuana).

While the suspect, a 35 year old Quincy resident, was transported to the station for booking, Detective O'Brien and Officer Scott Smith remained on scene to secure the unit while Detective Powers returned to the station to apply for a search warrant.

At 9:20 p.m., Detective Powers was granted a search warrant for the residence. The search of the apartment uncovered approximately five pounds of marijuana, several prescription pills to include but not limited to, Adderall, Alprazolam and Lorazepam. $271 was also seized along with an IPhone. An asset forfeiture form was completed and will be submitted to the District Attorney's Office. The suspect was additionally charged with, "Possession Class B (Adderall) with Intent to Distribute, Possession Class C (Alprazolam & Clonazepam) with Intent to Distribute and Possession Class D with Intent to Distribute." Nice Work!

FTC AND WEIGHT LOSS CLAIMS: The FTC (Federal Trade Commission) warns consumers to be wary of weight loss claims, citing the example of Roca Labs, who said in their ads that they could get the same weight loss results without any type of surgery. This company targeted people considering gastric bypass surgery. Roca Labs stated that their approved ingredients would drastically limit how much people could eat with a 90% success rate. Children as young as 6 years old could safely use the product. An investigation by the FTC revealed that Roca Labs did not have scientific evidence to support their weight loss claims. They also uncovered that Roca Labs offered to pay for testimonials. When victims complained that the product didn't work and wanted their money back, they were told that there would be no refund and they would have to pay even more money if they wrote negative reviews. Those who chose to write a negative review anyway were sued by the company and had their sensitive health information exposed in public court documents.

Bottom line: Do your research before signing up for any weight loss program. Google the company name and put "scam" and "reviews" after it to see what others are saying.

As always, feel free to contact me with any concerns about dealing with a company or offer.

Homeowners Warned About Deed Scam

Direct-Mail Solicitations Offer Property Deeds For 'Outrageous Profits'

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell says he continues to be frustrated regarding Norfolk County residents who continue to receive direct-mail solicitations offering them a certified copy of their property deed for an exorbitant fee ranging anywhere from $59.50 to $83.

"These companies are making outrageous profits," O'Donnell said. "If a consumer knew that the Registry of Deeds would provide them a certified copy of a property deed for a charge of only $1 per page, plus an additional $1 for postage, they would never agree to pay these companies such an outrageous fee for service.

"The average price for a mailed homeowner's deed by the Registry (usually two pages) is $3."

According to Registry officials, the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds has heard numerous stories from Norfolk County residents about examples of receiving deed solicitation notices from a California private company. The solicitation was labeled Recorded Deed Notice and requested that the homeowner forward a check to them in the amount of $83.00 for a copy of their deed.

A Weymouth resident, who received the solicitation, notified the Registry about the advertisement instead of spending $83.

"While the practice may be legal, it's certainly not ethical," O'Donnell said. "Clearly these direct-mail companies are preying upon the innocent assumptions of Norfolk County residents, many of whom are first-time homeowners. Consumers are interpreting these notices as a bill, since they are affixed with a due date. I urge Norfolk County citizens not to fall prey to these types of misleading deed scam advertisements."

The Registry advices homeowners who receive such a deed solicitation notice to contact the Registry's Customer Service Department immediately at (781) 461-6101 or by email at registerodonnell@norfolkdeeds.org.

Additionally, homeowners who desire a copy of their deed should also contact the Registry's Customer Service Department. The Departrment will provide a copy of a deed for a nominal fee of usually $2.

To learn more about these and other Registry of Deeds events and initiatives, like us at facebook.com/NorfolkDeeds or follow us on twitter.com/NorfolkDeeds.

The Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, located at 649 High St., Dedham is the principal office for real property in Norfolk County. The Registry is a resource for homeowners, title examiners, mortgage lenders, municipalities and others with a need for secure, accurate, accessible land record information.

Residents in need of assistance can contact the Registry of Deeds Customer Service Department via telephone at (781) 461-6101, or on the web at www.norfolkdeeds.org.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Some flashes of Aries ire might erupt as you confront an unusually bewildering situation. But you should be able to keep your temper under control as you work through it.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) That marriage 'twixt the arts and practicality that Taureans excel at once again highlights your enjoyment of much of the week. However, you need to watch any sudden urge to splurge.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Even with all the plusses apparently outweighing the minuses, you still might want to defer an important decision to make sure you have all the facts you need.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) One or two problems might threaten to derail otherwise smoothly running situations at work or at home. But a few well-placed words should help get things back on track quickly.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) This could be a good time for all you Leos and Leonas in the spotlight to open your generous Lion's hearts and share the glory with those who helped you accomplish so much along the way.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You might want to get advice from someone who's been there and knows these situations better than you do, before investing time or money (or both) in a questionable matter.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Be careful how you handle a workplace matter that seems out of place in the schedule you've prepared. Before you act, one way or another, find out who set it up and why.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your entertainment aspect is strong this week. Besides providing a wonderful break from everyday obligations, sharing fun times brings you closer to those you care for.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Having a weekend fun fest? Your friend or relative who's down in the emotional dumps could perk up if you find a way to include him or her in your plans.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) If you're in one of those "the Goat knows best" periods, you might want to ease up and try listening to what others have to say. You could learn something.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) That new challenge is getting closer, and you should be out there now showing facts and figures to potential allies to help persuade them to rally to your support. Good luck.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Getting a head start on holiday plans could help free up some time later to spend on other projects. Meanwhile, a colleague has some ideas that you might find worth discussing.

BORN THIS WEEK: You are always there for others, and sometimes you need to be reminded that you need to be there for yourself as well.

Stephen T. Keefe, Jr., 93

STEPHEN T. KEEFE, JR.

Major General Stephen T. Keefe Jr., USAFR (retired), died of natural causes on Sept. 29 2015, in Prescott, Ariz. He was 93.

Mr. Keefe was a veteran of World War II, the Korean Conflict and the Cuban Missile Crisis. He retired to Arizona in 1991 with his loving wife Ethel Keefe.

General Keefe was born in Cambridge and grew up in Arlington surrounded by a loving family. In 1942, he left Northeastern University and joined the Army Air Corps. He flew for the 8th Air Corps in Africa during the Allies' advancement. Upon returning, Mr. Keefe remained in the newly formed Air Force Reserves and was stationed at Hansom AFB where he became the group commander. Mr. Keefe finished college and married Mary (Feeley) in 1948 and had three sons, David, Stephen and Michael. In 1950, he was called up for the Korean Conflict just as he was accepted to Harvard Law School. During the Korean Conflict, General Keefe flew F-86 Sabre jets. Upon returning to civilian life, he graduated from Suffolk Law and joined Myron Lane in the Norfolk District Attorney's Office.

He continued his Air Force Reserve career and in 1962 was called up yet again during the Cuban Missile Crisis. General Keefe's units was comprised of C-119 aircraft and likely would have been in the first wave had there been an escalation. He was always very proud of the formation flyover of Quincy he led upon his return from the missile conflict. Mr. Keefe had formed a private practice in 1960 in Quincy, so the Cuban crisis interruption of his law practice was a challenge only befitting of his energy and drive. For many years, Mr. Keefe's office was across Hancock Street from his friend Henry Bosworth and The Quincy Sun.

Mr. Keefe maintained a balanced career of the law and the Air Force until his retirement in 1982 as a major general, the highest possible rank attainable as a reservist.

He was active in Quincy Republican politics, supported many local charities and served as assistant city solicitor to the then Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa. He was admitted to the American College of Trial Lawyers and led his litigation practice centered in Quincy Square and Weymouth for more than 30 years.

Survived by his loving wife Ethel, three sons, ten grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

Ms. Fournier enjoyed the beach, walks in the park, reading and listening to music. Her main passion was her family and spending time with those she loved, especially her niece Skylar Marie and her aunts. She will be sadly missed by all those who had the pleasure of knowing her.

Interment at Cedar Grove Cemetery, Boston.

FRESHMAN:

MANETS-6

APACHES-0

It was a defensive battle on the muddy turf at Cavanaugh Field. Manets QB Dean Schaaf ran for a TD late in the first half. Apaches RB Aden Le scored late in the first quarter on a 63 yard run, only to have it called back on a penalty. The Manets drove the ball deep into the redzone and took a knee and the victory, 6-0 over the Apaches.

The Apaches saw strong performances from JC Petrongolo, Aden Le, Kobe Nguyen, Grant Murphy, Matt Whooley, Jesse Hansen, Nick Hughes and Sean Burns. The Manets (4-0) were led by the play of Schaaf, Teddy Lynch, Alex Rheault, Max Van Tassell, Ryan Gomez, Chris Brady, Brandon Toomer and Kevin Slade.

MUSTANGS-0

Panthers QB, Andrew Novak scored on a 1 yard TD plunge and Eric Lommano added the conversion to take an 8-0 lead. Colin MacPherson recovered a fumble on the kickoff, setting up a 30 yard TD run by Lommano (100 rushing yards). Later in the first half, Panthers RB Marcus Lloyd scored on a 40 yard TD run. Caleb Parsons-Gomes added the conversion as the Panthers (4-0) defeated the Mustangs 22-0 and remain undefeated.

ELKS-32

STORM-0

The West Quincy Elks secured their first win of the season this weekend against the Squantum Storm. Quarterback Chase Morales scored a touchdown along with teammates Cydney Green and Matthew Nellany. Brody Baker also played a strong two-way game.

The Storm had difficulty finding their footing on the soggy O'Rourke field, as rain and heavy wind persisted into the second game. The boys played their heart out though and had a couple drives that showed promise, with one ending in a turnover in Elk territory, certainly due to the conditions. Lead by Marcus Moore at QB, the team saw Charlie Baker return to the field after one missed game due to injury. The squad got great play from Paul Glynn, Cullen Quilty, Mathew Wallace, Jacky Zhao, Alex Mirshak and new standout Noel Sancho.

DARE TO RESIST DRUGS AND VIOLENCE.
DRUG ABUSE RESISTANCE EDUCATION

The D.A.R.E. program, a partnership between law enforcement, teachers, and parents to educate elementary school children about the dangers of drug use, used to be enough to deter the majority of children from starting on the path of drug addiction.

NOT ANY MORE! In the current climate, children and young adults are getting addicted to opioids at an alarming rate. We MUST do more! The education process has to start at a younger age and continue through high school. We have to make our children aware of the dangers along with letting them know that if they are already involved with drugs, there is help available if they need it.

Partnership™
for Drug-Free Kids

The Middle Schools in Quincy have also increased their drug awareness through more intense programs, lectures, and mentoring exercises funded by outside partners. We have realized the problem that continues to plague the city, state, and country. We have to be open to new programs, family's experiences, and all local/state agencies that can offer help. Everyone must work together and realize that this epidemic wants to contaminate all.

AT THE HIGH SCHOOL LEVEL

High School programs have been strengthened over the last several years in Quincy. Again new programs, outside lectures and seminars, local real life experiences have been shared with our youth.

QPS Health/Life Interventionists were hired over the last few years and have been a huge plus for the youth of Quincy, the teachers, the staff, and the community. These two positions are based in both high schools and will remain for years to come to combat, guide, and assist the school community.

AT THE QUINCY CITY COUNCIL LEVEL

Quincy City Council Level.... The Mayor's Quincy Drug Task Force was established a number of years ago. It is a great, solid start. This is a task force that works with every agency, department, and organization affiliated with Quincy and all its branches.

I want to establish more communication and initiatives within the council on this important subject. Work as one with the Mayor's office and make sure that we promote this subject that cannot be ignored. I think we can do much better understanding this situation and establish even better communications between QPD, QPS, Norfolk County Sheriff, State Level agencies, and local organizations.

AN OLD MASSACHUSETTS STATE INITIATIVE

Preventing Alcohol and Other Drug Use by Pre-Teens

In Massachusetts, one of four seventh graders reported drinking alcohol in the last month.*

Pediatric clinicians can help prevent early use of alcohol, tobacco, and other drugs (ATOD) by supporting anti-drug messages from families and schools. Through health guidance and appropriate intervention, pediatric clinicians can help pre-teens lead drug-free lives.

Note: Almost 14 years ago this seventh grade statistic came out, Where are we now?

I realize these programs may not affect the everyday taxpayer, but this is as important to the City of Quincy as all the other city initiatives that come up every year. The opiate epidemic is killing off a generation. It does not matter where you come from—it finds you and it stays with you until it gets you.

We can't walk away from this fight. Help me help Quincy with one of your three votes on November 3rd. I know I can help if elected....Thank you.

15 Victims Of Domestic Violence Remembered At Vigil

'Speak Loudly For Those Who Cannot Speak For Themselves'

By MIRIAM JOSEPH

Every 9 seconds in the U.S. a woman is assaulted or beaten. One in three women and one in four men have been victims of some form of physical violence by an intimate partner within their lifetime, according to the National Coalition Against Domestic Violence. And in Quincy, the police department reported 1,000 domestic violence calls in the past year.

As October is National Domestic Violence Awareness Month, Quincy's advocacy group DOVE, (DOmestic Violence Ended) recently held a memorial vigil to honor 14 area women and one man who were murdered in the past year in instances of domestic violence.

Vigil attendees read a brief description of each victim's life and the deadly circumstances which ended it, accompanied by bell-ringing and candle-lighting on the altar of the chapel at Quincy Community United Methodist Church in Wollaston.

National statistics show women ages 18-24 are most commonly abused by an intimate partner, a statistic in Positive Trends For Real Estate Activity

Real estate sales in Norfolk County were robust during the third quarter, but Register of Deeds William O'Donnell says there are signs of "leveling off."

"The third quarter saw a robust 11 percent increase in properties sold," O'Donnell reports. "A total of 5,369 deeds were recorded compared to 4,848 for the 3rd quarter 2014. This is further evidence that Norfolk County continues to be a destination location for individuals and families to live and work.

"In addition, the quarter saw a solid 14 percent growth rate compared to last year's period in total dollar volume of commercial and residential sales," O'Donnell said.

One note of caution, the register said, was the minimal 2 percent increase in the average sale price of commercial and residential property to $647,737.

"We saw the average sale price of real estate in Norfolk County begin to slow down in August and the overall quarterly figure reflects this trend. This minimal increase in average real estate price can be partly attributed to limited real estate inven-

Deer Hunt Decision Due This Month

By SCOTT JACKSON

A final decision from state officials on a plan that would allow deer hunting in the Blue Hills Reservation later this fall is expected this month.

The Department of Conservation and Recreation held three public meetings on the plan, which would allow up to 120 hunters a day into the 7,000-acre reservation for four days in November and December. Hunters would be allowed to use shotguns to cull the deer inside the park; the Blue Hills Reservation contains more than four times the number of deer recommended per square mile, according to a 2013 survey.

In addition to those public meetings – held in Quincy, Milton and Canton – DCR also invited the

The 50-minute debate was sponsored by a number of organizations, including Quincy Asian Resources Inc. and South Cove Community Health Center. Finn Seeks Study On Bus Stop Safety

By SCOTT JACKSON

Council President Joseph Finn is seeking an independent, objective study related to the proximity of bus stops to gas stations in the city.

Finn introduced an order calling for the study at the City Council's most recent meeting on Oct. 5. The order says one Quincy gas station has been inconvenienced by passengers waiting for MBTA buses; those passengers have used the gas station's canopy to take shelter during inclement weather and some passengers have been seen smoking in the vicinity of the re-fueling area.

"This is a matter that has been actually in play for quite a while. It's a request that started, I think, at the clerk's office related to one specific [gas station] but it has raised issues in my own mind," Finn said. "It raises the larger issue of safety as it relates to bus stops approximate to gas stations."

"This in my mind is one of those situations that nobody considers until after an accident happens," he added. "I think it's certainly worthy of consideration from a safety perspective as well as an oversight perspective."

Finn's order was refered

3 Fires Claim 2 Buildings, 8 Boats In 72 Hours

SONS OF LEBANON Hall in Quincy Point was gutted by a two-alarm fire early Sunday morning. The long vacant building at 12 Lebanon St. was a total loss and was demolished Monday. DUPLEX at 98 Phillips St. in Wollaston was a total loss following a two-alarm fire Saturday night. An engine company located the fire after receiving complaints of smoke in the neighborhood. The building was a total loss. Five firefighters sustained injuries while fighting the fire but were able to remain on scene. This was the second of three fires in the city in less than 72 hours.

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Quincy Fire Department responded to three two-alarm fires, which collectively claimed two buildings and destroyed or damaged eight boats, over the course of 72 hours.

The first fire – at Captain's Cove Marina on the Town River – engulfed eight boats in flames that shot 50 feet into the air. At least five of those boats were destroyed.

That fire was reported around 7:30 a.m. on Oct. 8, according to Quincy Fire Department Deputy Chief Gary Smyth. Thirty Quincy firefighters were on scene and were assisted by the Quincy Police Department's Marine Unit, which Smyth credited with towing to safety six other boats in the vicinity of the fire, and Brewster Ambulance, which flew a drone over the marina to provide Smyth an aerial view of the situation.

Quincy does not have a fireboat, but fireboats from other agencies, including the Boston, Beverly, Cambridge Fire Departments as well as Massport responded and helped fight the fire from the water. Those boats had been in Boston Harbor that morning for training sessions.

"We were fortunate we got such a quick response," Smyth said.

The fire was extinguished by approximately 10 a.m.

In all, Smyth said eight boats were caught in the conflagration; five of those were destroyed and the other three damaged. No injuries to firefighters or anyone at the marina were reported. Several residents were left homeless when the houseboats they were living on were destroyed.

Topaz, the birthstone for November, is considered by many of its admirers to be close to an ideal gemstone for jewelry. It ranks very high on the Mohs hardness scale (8), behind only diamond (10) and sapphire/ruby (9), which means that it can stand up to everyday wear. It is also widely available and comes in an abundance of colors, including blue, red, green, yellow, orange, brown, pink, purple, gray, and multi-colored, as well as white and clear. The most valuable of these is the golden orange-yellow type that is known as "Imperial Topaz." Pinkish-red and orange-red topaz are also held in high regard, their values increasing in accordance with the depth of the orange and red hues.

Topaz was often used to promote wisdom in its wearer, which may explain the medieval custom of giving topaz rings to heads of state, diplomats, and royalty. The finest quality precious stones have been a hallmark of our tradition. Our store at 1402 Hancock St. in Quincy Center carries the finest and most recognized names in jewelry and gifts. Results Later - But Not Real Late

Later – but not real late – on Election Night.

That's the word on election results from City Clerk Joseph Shea who will have to make some adjustments in tabulating ballots after the polls close Nov. 3 due to the write-in candidacy of former School Committeewoman Emily Lebo.

That's because ballots that bear a write-in name or a sticker are counted by hand – but for that race only.

Sound confusing?

It really isn't.

In the case of the school committee race, there are three names on the ballot: Incumbent Paul Bregoli, incumbent Kathryn Hubley and political newcomer James DeAmicis. Lebo will be instructing supporters to write her name in or place a sticker bearing her name and address on the "write-in" line under the three school committee candidate names.

Those who vote by sticker or write-in would also have to fill in the oval next to the name/sticker – just as one would have to fill in the oval next to a printed name on the ballot to have that vote count.

Ballots with stickers or write-ins are automatically dropped into the "hand count" bin of the ballot machine. Those without stickers/write-ins are counted by the machine and go into in the automatic bin.

So, in the case of the school committee race, final results will not be determined until after the machine-counted and write-in or hand-counted ballots are tallied together. As a result, the school committee race will probably be known after the results from the other contests, including mayor.

It's important to point out that voting machines will automatically count how that voter voted in the other races even if those ballots that are cast with write-in or stickers in the school committee contest.

In other words, votes cast in the mayor's, councillor at-large and ward councillor races will be counted by the machine even if the voter opted to write in a vote for school committee. The school committee results won't be known until all of the machine votes are added with the write-in or stickers.

"The sticker campaign in the school committee race will not affect the vote tabulation in the other races on the ballot, including the mayor's race," Shea said, "provided the sticker is placed on the write-in line and the oval next to it is filled out. The School Committee race results will be a little slower.

"The (ballot) machine tape will indicate the number of write-in votes but these ballots will be separated out and must be counted by hand," he explained.

Shea said he will be adding election workers to the precincts and provide extra training to help with the sticker campaign count. The sticker/write-in ballots will be counted at the precincts before they are brought to City Hall.

The city clerk hopes all results – including the school committee race – will be known by 11 p.m. on Election Night. The other races, including mayor, could be determined by 10 p.m. or earlier.

Lebo is trying to win back a school seat after she was unseated two years ago. First elected to a four-year term in 2009, she finished fourth and lost her seat in 2013. That was the year political newcomer Noel DiBona topped the school committee field. Re-elected were incumbents Anne Mahoney and Barbara Isola.

As a sticker candidate, Lebo will be trying to accomplish something that has never happened in a local election: win a write-in campaign for a city office.

She says she'll be distributing cards with a sticker with her name and address on it to registered voters. Those who want to cast a ballot for her must adhere the sticker to the ballot on the line "write-in" under the school committee names and then fill in the oval next to the sticker. Voters who want vote for Lebo can also write in her name and fill in the oval next to the written name.

That's certainly another layer of organization and awareness that Lebo will have to address in her bid for support at the ballot box Nov. 3.

But there are other requirements that are spelled out by the Secretary of State's office.

Here are a few of them:

- All write-in or sticker votes should include the correct name and address of the candidates. Courts have ruled that a vote should be counted whenever the intent of the voter can reasonably be determined, even if a voter omits the candidate's address or makes a mistake in the name or address.
- Write-in or sticker votes are counted for the office where the name is written or sticker placed.
- Campaign materials, including stickers, cannot be distributed within 150 feet of the polling location. The 150-foot area includes the polling place, in the building where the polling place is located, on the walls thereof, on the premises on which the building stands, or within 150 fee of the building entrance door to such polling place.

CITY CLERK Joseph Shea is sticking to his predication of 44 to 46 percent turnout for the Nov. 3rd election. Those numbers are in line with turnouts for the first two Thomas Koch-William Phelan mayoral bouts.

In 2007, 44.5 percent of the city's 53,540 registered voters turned out at the polls. That was the year Koch unseated Phelan who was first elected in 2001 after defeating incumbent Jim Sheets.

In their first rematch in 2009, 44.72 percent of the city's registered voters went to the polls. Koch was elected to a second term.

In 2011, when Anne Mahoney unsuccessfully challenged Koch, turnout was 34.91 percent.

You have to go back 26 years – 1989 – for a turnout higher than 50 percent in a city election. That year, 60.6 percent of the city's 49,012 registered voters went to the polls and elected Sheets mayor over Peter O'Connell.

There have been turnouts higher than 50 percent since 1989 – but those have been for state or Presidential elections.

Finn: Study Bus Stop Safety

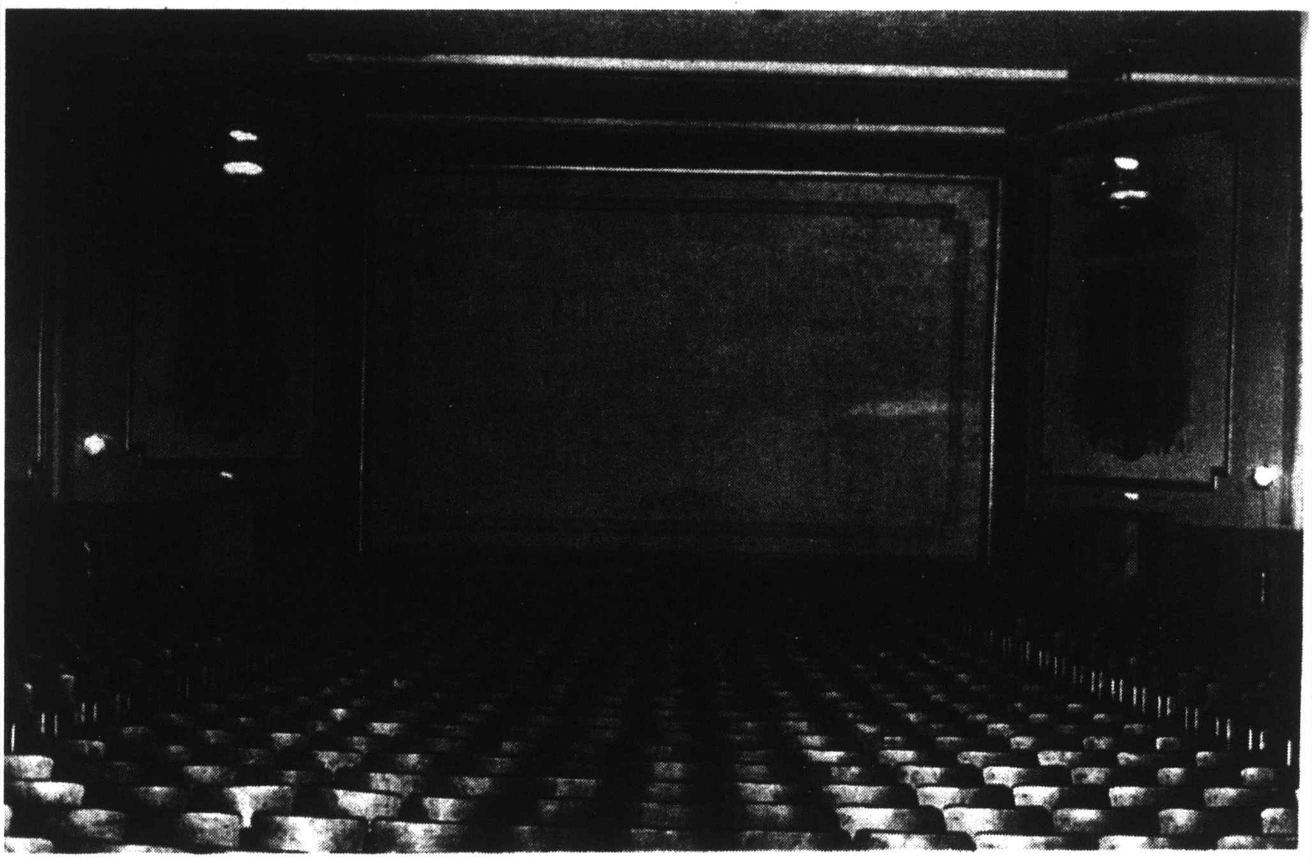
to the council's oversight and public safety committees. It asks that Fire Chief Joseph Barron conduct a study related to public safety concerns related to locating bus stops near gas stations. That study would taken into consideration all applicable laws and owners of gas stations would be given a chance to testify about any inconveniences, liabilities and difficulties incurred by the proximity of bus stops to their businesses.

Ultimately, Finn's order asks the council to consider drafting a local ordinance to address the issue.

Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest said Finn's order was timely, because the MBTA recently eliminated two Germantown bus stops. She is working to get them restored and plans to hold a neighborhood meeting with the transit agency.

"I appreciate that you're bringing this forward. My district was blindsided recently with the MBTA removing two bus stops from Germantown, an area that is primarily accessed by public transportation," Laforest said. "We are working with the MBTA and we're working with some neighbors on a petition to gather some signatures to get these bus stops back."

Scenes From Yesterday



THIS IS A 1948 postcard reproduction showing the Wollaston Theater's 1,259-seat tiered auditorium. Its broad aisles sloped from the standing room rear lobby down to the orchestra pit and stage. Built in 1926 by local builder and realtor Edward Sears, it was first used for vaudeville and later moving picture shows. Its curved 40-foot wide screen was the largest of its kind south of Boston. Overhead were five elaborate crystal chandeliers; two shown here, two more in the back and a much larger one in the center. The ornate faux opera boxes on each side of the screen highlighted the use of gilded molding encased wall panels throughout the theater. They served as decorations as well as frames for posters of coming attractions. Everyone in Wollaston knew Joseph "Mr." McDermott, the general manager who for many years greeted you at the last set of doors in the entrance lobby and tore your ticket in two before you entered the refreshment area. Thirty-five years ago the heirs of the Sears family sold the theater to local businessman Arthur Chandler. He along with his wife ran the theater for 20 years, but struggled with the costly repairs necessary to maintain the building's integrity. They finally closed it in 2003. It has been sold again and now the 90-year-old "Wolly" faces probable demolition. Note the word asbestos on the lower center of the stage curtain which was to alert the audience to the presence of the fireproof curtain. It could be quickly dropped to protect them in the event of a fire resulting from vaudeville acts on stage. One of which killed 600 people in a Chicago theater. Quincycles Thanks Officials For New Bike Infrastructure

Quincycles, a volunteer cycling advocacy organization, would like to thank MassDOT and our city officials for their part in the city's newest bit of bike infrastructure. As part of the Fore River Bridge project, the East Howard Street and Quincy Avenue intersection has been revamped. The result is a great example of what Quincy can do for its cyclists.

This intersection now increases cyclists' and drivers' awareness of each other as they share the road. As the East Howard Street westbound right turn only lane begins a dotted line bike lane works to create a corridor for cyclists who wish to continue straight through the intersection as well as to remind drivers that approaching cyclists may be in the lane as they move to the right. The green colored bike lane at the light designates safe space for cyclists and encourages drivers to honor the need to share the road.

Quincy is taking small steps toward a better transportation future in which everyone feels safe on our roads and more people can comfortably choose alternate means of transport.

Thank you MassDOT and Quincy!

Don't Forget To Register And Vote

As the Nov. 3 election approaches quickly, the citizens of Quincy obviously live in a great city with some great public leaders.

This year Quincy voters their first opportunity to elect the first 4-year mayor in Quincy history and both candidates are well known. Mayor Tom Koch is running for a fifth term and former Mayor Bill Phelan is trying to return to City Hall. Both men have clear visions of where they wish Quincy to be and how to get there.

I called Quincy my home from 1983 until 2007 and in a sense am still connected to this proud historic city.

Much has changed since 1983 when I ended up in Wollaston. The city has grown leaps and bounds, both structurally and demographically. Its diversity has become its strength as has its geographic closeness to the City of Boston across the Neponset Bridge.

I urge all Quincy residents to both register and vote on Election Day because government is always the people's business. It becomes what you want it to be.

I must say that with a family history going back to before I was born, that Quincy always seemed to find the mayor it needed when that elected leader was needed.

When it comes to Quincy, political history I compare all mayors to former Mayor James McIntyre back in the '60s. I believe his time in office was make or break time, the Tipping Point.

Quincy could have gone either way but thanks to his vision, Quincy moved confidently forward and hasn't looked back since.

Don't forget to vote, not often, just once and for the mayor of your choice.

City Plans Fines Hike On Illegal Parking

The cost of illegal parking may be going up.

Members of the Traffic Commission met with Mayor Arthur H. Tobin to discuss a draft plan that would divide the city into zones carrying fines of $10, $5 and $3 for illegal parking.

The Red Zone ($10) would be in the business areas and around the MBTA stations. The Yellow Zones ($5) along the city's main arteries and the White Zone ($3) in residential areas.

Tobin said it is hoped to have the draft plan ready as an ordinance for the Nov. 16 meeting of the City Council so the plan can be in effect by the Christmas season if the Council approves.

"We have to stop Quincy from becoming the dumping ground for MBTA parkers," said Police Chief Paul LaHive, a member of the commission.

ESTIMATED TAX BILLS IN MAIL BY END OF MONTH

Estimated tax bills should be in the mail to Quincy property owners before the end of October.

Governor Edward J. King last week singed legislation permitting 102 cities and towns that have not completed the revaluation process to send out estimated bills in their first mailings.

Then, once the actual tax rate is established, the adjustments will be made during the second mailings in May.

Assessor Patricia Ceriani said the estimated bills that are sent out will be the same as those that were mailed out for the first half of fiscal 1981.

The estimated bills, she said, will save the city considerable interest that would have to be paid on money borrowed to keep the city running.

WHAT'S COOKING with Marie & Suzie

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO and SUZIE FALCO

Pizza Casserole

By MARIE

I thought I had tasted every kind of pizza – one of my favorite foods – until I found today's recipe for pizza casserole.

When I made it, my grandchildren – some of them who are picky eaters – loved it.

It is something that can be prepared early in the day, and just baked in the oven for dinner.

PIZZA CASSEROLE

6 ounces fettuccine (broken)

3 1/2 ounces sliced pepperoni

1 large can pizza sauce (or your own)

1 1/2 cups shredded mozzarella cheese

1 cup sliced mushrooms (optional)

1 large can pitted sliced black olives (drained)

1 tablespoon grated Parmesan cheese

Cook the pasta according to directions. Drain and return it to the pan. Add the pepperoni to the pasta. Stir in the tomato sauce. 3/4 cup of mozzarella, mushrooms, olives and the Parmesan cheese.

Transfer to the large baking dish. Top with the rest of the mozzarella cheese. Bake in a 400-degree oven for 15-20 minute or until hot. Cut into squares.

Raw Macadamia Fudge

By SUZIE

Macadamia nuts are one of the most sought after nuts in the world, and can be expensive! But you don't need to consume too much to reap the health benefits.

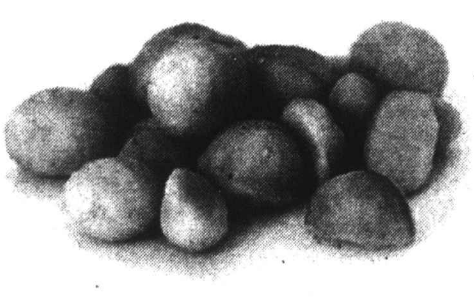
Hawaii is now the world's largest exporter, but this nut is actually native to Australia.

Macadamia nuts contain antioxidants, vitamins and minerals with significant health boosting properties, magnesium, manganese, and thiamine. Containing at least 70 percent oil, they are high in oleic acid, omega 9 monounsaturated fatty acid (like olive oil) and only 3 grams of saturated fat.

Remember, it's the type of fat that matters more than the amount. If you eliminate them all, you may suffer health consequences.

Pasture butter, raw cheese, fatty organic meats, coconut oil, palm oil, nuts are all foods you should be eating. Trans fats (which raise our LDL and lower our HDL) is not the kind of fat you should be eating and have a direct link to heart disease, type 2 diabetes, and even Alzheimer's.

People who add healthy nuts to their diets have been shown to lose weight, rather than gain.



Raw Macadamia Fudge
(from Detoxinista.com)

1 cup raw macadamia nuts
1 Tbsp. coconut oil
1 Tbsp. honey
1/2 tsp. vanilla extract
1/4 tsp. sea salt

Place nuts into your processor and grind to a paste consistency. Add the remainder of the ingredients and continue processing until the mixture is creamy. Scrape sides with spatula and spread on parchment paper lined baking pan.

Freeze for 30 minutes at least. Cut into squares and serve. Enjoy!

Make sure you store in freezer or they will melt.

Easy Bread Stuffed Red Peppers

By MARIE

There are many ways to cook stuffed peppers from rice, meat filling and other favorite ways.

My family enjoys the simple bread stuffing that my mother always made.

I use red peppers mostly. They cook easier than green, unless small peppers are used.

Today's recipe for a bread stuffing can be made early in the day, and just baked in the oven for dinner. I cut the peppers in halves-they cook quicker and stay moist inside.

STUFFED RED PEPPERS

3 red Bell peppers (cut in half)

3 slices of bread (any kind) soaked and squeezed

3 tablespoons seasoned bread crumbs (I used Panko)

4-5 tablespoons tomato sauce

1 tablespoon basil

Pieces of red pepper from removed tops (cut small)

2 tablespoons grated Parmesan or Romano cheese

Take the tops off the peppers, and cut in halves. In a bowl place the bread and add all of the other ingredients mixing until all the mixture is combined,

In a baking pan add a little olive oil, a sprinkle of tomato sauce.

Fill each pepper with the stuffing, and sprinkle a bit of grated cheese on top.

Bake in a 350-degree oven covered for about 25 minutes. Remove the cover and bake until top is lightly browned.

DOVE, Inc. Honors Jack Conway Realtor

DOVE (DOmestic Violence Ended), Inc. recently honored Jack Conway Quincy Realtor and former President Richard "Dick" Cahill, with its 2015 Pillar of Hope Award.

Cahill and fellow honoree G. Stuart Murphy were recognized at the group's Advisory Council Breakfast held recently at the Neighborhood Club of Quincy.

"Dick worked miracles to find a home for our organization back in 1981," said DOVE Director of Development Dawn Hayes. "He sold us a property and donated his commission so that we would have the five percent down payment for the mortgage. We will always think of Richard Cahill as a Founding Father."

In accepting his honor at the Council Breakfast, Cahill described the events that led to his involvement with DOVE 34 years ago.

"I had listed a 12-room, 2-family home in Quincy at 9 a.m. on a Monday morning and at 11 a.m, a woman from the DOVE Board came into my office asking if we had any large houses for sale. I took her out to the property, and she loved it.

"Then she drove me to Quincy Hospital and showed me a group of women and children who were living there in rented space under DOVE's protection. I could not believe the condition of these people and the severity of the abuse they had suffered.

"From that moment on, I was in — 100 percent. I asked Jack Conway if we could contribute the company's commission to give the Board a down payment to purchase the house, and he said, 'Do it. Get it done.'"

Cahill negotiated with local banks until he found one that was willing to grant a lower interest rate mortgage to the group, and then secured donations of lumber and pro-bono work from contractors who renovated the property.

"With the grace of God and a series of fortunate incidents, the DOVE shelter became a reality," he said. "I have received a lot of awards in my lifetime, but this one is right at the top. It goes straight to the heart."

Jack Conway, Realtor will serve as a bronze sponsor for DOVE's upcoming Harvesting Hope Fall Gala, to be held Oct. 30 at the Boston Quincy Marriott.

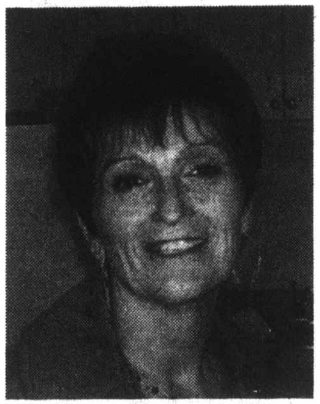
A Message From The Quincy Health Department

Fight The Flu

By RUTH JONES
BSN, RN, BC, CP-FS



RUTH JONES

The Flu is a contagious respiratory illness caused by influenza viruses that infect the nose, throat, and lungs. It can cause mild to severe illness, and at times can lead to death.

People who have the flu can experience some or all of these signs and symptoms: Fever or feverish/chills, cough, sore throat, runny or stuffy nose, muscle or body aches, headaches, fatigue, and vomiting and diarrhea.

It is thought that flu viruses spread mainly by droplets made when people with flu cough, sneeze or talk. These droplets can land in the mouths or noses of people who are in close proximity.

Less often, a person might also get flu by touching a surface or object that has flu virus on it and then touching their own mouth, eyes or possibly their nose. You may be able to pass on the flu to someone else before you know you are sick, as well as while you are sick.

The majority of healthy adults may be able to infect others beginning 1 day before symptoms develop and up to 5 to 7 days after becoming sick. Some people, particularly young children and people with weakened immune systems, might be able to infect others for an even longer time.

Flu is unpredictable and how severe it is can vary widely from one season to the next depending on many variables, including: what flu viruses are spreading, how much flu vaccine is available, when vaccine is available, how many people get vaccinated, and how well the flu vaccine is matched to flu viruses that are causing illness.

Certain people are at greater risk for serious complications if they get the flu. This includes older people, young children, pregnant women and people with certain health conditions (such as asthma, diabetes, or heart disease. Over a period of 30 years, between 1976 and 2006, estimates of flu-associated deaths in the United States range from a low of about 3,000 to a high of about 49,000 people.

Complications of flu can include bacterial pneumonia, ear infections, sinus infections, dehydration, and worsening of chronic medical conditions, such as congestive heart failure, asthma, or diabetes.

The single, most effective way to prevent the flu is to get a flu vaccine each season. There are several flu vaccine options for the 2015-2016 flu season. Different flu vaccines are approved for use in different groups of people.

Factors that can determine a person's suitability for vaccination, or vaccination with a particular vaccine, include a person's age, health (current and past) and any relevant allergies, including an egg allergy.

Traditional flu vaccines that are available are made to protect against three different flu viruses (trivalent vaccines). In addition, flu vaccines made to protect against four different flu viruses (quadrivalent vaccines) also are now available. Trivalent flu vaccine protects against two influenza A viruses (an H1N1 and an H3N2) and an influenza B virus.

The following trivalent flu vaccines are available:

- Standard-dose trivalent shots that are manufactured using virus grown in eggs. There are several different flu shots of this type available, and they are approved for people of different ages. Some are approved for use in people as young as 6 months of age. Most flu shots are given with a needle.
- A high-dose trivalent shot, approved for people 65 and older.
- A trivalent shot containing virus grown in cell culture, which is approved for people 18 and older.
- A recombinant trivalent shot that is egg-free, approved for people 18 years and older.

The quadrivalent flu vaccine protects against two influenza A viruses and two influenza B viruses. The following quadrivalent flu vaccines are available:

- A quadrivalent flu shot that is produced using virus grown in eggs. There are several different flu shots of this type available, and they are approved for people of different ages. Some are approved for use in people as young as 6 months of age.

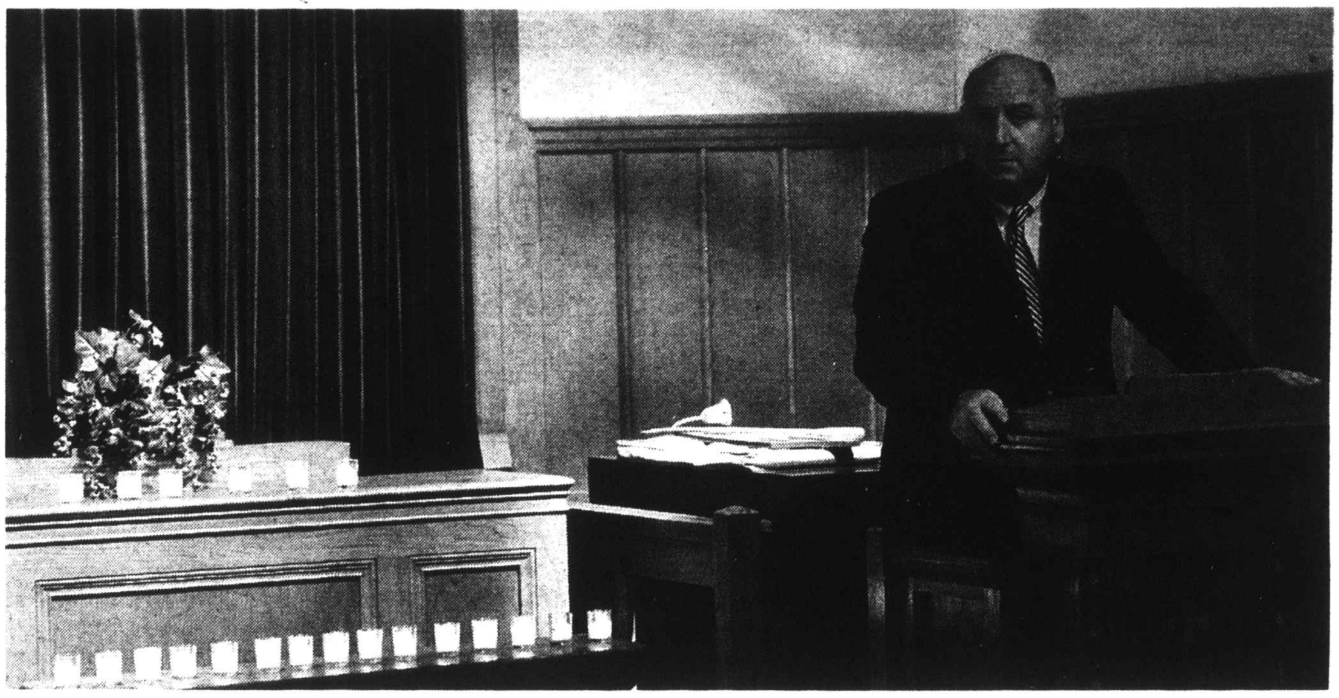
‘Speak Loudly For Those Who Cannot Speak For Themselves’



QUINCY POLICE Detective Lieutenant Patrick Glynn, who has been working in the field of domestic violence for 10 of his 30 years with the QPD, stressed the need for the community to unite against the crimes which frequently intersect—domestic violence, sexual assault, and child abuse.

strong evidence at the vigil, as the majority of murdered women who were honored died at the hands of boyfriends and estranged or ex-husbands.

And several of the vigil’s honorees had been shot to death – reflecting national statistics which indicate that the presence of a gun in a domestic violence situation increases the risk of homicide by 500 percent.

Representing Police Chief Paul Keenan, Detective Lieutenant Patrick Glynn, who has been working in the field of domestic violence for 10 of his 30 years with the QPD, stressed the need for the community to unite against the crimes which frequently intersect—domestic violence, sexual assault, and child abuse.

He talked of the department’s need to “speak loudly for those who cannot speak for themselves or who are in fear” and stressed the importance of the family of organizations who work closely together to combat domestic violence, such as DOVE.

Glynn also said that as part of the aforementioned ‘family,’ the QPD maintains a relationship with the Quincy Schools. “If there is someone arrested in a house or there is a violent domestic situation, we see what school that child attends and we let the school know and they watch out for the child.

“And it’s reciprocated… if there is something going on in the school and a child is acting out, they’ll call us and say ‘this child is acting out, it’s outside the parameters of what they usually do, did anything unusual happen?’ The school, the school nurse, a teacher could initiate a concern just by seeing something out of the ordinary.

“Every officer is trained in domestic violence, can provide victims their rights, offer medical treatment if needed—and we have a special investigations unit, including domestic violence advocacy.”

Glynn referred to the list of agencies that will assist victims, especially when children are involved.

“Children witnessing violence in a home, whether it’s physical or verbal or sexual is just as bad as being the actual victims themselves—they ARE the victims. A lot of times the general public might not view it as that, but the impressions left with those children is just unimaginable.”

According to Glynn, often the root of all violent situations is drug related. “Some kind of substance, whether it’s drugs or alcohol, usually fuels the initial argument, whether it’s lack of funds, like not enough money for food or clothing, which can escalate into verbal abuse, if not physical abuse.”

But DOVE Executive Director Sue Chandler emphasized that she does not consider that in any form an excuse for a perpetrator’s violent behavior. ”We do not believe that alcohol or drugs is the reason for the abuse…it’s often used as an excuse and it may exacerbate the abuse, but people are responsible for their own behavior.

“DOVE sees itself as a resource for all of the community around domestic violence so for individuals who may be experiencing domestic violence, or friends or family who may be concerned about a loved one, we have a 24-hour, anonymous hot-line…people can call anytime, or for a listening ear.

“All of our services are free, we have an emergency shelter, as well as other services which we call community services….our shelter unfortunately can only accommodate a limited number of people at one time, but somebody can get services in our community office, again, free, and confidential.”

Chandler indicated that shelters in Massachusetts are full “almost all the time,” so the agency is hesitant to promise shelter, but” we can get them help, we can get them information—we have legal services who can assist, they can connect with other victims through groups, we can help them with restraining orders, etc.”

DOVE support groups and services are offered at six different police departments—Quincy, Norwood, Milton, Dedham, Randolph

DOVE
Domestic Violence Ended

OCTOBER IS DOMESTIC VIOLENCE AWARENESS MONTH

Warning Signs & Red Flags

Have you recently started dating someone new and want to know if they will be a healthy partner?
Look out for these important warning signs and potential red flags:

Quick Involvement
Your partner wants to establish the relationship quickly and starts discussing moving in, children & marriage. While this may be romantic it can be a sign of someone that is controlling or possessive.

Constant Communication
Your partner is constantly texting, calling or wanting to spend time with you. They are asking about where you are, who you are with and becoming irritated or impatient when you do not return their calls. Healthy partners allow for people to remain individuals while in a relationship.

Extreme Emotional Attachment
Your partner says ‘I love you’ very quickly and begins making statements like ‘You are the only one for me’. Your partner may also push for things to become physically intimate before you are ready and become frustrated that you are unwilling to commit as strongly as they have.

Over-the-Top Gestures
Your partner is spending lots of money on gifts, jewelry, dinners & vacations very early in the relationship. These seemingly generous favors can cloud your ability to judge someone’s intentions.

The best way to ensure a healthy relationship is to take things slow. There is no scientific answer to how long it takes to ‘really know someone’, but a good general rule before making permanent or long-term decisions is to wait one year.

Myths and Facts about Dating Violence

Most people will end a relationship if their boyfriend or girlfriend hits them.
MYTH: Nearly 80% of girls who have been physically abused in their intimate relationships continue to date their abuser after the onset of violence.

Most men who abuse their partner grew up in violent homes.
FACT: Men who have witnessed violence between parents are three times more likely to abuse their own wives and children than children of non-violent parents. The sons of the most violent parents are 1,000 times more likely to become batterers.

DOVE is committed to partnering with diverse communities, families and individuals impacted by domestic violence.
We promote hope, healing, safety, and social change by providing a broad range of preventive and responsive services.

3 Fires Claim 2 Buildings, 8 Boats In 72 Hours

Smyth called the fire hazardous and labor intensive. Firefighters hauled two 2.5-inch hoses, the department's biggest, roughly 800 feet from fire hydrants located in front of a nearby condo building to the scene of the fire. The second alarm was immediately after the first firefighters reached the scene because of the effort it took to reach the fire.

"It's not that simple," Smyth said. "Those docks are very narrow and the firefighters were in full turnout gear it was a very long haul and very labor intensive. You also had the risk of gasoline nearby. It was a very hazardous operation."

The fire at the Marina remained under investigation as of Tuesday, according to Deputy Chief Ed Fenby, though he said it started accidentally.

The second fire – inside a Wollaston duplex – happened Saturday night. The Quincy Fire Department received reports of smoke in the area beginning around 8:30 p.m. and an engine company was dispatched to identify the source, Fenby said.

The engine company was able to spot the fire inside an attic of a duplex at 98 Phillips St. Firefighters attempted to fight the fire from inside the duplex at first, but had to evacuate as the fire spread into the walls and roof.

EIGHT BOATS were destroyed or damaged by a two-alarm fire Oct. 8 at Captain's Cove Marina off Southern Artery. Fireboats from Boston, Cambridge and Beverly assisted the Quincy Fire Department in fighting the conflagration and the Quincy Police Department's Marine Unit helped tow six boats to safety. No injuries were reported but several people living on the boats were left homeless. The fire was the first of three in Quincy over the course of 72 hours. Photo courtesy Quincy Police Department

The building was a total loss, Fenby said; because firefighters had to locate it at first, the fire was able to spread inside the building. Built in 1900, the duplex has an assessed replacement cost of $547,000, according to the city assessor's online database.

Five firefighters were hurt at the Phillips Street fire, according to Fenby; all were able to remain on scene. Two were shocked when an electrical line inside the house fell on them, another two reported sprained knees, and the fifth firefighter sustained an injury to his wrist. No residents were injured.

The Phillips Street fire was still under investigation Tuesday, Fenby said.

The third fire was reported just after 4 a.m. Sunday at the long-vacant Sons of Lebanon Hall at 12 Lebanon St. in Quincy Point. The building was nearly fully engulfed in flames by the time it was reported and a second alarm was quickly struck as firefighters worked to stop it from spreading to nearby buildings, which they were able to do. No injuries were reported.

The building was a total loss and what was left of it was demolished Monday. The building had a $306,000 replacement cost, according to the assessor's records.

The cause of that fire also remained under investigation Tuesday afternoon. Fenby said there was no electrical service to the building and investigators are trying to determine if there were homeless individuals living inside the vacant hall or if the fire was set on purpose. The first firefighters on scene reported finding an open door, the deputy chief stated.

- An intradermal quadrivalent shot, which is injected into the skin instead of the muscle and uses a much smaller needle than the regular flu shot. It is approved for people 18 through 64 years of age.
- A quadrivalent nasal spray vaccine, approved for healthy people 2 through 49 years of age who are not pregnant.

Yearly flu vaccination should begin shortly after flu vaccine is available, ideally by October. However, getting vaccinated even later can be protective, as long as flu viruses are circulating. While seasonal influenza outbreaks can happen as early as October, generally influenza activity peaks in January or later. It is most advantageous that people get vaccinated so they are protected, before influenza begins spreading in their community, since it takes about two weeks after vaccination for antibodies to develop in the body that protect against influenza virus infection.

Everyone 6 months of age and older should get a flu vaccine every season. Vaccination to prevent influenza is particularly important for people who are at high risk of severe complications from the disease. Even people who live with or care for those in a high risk group (including health care workers) can get the nasal-spray flu vaccine as long as they are healthy themselves and are not pregnant. The one exception is health care workers who care for people with severely weakened immune systems who require a protected hospital environment; these people should get the inactivated flu vaccine (flu shot).

Good health habits like covering your cough and washing your hands often can help stop the spread of germs and prevent respiratory illnesses like the flu. There also are flu antiviral drugs that can be used to treat and prevent flu. To stay healthy during flu season: Avoid close contact with people who are sick (social distancing). When you are sick, keep your distance from others to protect them from getting sick too. If possible, stay home from work, school, and errands when you are sick to help prevent spreading your illness to others. Cover your mouth and nose with a tissue when coughing or sneezing, or cough /sneeze into you elbow, it may prevent those around you from getting sick. Washing your hands often will help protect you from germs. If soap and water are not available, use an alcohol-based hand rub. Germs are often spread when a person touches something that is contaminated with germs and then touches his or her eyes, nose, or mouth, so clean and disinfect frequently touched surfaces at home, work or school, especially when someone is ill. Get plenty of sleep, be physically active, manage your stress, drink plenty of fluids, and eat nutritious food.

Even if you are doing all the right things to prevent influenza, you may still get the flu. If you become ill with influenza symptoms you should stay home and avoid contact with other people except to seek medical care. Rest, fluids and management of symptoms like fever and cough are the treatment of choice Most people are able to recover at home from flu without medical intervention, however if your health history puts you at greater risk for serious complications, contact your healthcare provider for advice.

Baker Backs Koch In Mayor's Race

Massachusetts Governor Charlie Baker has endorsed Mayor Thomas Koch in his bid for re-election in this year's mayoral election.

Baker – a Republican who was backed by Koch, a Democrat, in the race for governor last fall – announced the endorsement Oct. 8 at Koch's campaign headquarters in North Quincy. Baker was introduced by Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Belotti, a Democrat, and spoke in front Koch supporters at the campaign headquarters on Hancock Street.

"To make Massachusetts truly great, we need committed and dedicated local leaders in communities across the Commonwealth," Baker said. "Quincy has benefitted from Mayor Tom Koch's strong leadership as he has steered the city toward vibrant growth and a better future. I'm proud to endorse Mayor Koch and look forward to working with him as a partner in our shared mission of making Quincy and Massachusetts great."

"It has been a pleasure to work with Governor Baker and his administration over the past 10 months," said Koch, who was the first Democratic Mayor to endorse Baker during the 2014 gubernatorial election.

"Governor Baker has shown a tremendous commitment to improving our cities, to improving transportation, and to helping us develop and revitalize our downtown," Koch said. "In just his short time in office he has proven to be a great partner for our City and I look forward to working with him for years to come."

Koch is seeking a fifth term Nov. 3. He is opposed by former Mayor William Phelan in their third head-to-head matchup for mayor. Koch unseated Phelan in 2007 and defeated him in a mayoral rematch in 2009.

A statement released by the Koch campaign noted Koch has drawn endorsements from both sides of the aisle. In addition to Baker, a Republican, Koch has the support of leading Democrats Boston Mayor Marty Walsh and Congressman Stephen Lynch, who hosted a fundraiser for Koch at JJ Foley's in July.

"Being a leader for this City is about building partnerships, at all levels of government, and on both sides of the aisle," Koch said. "I am proud to have the support of so many distinguished leaders. Regardless of their political leanings, they have joined together to help us strengthen Quincy."

Earlier this month, Koch picked up the endorsements of School Committee members Paul Bregoli and Barbara Isola and former School Committee members Emily Lebo and Jo-Ann Bragg.

Phelan was endorsed after the Sept. 24th preliminary election by former mayoral contenders Anne Mahoney, a member of the School Committee, and Councillor Doug Gutro.

City Committees Candidates Night

The Quincy Republican and Democratic City Committees will host a Candidates Night for all contested races Monday, Oct. 26th at the Lloyd Hill Performing Arts Center at Quincy High School from 6 to 9 p.m.

"In the spirit of cooperation with the Republican City Committee we are co-hosting this forum. Our desire is to provide the citizens of Quincy an opportunity to hear directly from the individuals who wish to represent them in the Mayor's Office, on the City Council and on the School Committee," said Alicia Gardner, chairperson of the Quincy Democratic City Committee.

"The City of Quincy elections are non-partisan, meaning you do not vote for an individual based on a political party. Whether you are a Republican or a Democrat, as a resident of this city these elections mean a great deal to all of us. Election Day is Tuesday, Nov. 3rd, and I believe that the residents that attend this forum will come away with a better understanding of each of the candidates as they prepare to vote," said Christine Cedrone, chairperson of the Quincy Republican City Committee.

Wards 1, 2, 3, 5 and 6 Councillors, Councillor-at-Large and Mayoral candidates have been invited to participate in a question and answer style debate. The candidates for school committee who participate will each be given time to introduce themselves and explain why they want to be a school committee member. The Ward 4 City Council seat is not contested.

The Committees are seeking questions from the public to be submitted no later than Oct. 22nd. Submit questions to both c.cedrone@comcast.net and alicia.gardner6@gmail.com.

Palmucci Endorses Hubley For School Committee

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci announces he supports Kathryn Hubley for reelection to the School Committee.

"Since her election to School Committee in 2011 Kathy has consistently demonstrated her wealth of knowledge and experience gained from her two terms as President of the City-wide Parents' Council and serving in a number of PTO board positions," Palmucci said in a written statement. "I've watched Kathy focus on issues that impact families and fight to ensure that Quincy students continue to receive a top-notch education.

"Kathy's passion for electoral politics pales in comparison to her passion for education and the betterment of Quincy Public Schools. Kathy would be the last person to tell you about her achievements and dedication - which is why I'm taking this opportunity to do so.

"If you are a parent of a Quincy Public School student, there is a good chance you have met Kathy, as she involves herself in almost every school event across the 19 schools in the city. If you are a senior in West Quincy, then you might recognize Kathy as being one of the first to help me dig out snowbound seniors over the winter. If you have never met Kathy, I hope this serves as your introduction," Palmucci added.

Deer Hunt Decision Due This Month

public to submit comments on the proposal through Oct. 7. That public feedback, as well as input from law enforcement agencies, the Friends of the Blue Hills, and other state agencies, is now being considered as DCR finalizes its plan.

"DCR is currently reviewing all of the comments provided by stakeholders and members of the public, and expects an announcement to be made later this month," Troy Wall, the agency's spokesman, said in an email.

Hunting is currently forbidden in the park, but that could change if DCR goes ahead with its plan.

A May 2013 survey by the Division of Fisheries and Wildlife found there were at least 85 deer per square mile of deer habitat in the Blue Hills. DFW's statewide deer management range is six to 18 deer per square mile of forest; more than 20 deer per square mile can lead to negative impacts in northeastern forests.

Under DCR's draft deer management plan for the park, shotgun hunting of deer would be allowed in the Blue Hills Reservation for four days during the state's shotgun hunting season, which begins the Monday after Thanksgiving and last for two weeks. This year's deer hunt in the Blue Hills would take place on Nov. 30, Dec. 1, Dec. 7 and Dec. 8. The check-in time for all hunters would be between 5 and 7 a.m. those days with check out at 4 p.m.

The plan would allow 120 hunters to hunt deer in portions of the park north of Interstate 93 each day. The deer management plan divides the park into six separate sections and the number of hunters per section is capped at roughly one per 30 acres.

The hunters would be allowed to use slugs this year; buckshot would be prohibited. Archery hunting may be allowed in future years.

Those applying to hunt in the Blue Hills Reservation must have a valid FID card and hunting license; they would be required to fill out an application and submit it to the DCR. A lottery would determine which applicants would be allowed to take part in the hunt. Successful applicants would have to attend a mandatory orientation session that would cover a number of topics, including safety considerations, area assignments, and other elements of the deer management plan.

Housing Goals Topic For Community Meeting Monday

The Metropolitan Area Planning Council will be seeking the public's input Monday, Oct. 19 from 7 to 8:30 p.m. at the Crane Public Library Community Room, 40 Washington St. to establish housing goals, strategies for achieving those goals, and an implementation plan for the City of Quincy.

The second of two public forums, MAPC is working with the City of Quincy's Planning and Community Development Department to develop a Housing Production Plan to guide the City in a market-rate and affordable housing preservation and creation strategy.

Through community input, the Housing Production Plan will identify the City's housing needs, demand, opportunities, challenges, and goals for the future. The Plan will also assist in meeting Quincy's state-mandated affordable production target.

Register for the forum online by visiting http://tinyurl.com/rsvpquincy. Residents may also share their thoughts on current and future housing opportunities by completing a brief online survey at http://tinyurl.com/hppsurvey.

Metropolitan Area Planning Council's presentation from the first meeting in July is located on the Planning and Community Development Department website at: http://tinyurl.com/kevusb8.

DIABETES AND GUM DISEASE

Gum disease is an unexpected complication of diabetes. If left untreated, "gingivitis" (inflammation of the gums) can progress to "periodontitis," at which point the gums pull away from the teeth to form deepening pockets that collect bacteria and threaten the health of teeth and underlying bone. These gum problems largely stem from the fact that those with diabetes are more susceptible to bacterial infection, which renders them less able to fight the bacteria that collects in pockets that form around the teeth of patients with periodontitis. Moreover, recent research points to the notion that not only are diabetics more susceptible to periodontitis, but periodontitis may have the potential to affect blood glucose control and contribute to the progression of diabetes.

Do you or any of your siblings have diabetes? We have the skills and tools to ensure that early signs of many conditions are identified. We recommend regular checkups, periodic cleanings, and x-rays when needed. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we strive to teach you good oral hygiene. Please call 617 479-6220 to schedule an appointment. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. To prevent gum problems, diabetics must control their blood glucose levels and schedule regular visits to the dentist, who can spot and treat early gum problems.

Author Rick Beyer To Speak At Crane Library Oct. 28

RICK BEYER

Quincy College, in partnership with the Thomas Crane Public Library, presents 'Meet the Author Night' featuring Rick Beyer, co-author of The Ghost Army of World War II: How One Top Secret Unit Deceived the Enemy with Inflatable Tanks, Sound Effects, and Other Audacious Fakery, on Wednesday, Oct. 28th from 7 to 8:30 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library in the Main Library Community Meeting Room, ground floor, 40 Washington St. in Quincy.

In Ghost Army of World War II, Beyer along with co-author Elizabeth Sayles illuminates the riveting true story of a group of young artists and engineers who wielded imagination, paint, and bravado to save thousands of American lives and help win the war. From Normandy to the Rhine, the 1,100 men of the Twenty-Third Headquarters Special Troops, known as the "Ghost Army," conjured up phony convoys, phantom divisions, and make-believe headquarters to fool the enemy about the strength and location of American units.

Having spent a nearly a decade conducting meticulous research and interviews with surviving members of the Ghost Army, Beyer offers a fascinating and humorous account of a subversive band of brothers.

A question and answer session will follow the discussion. This event is free and is open to the public.

Registration is encouraged but not required. To register, visit http://quincy-authornight.eventbrite.com.

REEZE LOH-DARRAGH

Reeze Loh-Darragh has been named Investment Executive at Bank of Canton Financial Services and Financial Advisor with Infinex Financial Group.

Fluent in Cantonese, Mandarin and Malay in addition to English, Loh-Darragh will provide financial services to the diverse communities of Quincy, Randolph and the greater South Shore area from her office at Bank of Canton's Quincy branch at 60 McGrath Highway.

"I chose to work for B.O.C. Financial Services because of the welcoming, familial atmosphere I've felt ever since my first meeting," Loh-Darragh said. "They foster a culture of inclusion here that helps everyone succeed – clients and employees alike."

As a multilingual investment executive with experience in financial journalism and communications, Loh-Darragh will provide South Shore residents with financial planning solutions that are clear, concise and easy to understand.

"My job is to understand people's concerns about their financial situation – whether it's buying a house, saving for college, retirement income planning, or other major life events – and present them with financial strategies and solutions that give them peace of mind," she said.

Prior to joining B.O.C. Financial Services, Loh-Darragh worked as a financial advisor associate at Morgan Stanley Wealth Management, Norwell, where she developed and managed investment portfolios for individuals and families. She was named a Brandeis Global Leadership Scholar and a second place finalist for the Young Entrepreneurs Award.

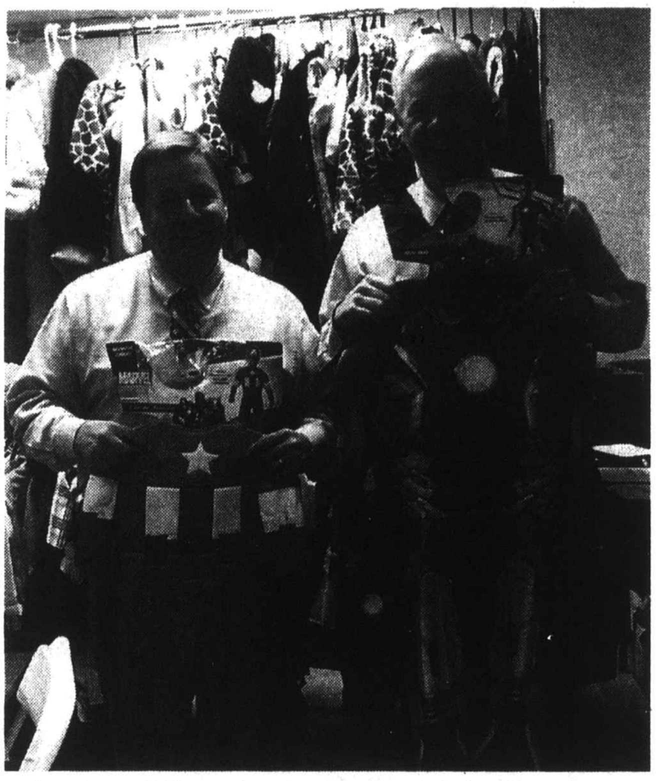
Quincy, Braintree Mayors Team Up To Help Hungry South Shore Residents



TWO MAYORS – Quincy's Thomas Koch and Braintree's Joseph Sullivan – recently spent a morning serving clients' at Interfaith Social Services' South Shore Food Pantry. Here the mayors with a few of the donated Halloween costumes which Interfaith will be distributing to the children served by their food pantry. For more information about Interfaith's programs and the Halloween costume drive visit www.Interfaith-SocialServices.org.

Interfaith Social Services' food pantry clients were recently greeted by some familiar faces as they collected groceries for their families. Quincy Mayor Thomas Koch and Braintree Mayor Joseph Sullivan rolled up their sleeves dishing out emergency food.

To commemorate the 40th anniversary of Interfaith Social Services' Food Pantry, the mayors brought more than citations to recognize Interfaith's work. They brought a desire to serve. The mayors assembled food orders for clients, sorted donations and toured the sorting area for Interfaith's upcoming Halloween Costume distribution.

"The mayors' visit today recognizes the incredible efforts that their constituents make by volunteering within our programs," said Interfaith's executive director Rick Doane. "Last year over 800 local residents volunteered here at Interfaith, making it possible for us to serve the thousands of families who turn to us for assistance. We are so grateful that the mayors could join with us to highlight the need that exists within our community."

Interfaith Social Services operates one of the largest emergency food programs in Greater Boston. Their programs are a safety net for thousands of children and families from the South Shore in need of mental health counseling, food, budget counseling, emergency assistance and clothing.

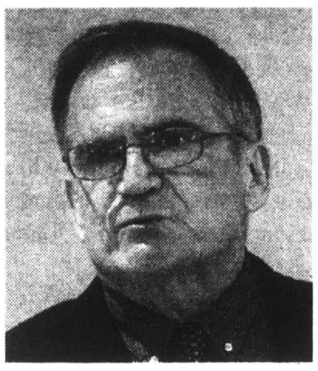
At-Large Candidates Air Views On Education, Housing

Transportation Infrastructure Also Among Forum Topics

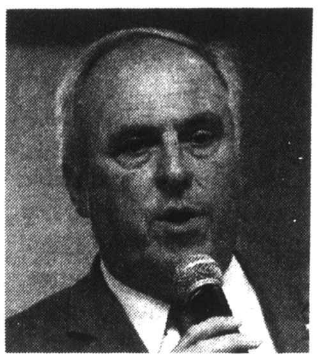


JOSEPH FINN

MICHAEL McFARLAND

NOEL DiBONA

NINA LIANG



DAVID McCARTHY

By SCOTT JACKSON

The candidates vying to fill the three at-large seats on the City Council gave their thoughts on how to improve the city's transportation infrastructure, add programs within the school system and affordable housing at a recent forum.

Running for the three at-large spots on the council are five candidates: Incumbents Joseph Finn and Michael McFarland, School Committee members Noel DiBona and David McCarthy, and political newcomer Nina Liang. The third incumbent, Doug Gutro, is leaving the council in January after being eliminated from the mayoral race following his third place finish in last month's preliminary election.

The five candidates appeared at an Oct. 7 candidates' night held at North Quincy High School with some 200 residents in attendance. A consortium of sponsors, led by Quincy Asian Resources Inc. and South Cove Community Health Center, organized the event. The forum's moderator, Chazy Dowaliby, posed questions to the candidates solicited from residents before the event.

During the 40-minute forum, the candidates were asked what they would do to help improve the city's streets and sidewalks for the benefit of drivers and pedestrians alike.

McCarthy, who is leaving the School Committee after 12 years to run for a council seat, said the city has taken steps to upgrade infrastructure in recent years, pointing to the recent reconfiguration of the intersection of Hancock and Squantum Streets as an example, and said that should continue.

"I think we have to look at parts of the city – roadways and things that have changed – over the course of the next several years and enhance as much as possible in regards to transportation by car or by bike or by motorcycle," McCarthy said.

"We know we're going to be looking at a new MBTA station down the road in Quincy [Center]. We could probably design a little more user friendly for both the passengers that ride the T and also develop a T station that doesn't draw the folks that usually draw to the T station."

McFarland, a member of the council since 2006 who previously served on the School Committee, said the city needs to continue making improvements to infrastructure and also improve bus routes to give an incentive not to drive.

"We have spent numerous dollars opening up the area of Crown Colony up there to get traffic in and out of Crown Colony park. Burgin Parkway now gets the traffic from the expressway, 93, all the way down to State Street South. The Hannon Parkway connects Burgin Parkway to Southern Artery, which brings it down to the lower South Shore and also the beaches of Boston," McFarland said.

"We need to continue to improve upon those things and we have to find an incentive for [people] not to drive. The way we can do that is by better bus transportation taking them to their connecting routes."

Mayoral Contenders Koch, Phelan Take Aim At Records

moderator Chazy Dowaliby.

The candidates covered a variety of topics, from the redevelopment of Quincy Center, the closure of Quincy Medical Center, traffic and infrastructure, and a twice-rejected plan to open an Asian supermarket in North Quincy.

On the issue of downtown redevelopment, Phelan said Koch is no longer following the city's vision for Quincy Center and faulted him for announcing a proposal to build a 15-story apartment building on the Hancock Lot without seeking public input.

"We had that vision and in fact young people moving into the downtown was part of that vision. Young businesses moving in. Arts was a part of our vision for a downtown that would attract new businesses and entrepreneurial endeavors. That was all part of the vision for downtown. It's been thrown out," Phelan said.

"We have an election year decision to build a 15-story building on our most prized property that the city owns with no public input whatsoever. Where was the public input? It wasn't there. We have to give back to the public, go back to the business community and reinvigorate that plan was in place before I left office.

"Since I left office, quite frankly, not a lot has been going on in the downtown."

Koch responded that his administration is following the same vision and listed a number of items accomplished in Quincy Center in recent years.

"We built the Hannon Parkway. We moved the Town Brook. We're now redirecting the traffic to create the Adams Green, which was the result of public input. All are being paid for with federal and state dollars. We have 169 units with 14,000 square feet of retail being built," Koch said, later mentioning a 56-unit project set to start this month.

"What you're seeing happening is the same vision we've had for a number of years. It was going to be a combination of residential, commercial, educational and professionals with everything on the first floor being retail related…that's still the plan.

"That 15-story [building] you alluded to has yet to be before the City Council. It will be before the City Council sometime this fall, at which time there will be a number of public hearings and public meetings on it."

When asked about the closure of Quincy Medical Center late last year, Koch said his administration fought to keep the ER open and is working with the hospital's owner, Steward, to come up with a plan for the future of the site.

"Obviously we fought to keep the emergency department open – it continues to serve the city – and we're in discussions now [about] how can we provide medical related services to the residents of the city through that hospital location on Whitwell Street," Koch said.

"Part of the challenge as a community hospital is, with national health care the reimbursement rate from our federal and state governments for services to folks on Medicare and Medicaid, they only get about 63 cents on the dollar."

Phelan said a city the size of Quincy can sustain its own hospital and stated that Koch did not do enough to keep it open.

"I heard nothing from this mayor prior to that hospital closing and I saw no fight whatsoever in keeping that hospital open to our residents. Nothing. Silence, after so many mayors before fought to keep that hospital open," Phelan said.

"We can sustain a hospital. We have 93,000 people. Other communities our size with less demographics and less income than ours have more than one hospital within their borders. As mayor, I would do everything I could to open a hospital in our city."

When a resident asked about funding for the city's public schools, Koch faulted Phelan for losing out on a 90 percent reimbursement rate for a new Quincy High and Central and Sterling Middle Schools.

"He diddled around for six years, lost the 90 percent [reimbursement], so it cost us $46 million more for Quincy High alone, never mind the millions we lost for Central and Sterling," Koch said. "What we could have done for our schools with that money."

Phelan defended himself in his closing statement, saying Koch did not want to talk about his own record.

"All this mayor wants to talk about is nine to 15 years ago when he has eight years of a record he doesn't want to talk about," Phelan said. "That's desperation politics."

On improving traffic and public transportation infrastructure in the city, Koch said his administration has rebuilt key infrastructure while Phelan said developers should be responsible for mitigation measures.

Koch noted his administration has used state and federal money to rebuild the intersections at Quincy Avenue and East Howard Street and Hancock Street at Squantum Street and also worked with state officials to repair the Neponset Bridge and begin construction of a new Fore River Bridge. The city has also begun the process of replacing the old Quincy Center MBTA station with a new one.

"We're continuing to work with state and federal officials – we've been successful with that – to enhance our transportation systems," Koch said.

Phelan said traffic has gotten worse under Koch's watch. Developers, he added, should be asked to mitigate the impact of their projects.

"We have to look to developers. When they're proposing new developments, we have to look to them to mitigate the impacts of development and the cars that are going to be going on our streets," Phelan said. "Or we shouldn't allow it to continue to grow at the pace and in the locations that it's growing."

The two candidates took opposing views on C-Mart, an Asian supermarket proposed for the former Boston Gear Works on Hayward Street, which has twice been rejected by the City Council. The owner of the supermarket chain has appealed that decision to the court system.

Phelan said city departments and the Quincy Chamber of Commerce need to do everything they can to welcome Asian businesses. C-Mart, he said, would be a great fit for the community.

"We have to do everything we can from the Inspectional Services Department, the Quincy Chamber of Commerce and from the mayor's office to encourage Asian businesses to flourish," Phelan said. "Like any business, it has to fit within the community it's being proposed. I believe the C-Mart is something that would fit in that area. I think there is a need for it."

Koch said his administration is working with the applicant to find other suitable locations, noting the nearby North Quincy Hanaford's may close once its parent company completes a merger with Stop & Shop's owner. The proposed site on Hayward Street, he said, was problematic because of traffic concerns.

"The City Council deliberated over that project and it came down, I believe, to traffic. You can't talk traffic out of one side of your mouth and say [C-Mart] is OK to go there," Koch said. "To put a supermarket in that location with a very narrow Hayward Street would have been problematic."

A recent North Quincy High graduate asked the two candidates about expanding youth programs in the city, noting she had to travel to Boston to participate in certain programs.

Phelan noted neighborhood centers in Germantown and Atlantic opened under his administration, and said similar ones are needed throughout the city, as is a cultural center.

"We have a great recreation program in Quincy, but how about a cultural center in Quincy? How about expanding our neighborhood programs where kids don't necessarily want to be athletes but would rather look to the arts to expand their horizons. We need community centers all over the city in order to do that," Phelan said.

"These are the types of opportunities that come around that you have to take advantage of – collaboration, looking to best practices and keeping our youths busy after school, before school, and right until they go to bed."

Koch responded by saying the city has already collaborated on programs with the YMCA and QARI and would be willing to collaborate with other groups. The school system and Recreation Department, he added, provide a number of services.

"I'm so proud of our school system. We provide so much by way of services to families in our city. Mayor Phelan related to the Quincy Recreation Department. We have incredible programs provided by our recreation staff – winter programs, summer programs – to all families," Koch said.

"In fact, the last two summers we hired a number of new seasonal employees in the Recreation Department of Asian descent working with the Asian youngsters at the playground. We'd be happy to do more to collaborate with others to enhance that."

QEA Endorses Bregoli, Lebo In School Committee Race

The Quincy Education Association is endorsing incumbent Paul Bregoli and former school committeewoman and write-in candidate Emily Lebo for Quincy School Committee.

In a statement, the QEA said its backing Bregoli and Lebo "for their proven leadership, experience, and commitment to public education."

"As former Quincy Public School educators, these candidates bring a unique and important perspective to the committee, with a deep understanding of the issues facing our public schools today," said QEA President Allison G. Cox. "Given the complexity of issues, including numerous state and federal mandates that impact our curriculum, policies, and programs, it's crucial that we have experienced, well-informed committee members."

Another significant factor is that both Bregoli and Lebo have consistently demonstrated their commitment to working collaboratively with QEA and its educators over the years. "Both Paul and Emily value and respect the work our public school educators are doing with students, parents, and our community. They share, along with QEA, a vision of excellence for the Quincy Public Schools."

The QEA, an affiliate of the Massachusetts Teachers Association, represents more than 930 PreK to 12 educators and assistant principals of the Quincy Public Schools, as well as faculty and professional support staff of Quincy College. The decision to endorse Bregoli and Lebo was made by a unanimous vote of the QEA Executive Board.

Verhault Backs Roos In Ward 3

Former candidate Sandy Verhault announces she is supporting Karl Roos in the race for Ward 3 city councillor. Roos and Ian Cain are both seeking to succeed Kevin Coughlin who is stepping down as Ward 3 councillor after seven terms.

In a statement, Verhault said:

"I entered the Ward 3 Council race so I could give back to this wonderful community that I have lived in my whole life. As I reflect back on the great experiences I had whether it was door knocking or just meeting people I have no regrets.

"Now that the election process has taken place and reduced the playing field, I'd like to say that Ward 3 is lucky to have two candidates that no doubt will serve our needs as well as Kevin Coughlin has done over the last 14 years.

"I believe Karl Roos would be the best choice as our next Ward 3 councillor. His proven commitment, activism and education are all qualities needed in a councillor. Like myself Karl has chosen to raise a family here and continually give back to the community. With these attributes I believe Karl will make a great Ward 3 councilor.

"I would like to thank the citizens of Ward 3 for opening your doors and talking with me about your concerns and giving me the opportunity to meet you. I will be ever humbled by that experience. I want to thank my family, staff and volunteers for their dedication and commitment. I will remain an active resident of Quincy and continue to serve where I am needed," Verhault added.

Emily Lebo Announces Election Committee

Emily Lebo, a write-in candidate for school Committee who entered the race with less than a month to campaign, has formed a committee to assist her in getting the vote out.

Lebo said she feels there is a need to inform voters of how to proceed when writing in their candidate. Voters are reminded to write in Lebo's name or affix her sticker to the line below the list of School Committee candidates. They then must circle in the OVAL next to her name.

The Committee to Elect Emily Lebo consists of Stu Lebo, who is the Treasurer and members: Donna Bertrand, Dee Condon, Dona Coleman, Bill Lebo, Jen Lebo, Paul Mauriello, Aileen McGinnity, Pamela McIsaac, Linda Monaco, Bennie Ranstrom, Gina Scanlan, Nancy Scanlan, and Will Smith.

At-Large Candidates Air Views On Education, Housing

DiBona, who was elected to a four-year term on the school board in 2013, said the city needs to improve bike infrastructure and replace the ferry service that formerly operated out of the Fore River Shipyard.

"[A] vital part is going to be our bicycling – getting the correct bike routes into the city before we start constructing our roadways because we can't go backwards. We have to foresee that. Also, we have to consider a ferry system, which we don't have right now," DiBona said.

"I've talked to many people in the Squantum area. They're looking for a ferry to go into Long Wharf, Rowes Wharf, and that would give a nice transit into Boston. We don't have one for the Logan Express ferry system by the Fore River Bridge. We're looking at other avenues besides driving a vehicle."

Finn, who was first elected to the council in 2001, noted the Planning Department already works to integrate alternative modes of transportation into the city. Moving forward, he said Quincy needs to audit its signals citywide to improve the flow of traffic.

"Mr. DiBona actually makes an excellent point when he focuses on talking about alternative forms of transportation that are also more environmentally sound. The Planning and Community Development Department has already started to integrate that within the planning of city areas and traffic areas," Finn said.

"We have 200 miles of pavement in the city of Quincy and our infrastructure quite honestly is tired and it's worn. Along with that is the signaling – the traffic signaling – that in my mind creates significant issues. I think we need to audit that citywide and try to create better patterns and flow of traffic throughout the city."

Liang – the office manager for the JP Fuji Group – said she would reach out to residents for their take on how to tackle the issue, such as more speed traps and signage.

"I would like to commend the city of Quincy for taking traffic surveys and implementing changes that can alleviate traffic along the way. They've also implemented some parking restrictions on residential streets to make sure parking isn't an issue for residents day in and day out," Liang said.

"A really important thing I want to get across here is that the residents that deal with this 24/7 on a daily basis have some really good ideas on how we can fix the problem…I want to speak to the residents in those neighborhoods that are being affected by these problems on a daily basis, work with the city on traffic surveys, and put those solutions together."

The candidates were also asked how they would work to add new programs to the school system.

Finn, noting the council only sets the bottom line budget for Quincy Public Schools, said the council is a "bully pulpit" to advocate for change.

We can cut the bottom line. We cannot add any additional resources to it. That really falls within the jurisdiction of our School Committee to focus and to advocate specifically and design those very specific types of programs," Finn said.

"The key thing that we can do from our bully pulpit, or from our ability to advocate for things, is to support those particular efforts they would want to put forward. I think we can also…ensure the appropriate state resources are coming forward, particularly as it relates to pre-kindergarten."

Liang said community businesses could provide experience to QPS students, such as a culinary student who worked at her family's restaurants.

"We actually met a student that was participating in that program at a QCAP event where we were doing sushi on site. We have since employed her as our host, assistant manager, and this summer [she] spent three months as our first Caucasian girl under the age of 18 interning behind the sushi bar. She's developed skills she would not have otherwise developed in the classroom," Liang said.

"I'm confident that together as a community we can do outreach to local businesses and to local organizations to let them know these schools have these programs outside of the classroom."

During his time on the school board, McCarthy noted the city implemented full day kindergarten without charging parents for it.

"We implemented full day kindergarten a few years back under the Phelan administration and it was something we were able to build into the budget," McCarthy said. "In regards to growing through all the levels – elementary, middle and high schools – we would have to look for more help from the state – state grants.

"We would also look, as Nina mentioned her restaurant connection, at partners we have in the community we have out there. We have over 100 business partners out there that help us work our kids into their system. It's just a privilege to have that in Quincy."

McFarland said federal education funding has dwindled in recent years, but said the school system has been able to add new programs.

"The federal government used to send us a lot of money for education. We're not getting that anymore. The federal money for education was cut way, way back," McFarland said.

"As far as the programs go for the elementary, the middle and the high schools, they've added on a tremendous amount of cultural programs, English as a second language, added some diverse courses to the curriculum in the language area. But from the pre-K point of view, if we don't charge tuition for that it's not an economic reality and we have to talk here in realities."

DiBona said he would like to see the school system's budget increase by $3 million annually.

"I'm a fiscal conservative. What I'm going to do on the council is I'm going to make sure that we have enough surplus funding that we can keep in the schools. Over the last three years, we've had [increases of] $3.6 million in the schools, $3 million in the schools and in the last year it was $1.5 million," DiBona said.

"Every year, we should probably have around $3 million [more] to be in the schools every year. That's how we're going to do it at the council level."

The five candidates were also asked how they would promote affordable housing in the city – housing for residents who earn less than 80 percent of the area's median income.

DiBona said he has regularly attended meetings and met with Planning Department officials on the issue and understands the need to add affordable housing as new development begins in the city.

"What am I going to do about this? Be a liaison. Be involved and I have been involved going to these different discussions, these different meetings," DiBona said. "Even though I'm on the School Committee I'm still out there in the city helping to better it, because I care about the city. That's why I'm running."

Finn voiced his support for a proposal by his colleague, Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci, which would require downtown redevelopers to comply with the city's affordable housing ordinance.

"Councillor Palmucci has filed that and I strongly encourage you to call your councillors and encourage them to support that as well," Finn said. "I think we really need to focus is to create the development of on site units with some of these projects because they will come more immediately online and be more available for people who can then finally afford to live and stay in the city."

Liang said the problem for residents is the ability to keep living in the city.

"The biggest problem isn't affordable housing for people coming into our city. The biggest problem is for residents that have been here a long time to be able to afford to stay in the city. That's the issue I would like to address as an at-large councillor," Liang said. "I want to work with the state and federal delegations to see what we can do to bring in other funding to our city so it doesn't keep coming out of our pockets."

McCarthy said he would be a proponent of affordable housing in the downtown and also said he was concerned about the condition of some Quincy Housing Authority buildings.

"There is some housing here in Quincy that really needs to get a good look at and a refurbish. I hate to say it, when I go out and visit it concerns me, some of the housing authority locations that we have," McCarthy said. "I'd be a big proponent of putting something that's affordable downtown and in good shape for people to live in."

McFarland said the Affordable Housing Trust has been able to construct new units in the city, such as housing for veterans; funds from that trust could be pooled with other resources to do more.

"We need to get with the housing authority, our state and federal representatives and try to leverage as much tax dollars from the federal and state [government] as we can to pool with city resources and also from the Affordable Housing Trust to produce more affordable units in the city of Quincy," McFarland said.

"DOVE advocates are in direct communication with police and have access to police reports flagged as domestic calls," Chandler continued. "Following police reported incidents, the advocate will contact the victims to determine their safety and to review available services.

Given the opportunity to serve as your Councilor at Large, I will get the results you deserve. Therefore, I ask for one of your three votes for Councilor at Large. On November 3rd, make your vote matter.

Quincy Claws Back But Panthers Strike Last

Late TD Gives Whitman-Hanson 36-30 Win Over Presidents

By BILL GRIFFIN

They deserved better.

Quincy trailed by 21 points just over a minute before halftime. The Presidents were down by 22 less than three minutes into the second half. The defense gave 28 points in the first 25 minutes of the game, a golden scoring chance died at the Whitman-Hanson six seconds before halftime, there were no holes to run and no creases to pass.

As a heavy rain washed over the stadium, it seemed surely lost and gone. However, the offensive line took back the game and tore open holes in the middle of the field. Jahvae Handsom-Fields flashed through open spades, busted tackles and brought Quincy back into the game. Mike Munroe and Dyreke Johnson forced turnovers and breathed life into the comeback.

Handsom-Fields scored on two TD rushes and two conversion runs to draw Quincy within 28-22. When Cody Desmond snuck home from the one and Handsom-Fields broke clean for his third conversion run of the half, Quincy was up, 30-28 with 2:40 left and on the threshold of what should have been a memorable comeback.

Should have been. In football, those are three huge words. Quarterback Nick Smith connected with Pete Amado on a 27-yard scoring strike with 1:18 left in the game to lift the Panthers past Quincy, 36-30 in a Patriot League Keenan Division thriller at Veterans' Stadium Friday night.

"When we didn't push it in right before the half, when they came right out and scored after halftime, a lot of teams would have packed it in. We didn't. The kids should be proud of that. That's what I told them after the game," said Quincy coach Billy Reardon.

The passing of Smith (11-16, 178 yards, three TDs) and the running of Nate Perkins (74 yards, two TD in the first half) lifted W-H (3-2) to leads of 21-0 in the second period and 28-6 early in the third period. Quincy's road back was not an easy one. There were no quick strikes, no long-gainers, no gift scores. It began up front, with blocking, with hard work.

The offensive line of center Declan Mayo, guards Munore and Isaiah Uzamere, tackles Bernie VanTassell and Jhonta Sousa and tight end Mike McNelly controlled the game. Munore was not only overpowering on blasts, he pulled and took out the outside backer to open up Quincy's sweep.

Time and again, they opened gaping holes which got Handsom-Fields untouched into the secondary. When Handsom-Fields only has to worry about linebackers and safeties, he is a scary back.

"Whitman used three different fronts in the first half," said Reardon. "When we had a chance to put the defenses on the board and explain them to the kids at the half, they picked up how to block them. The rest was effort.

"The first thing the Whitman staff talked about after

SENIOR RUNNING BACK Garrett Cronin breaks free from three Whitman-Hanson defenders before dashing down the sideline 43 yards for Quincy's first touchdown against the Panthers Friday night at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

North Quincy Football Bows To Middleboro

By BILL GRIFFIN

For nearly a half, North Quincy did all the things a team needs to do against an undefeated power like Middleboro.

The Red Raiders mixed a short passing game with solid running to move the ball and work down the clock. On defense, they swarmed to the ball, gang-tackled and controlled the Sachems' offense. Dara Griffin's punting kept Middleboro pinned in its own territory.

Late in the second quarter, North was within 7-0. However, Middleboro scored just before intermission and then ran the second-half kickoff back for a touchdown en route to a 41-7 Patriot League Fisher Division Division over the Red Raiders Saturday afternoon.

Middleboro went to 5-0 with the victory on its Homecoming Day which not only involves the whole school, but the entire town. North is 1-4.

"For a half, I was happy with the way we played," said NQ coach Mark Nutley. "We had some nice drives and on defense, we had players flying to the ball."

Derek Huynh, Conor Pound and Jake Grady led the defense with strong two-way games up front. Grady recovered a fumble early in the game to stop a Middleboro drive. Tom Whooley had a solid game at corner back.

"I thought in the first half, we got to the ball and gang-tackled better than we have all season," said Nutley.

Senior quarterback Joey Fallon threw well. He was 7-11 for 95 yards and, over his last two games, he is 11-15 for 228 yards. Senior tailback Aidan Brown, who has gained 664 yards since halftime of the season opener against Bedford, added 98 yards. Brown has gained 317 yards in his last two games.

Whooley had an excellent day catching the ball with four receptions for 55 yards.

North hurt itself with five turnovers.

"Whooley had good two-way game and I thought Joey threw the ball well," said Nutley. "We hurt ourselves with penalties and turnovers. We had some good drives, but mistakes stopped us."

After Middleboro took a 28-0 lead into the fourth quarter, North scored its touchdown after a sustained drive which featured a good combination of runs and passes. Fallon scored on a three-yard run and Griffin kicked the extra point. Griffin also had a punt of 75 yards in the first half which pinned Middleboro inside its five-yard line.

"That punt flipped field position and let us put them in a hole. I was hoping for a turnover down close, but we didn't get it," said Nutley.

North visits Plymouth South in another divisional meeting Friday night at 7 p.m. If the Red Raiders play as well against Plymouth as they did in the first half against Middleboro, they have a good chance.

"I'd love to have the team I had for the first half against Middleboro for an entire game," said Nutley. "If we can play like that for four quarters and cut down on the turnovers, we can be a good football team."

TAKING A SWING AT IT

While professional golfers generally experience more hand and wrist injuries, average golfers' flawed mechanics make their backs more susceptible to injury. The golf swing stresses the back in three ways: There is downward head-to-foot compression; lateral side-to-side bending; and a sliding, front-to-back shearing motion. According to a comparison of professional and amateur golfers' swings, the amateurs' swings put 80% more lateral and shear load on their spines than the professionals' more polished swings. Regardless of whether you are a professional or amateur golfer, the peak compressive load that your swing exerts on your lumbar spine is equivalent to eight times your body weight. All golfers have good reason to perfect their swings and have a chiropractor check their body mechanics.

the game was about how well Mike Munroe played."

Handsom-Fields (185 yards, 30 carries, two TDs of one and three yards, three two-point PATs) had his best game of the year. He had 135 yards after intermission and has 330 yards in his last two games. He showed off his sprinter's speed, but the theme of his night was he ran hard between the tackles, behind Uzamere, Munroe and Mayo. He broke tackles. He only had five runs over 10 yards. He didn't run around people. He ran through them.

"That was Jahvae's best game of the year. He ran hard and really carried us when we came back," said Reardon.

The pass rush led by Munroe, McNelly, Garrett Cronin, Tyrian Leonard, and Joshua Rodriguez stepped up the pressure on Smith. Uzamere, Cronin and Munroe stuffed the run. The defense made big plays. Munroe and Johnson recovered fumbles to set up Quincy in good field position. The comeback was rolling. It built momentum like a snowball sliding down a hillside, slowly at first, then faster and faster.

"The two turnovers kept it going. They set up the offense and we took advantage," said Reardon.

After the Presidents went up, 30-28, they came close twice to stopping the winning drive. They narrowly missed an acrobatic interception and Smith had to scramble for three yards on third for a first down. Smith put the winning pass right on Amado's hands. It could not be defended.

"We're playing a lot of young players, a lot of sophomores who are learning how to make plays to finish out a ball game," said Reardon. "Smith is a good player. He throws a good ball."

Quincy only scored once in the first half, but it was a beauty. With just over a minute left before intermission, Cronin swept left from the W-H 43. He broke two tackles at scrimmage, showed a good burst of speed and tight-roped down the sideline. Two Panthers' defenders bounced off him as he not only stayed upright, but also stayed in bounds.

"That was a great run," said Reardon.

On the first play after the kickoff, Jose Garcia intercepted a Smith pass at the Quincy 40 and made a fine open-field return to the W-H 24. A ten-yard sweep by Desmond brought it to the W-H 6. Desmond and Pat Bambrick barely missed connecting on a first-down pass, and W-H held on downs to preserve a 21-6 halftime lead.

Game notes --- Quincy (1-4) hosts Hingham Friday at 7 p.m. Quincy has lost three games by six points or less. Two weeks ago at Silver Lake, the Presidents lost in the final 53 seconds. Against W-H, they fell with 1:18 left. They are close to breaking out...After rushing for 285 yards against Silver Lake, Quincy rushed for 261 against W-H. Desmond had 32 yards on the ground while Cronin added 49... Desmond hit Bambrick on a 21-yard slant in the second half...For the second straight week, Quincy went without starting outside backers Sean Curran Cross and Domenic Coleman. Leonard and Uzamere also went out with injuries, but returned to play big roles in the comeback. "We have kids with a lot of heart," said Reardon... Desmond had a punt of 55 yards in the first half.

Four Things To Know About Concussions

By DR. JACK CORNWELL

CareWell Urgent Care

Fall sports are well underway at high schools across New England. Unfortunately, one of the most popular youth sports is also the most dangerous. Each fall, when students suit up and head out onto the field, they're exposing themselves to a multitude of potential injuries.

According to HealthResearchFunding.org, high school football players experience 2 million significant injuries every year, requiring 500,000 visits to the doctor and in 30,000 extreme cases, hospitalization. In fact, the source notes that football players are three times more likely to experience "catastrophic" injuries.

The most common and life threatening of those injuries are concussions. Research from the Datalys Center for Sports Injury Research and Prevention published in Journal of the American Medical Association Pediatrics, shows that 1 out of every 30 youth football players from ages 5 to 14 will experience at least one concussion over the course of a season.

While not every play puts your child's life on the line, it still pays to know how a concussion can affect a young athlete. Here are four ways you can help prevent and treat concussions:

1. Know the Warning Signs: It's important that parents and coaches know the signs of a concussion. Mild to moderate symptoms can include headaches, nausea, drowsiness and balance issues. Players who exhibit even just one of these signs should be evaluated immediately by a professional, such as a school trainer or an urgent care doctor. More severe symptoms like loss of consciousness, seizures, repeated vomiting or the intensification of a headache, require immediate emergency room attention.

2. Danger of Second Impact Events: Even the smallest concussion should be taken seriously. Resist the temptation to let your child rush immediately back into a game, even after a minor concussion. This is because players with a concussion are at increased risk for "second impact events." This occurs when someone sustains a second concussion soon after a first, and it significantly increases the risk of brain damage.

3. Sportsmanlike Tackling: It is critical that coaches teach and enforce proper tackling techniques during games and practices, like keeping your head up and aiming for the ball. Correct form when tackling can help reduce the possibility of a concussion occurring, but not necessarily prevent it.

4. Always Wear Protective Gear: It may seem like common sense, but the easiest way to prevent concussions is to ensure that players always wear protective gear – even during practices. Not only that, but take the time to make sure young athletes' gear is worn properly and fits correctly. It is of the utmost importance.

Above all, education is key. When it comes to concussions, it's imperative that everyone, from parents and coaches to children, know the warning signs of concussions, how to tackle safely and the importance of wearing protective gear. Every concussion, no matter how small, should be taken seriously. When in doubt, consult your doctor or local urgent care center.
